SENATE IN MIX-UP OVER FOUR-POWER TREATY AND ITS TWO SUPPLEMENTS

Program Tied in Knot When Opponents Insist That Yesterday's Vote Be Reconsidered So as to Include Interpretative Agreement in Ratification.

FRICTION BETWEEN U. S. AND JAPAN STRESSED

Claim Advanced That Unless Validity of Pact Is Clear, Japan Might Try to Refer Immigration Problem to Meeting of Powers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The four-Power Pacific treaty and its two supplements got into such a mix-up in the Senate today that the administration ratification program temporarily was tied in a knot and the leaders hurried into conference to draw up a new plan of campaign.

Challenging the validity of yesterday's action by which the four-Power pact itself was ratified, opponents of the treaty suggested that the vote be reconsidered so that the ratification could include the supplementary interpretative agreement, signed by the plenipotentiaries at the same time.

At first the administration leaders refused to recognize any merit in the suggestion, but after several conferences they decided that some further action was advisable. Most of them opposed the reconsideration plan, proposing instead a separate ratification vote on the supplement. Such a separate resolution of ratification was in process of drafting when the Senate adjourned over Sunday.

Throughout the day's debate the treaty opponents sought to give point to their arguments by emphasizing that the supplement deals with issues which long have been sources of friction between the United States and Japan. It declares it to be the understanding of the signatories that the treaty shall apply to mandated islands in the Pacific, and that purely domestic questions shall not be brought before the four-Power conference for "consideration and adjustment."

Immigration "Domestic" Question.

Many times in the debate the question of Japanese immigration into the United States was mentioned as a "domestic" American question which might be a fruitful source of trouble, Senators on both sdes agreeing that no doubt ought to be left that the American Government retains full power to deal with the subject as it sees fit. Those who asked for reconsideration contended that unless the validity of the supplement were established clearly, Japan might claim the privilege of referring the whole immigration problem of the Pacific Coast to a meeting of the Powers.

Meantime the business actually before the Senate was a second supplement to the four-Power pact, signed two months later than the first, and so defining the geographical scope of the pact as not to include the homeland of Japan. As soon as it was called up at the outset of the session Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, offered an amendment to exclude also the Island of Sakhalin, but neither the geographical supplement nor the proposed amendment to it was mentioned thereafter in the day's debate. Late in the day when debate on the domestic issues supplement had died down Senator Ransdell, Democrat, Louisiana, took the floor and occupied the remainder of the session with a speech supporting the naval treaty and advocating an efficient merchant marine.

Hitchcock Demands Action.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee, took the lead in demanding Senate action on the domestic issues supplement and in challenging the validity of the vote by which the Senate yesterday ratified the four-Power treaty.

The supplement, Senator Hitchcock contended, was either a proper part of the treaty and required Senate approval, or else it was not binding and left the problem of domestic

POLITICAL RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA SAID TO BE PLAN OF LLOYD GEORGE

LONDON, March 26.

POLITICAL recognition of Russia will be the main plank in the policy of Premier Lloyd George at the Genoa economic conference if a vote of confidence is given him by Parliament April 3, according to the News of the World, the newspaper of Lord Riddall, who was Liaison officer of the British delegation to the Washington armament conference.

The newspaper says the Premier also will urge a treaty between Russia and the Baltic states, Poland and Rumania.

TWO BOYS, 11 AND 12, ADMIT 21 ROBBERIES

They Were the "Crime Wave" That Kept Page District Detectives Busy.

Two school boys, 12 and 11 years old, confessed at the Page Boulevard Police Station yesterday afternoon that they were the "crime wave" responsible for 21 daylight burglaries since Feb. 18, that had kept the detectives of the district on the alert in anticipation of finding a gang of seasoned crooks.

The older boy, took full responsibility for all but eight of the robberies, in which about $100 in money and jewelry valued at about $900 had been stolen.

"The Kid," said he, referring to the other prisoner, Merrell Cordry, of 5252 Northland avenue, "helped me out in eight of the jobs."

The arrest of the boys followed a "tip" to the police that they were spending much money for candy.

The older boy said he got into a house on Garfield avenue when no one answered the door bell, through a basement window. He took $5 and bought a pair of skates. A thief stole them a few days later from his front porch. He got $15 in the second burglary and bought another pair of skates. Somebody stepped on them and broke them.

Whenever he found jewelry in a house he threw it away because he knew he couldn't sell it without being caught, the prisboner said. A bicycle was stolen at one house.

The most the boy ever got in a burglary was at the home of Mrs. Charles Russell, 1244 Goodfellow avenue, where he obtained a pair of diamond earrings valued at $175, a $75 diamond ring and a gold necklace valued at $40. He threw the ring and earrings away, he said, and took the necklace home. The police were unable to find the necklace when they searched his home last evening.

The older boy was sent to the House of Detention and the younger was turned over to his mother, who was instructed to produce him later in the Juvenile Court.

WASHINGTON TOWN HOLDS A "MARBLES" TOURNEY FOR BOYS

Frank Blizard, 10, Is Declared Champion of Yakima in Grammar School Contest.

By the Associated Press.

YAKIMA, Wash., March 25.—Frank Blizard, 10, today was declared the marbles champion of Yakima, at the close of a marbles tournament in which each grammar school in the city was represented by two contestants. Blizard and Eugene Neuve tied in the final and had to play three games before the supremacy was settled.

The games were played on the high school athletic field before several hundred cheering youngsters with whom Blizard, the smallest contestant, was easily the most popular. The winner received a silver cup.

An unidentified young woman died at the city hospital at 12:30 a. m. today, five minutes after bein gtaken there following an automobile accident at Chouteau and Jefferson avenues.

There was a 6-inch gash in her throat, apparently caused by glass from a broken windshield. An ambulance driver, who answered the call, found the woman in a Ford car.

He was told by bystanders that she had been in another car, but that the man who was driving it had left the scene. She had been placed in the Ford to be taken to the hospital.

PROHIBITION NAVY NOW IN ACTION ON FLORIDA COAST

Submarine Chasers Already at Work in Southern Waters and Others Cruise Farther North.

COAST GUARD OFFICER IN DIRECT COMMAND

Whole Fleet, However, Is Under Direction of C. C. Yellowley, of Dry Enforcement Bureau.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—First units of the new prohibition navy are in actual operation somewhere along the Atlantic coast, it was learned today on high official authority.

Officials continue to withhold plans for the sea attack on rum smugglers by the submarine chasers operated by the prohibition bureau, but it was declared that several vessels are now on duty in Florida waters and that others were cruising farther north.

Officials indicated that as rapidly as additional subchasers obtained from the coast guard can be put into commission they will slip out to sea under sealed orders to join in the proposed rum patrol along the Atlantic coast line.

Lieut. R. L. Jack, of the coast guard, the "admiral" of the prohibition fleet, is to have direct charge of the operation of his miniature warships, it was stated officially, but he will function under E. C. Yellowley of the general prohibition agents, who will bear somewhat the same relation to the prohibition navy that the chief of operations in the Navy Department does to the country's sea forces.

Commissioner Haynes, it was understood, was waiting until the new prohibition enforcement arm was in full swing before making any statement in order to avoid possibility of information reaching the ears of the liquor-laden enemy.

Two plans are being considered by the Treasury for extending the sphere of operation of the prohibition fleet beyond the three-mile limit. It is proposed, according to high officials, either to make the prohibition agents aboard the subchasers special customs agents or to assign regular customs agents aboard each of the prohibition ships. Secretary Mellon, it was thought, would probably favor the latter method and authorize the customs division to designate a man for duty aboard each of the rum chasers.

Without customs authority, officials explained, the prohibition fleet could not operate outside the three-mile limit. Customs agents, however, are empowered to board ships bound for this country as far as 12 miles at sea.

Summarizing reports of the activities of Col. L. G. Nutt and the special staff of Federal prohibition agents operating in Florida, Commissioner Haynes declared today that the results were "gratifying and in keeping with developments under similar circumstances throughout the country."

Haynes declared that the co-operation of state and local authorities was as satisfying as was confidently expected.

"Col. Nutt reports," Haynes said, "that local officials at West Palm Beach and Miami, assisted by railway officers, seized two refrigerator cars and confiscated several hundred cases of liquor, camouflaged with grapefruit, tomatoes and cabbage. The consignment was bound for Northern points. The fruits and vegetables were donated to hospitals. Nearly 500 cases of liquor, recently purchased at Nassau, were seized on the yacht Patricia, docked at Miami, and alleged to be under British registry. In connection with these seizures, one of the notorious houses which abound about Miami, was raided by Miami officials and owners placed under arrest.

Identity Not Revealed.

"This occurred before Col. Nutt and his corps of trained investigators revealed their identity and was accepted by him as a good omen later justified by hearty co-operation on the part of Federal, State and municipal officials in Miami.

"However, events militated against plans and marred developments. In one instance, after smuggling operators had placed $3500 in the hands of a bank official 'in trust,' they seemingly became alarmed, 'backed out' and the agreement which the bank offical had drawn up and signed was withdrawn. In another instance a deal with a smuggling

U. S. MAKES BLUNT DEMAND FOR COSTS OF ARMY ON RHINE

Government Notifies Allied Powers That "Juggling of Bookkeeping" Will Not Defer Claim.

NOTE CALLED "PLAIN IF NOT DIPLOMATIC"

Insistence on Equality on Part of United States Will Not Be Affected by French Deficit, It Is Said.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The American Government has sent to the allied Powers another note supplemental to that recently dispatched and designed to support its claim for equality with those Powers in the payment of costs arising from the Rhineland occupation.

The new note, copies of which were presented today to the British, French, Italian, Belgian and Japanese Governments by American diplomatic officials in the capitals of those nations, declared that whether or not there should be a deficit in the French account for its occupation army costs as of May 1, 1921, the claim for equality on the part of the United States would not thereby be affected.

Supplemental Note Plain.

The American Government, in its supplemental note, in words characterized by one official as plain if not diplomatic, notifies the allied Governments that no juggling of bookkeeping as regards the Rhineland occupation costs will deter the United States from pressing what it considers a just claim.

High State Department officials, in making public the new note, explained that the original identical notes delivered to the five allied Powers early this week stated that, according to information and accounts in possession of the American Government, it appeared that the amount due to France for its occupation army costs to May 1 had been paid in full, as had costs of the armies of Belgium and Italy.

Recent dispatches from France, it was said, had intimated that the American Government made a mistake in saying that France had been paid in full and the supplemental note delivered today was designed to forestall any such suggestions.

The text of the supplementary note follows:

"In its note of March 22, 1922, the Government of the United States stated that according to the information and accounts in the possession of the Allied Governments, it appeared that the amount due to France for its army costs to May 1, 1921, had been paid in full, chiefly through deliveries of property.

Speaks of Postponement.

"The Government of the United States is now informed that it is proposed to postpone the debit to France for the value of the Saar mines as though delivery were made in kind during the year 1922. This Government does not deem it to be necessary at this time to enter into questions relating to debts or credits in the account or to consider the affect of the postponement of the debit for the value of the Saar mines and all questions of this character are fully reserved. It is deemed to be sufficient to say that it is the view of the Government of the United States that the question whether or not there would be a deficit in the French account for army costs as of May 1, 1921, upon a final agreed statement of that account, is a matter which does affect the position of this nation, without respect to its right to receive the payment of the actual costs of its army of occupation upon an equal footing with the allied Powers."

NOTE IN BOTTLE IN SEA INDICATES U-BOAT MAY HAVE SUNK CYCLOPS

By the Associated Press.

BEAUFORT, N. C., March 25.

A BOTTLE containing a note purporting to be signed by an engineer aboard the navy collier Cyclops, which disappeared at sea in 1917, was picked up today northeast of Cape Lookout lighthouse. The note stated that a German submarine was close by, that all hands had been ordered on board the U-boat and that the ship was then to be torpedoed. The note was smirched with grease and the bottle was stopped with a rubber stopper and was covered with sea bran.

The Cyclops was bound from a Chilean port for the United States with a cargo of nitrates when she disappeared. An extensive search was conducted for her, but no trace ever was found. It was generally believed that she went down suddenly off the Atlantic coast in a heavy squall or storm, although no nearby ports reported any disturbance at the time and no wireless message was received from the vessel indicating any trouble.

TREES FROM GRANT FARM TO BE PLANTED AT GENERAL'S TOMB

Two Elms to Be Taken From Place Where Former President Lived Near St. Louis.

Two American elms will be dug up this week on the Grant farm, which is on the Gravois road in St. Louis County, and will be shipped to New York, there to be ceremoniously replanted near former President Grant's tomb on Riverside Drive on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, April 27.

The request for the two trees was made of August A. Busch, who now owns the farm, through the American Forestry Association at Washington.

A study of which trees on the farm would be most hardy in New York, which could be most readily transplanted, and which would most closely fit into the surroundings of the tomb was made. Cypress, ash and elm were found to be suited and American elms were chosen.

The trees will be about three and one-half inches in diameter and from 15 to 20 feet high.

Ulysses S. Grant resided at the farm from 1853 to 1860 in a log cabin, which still stands.

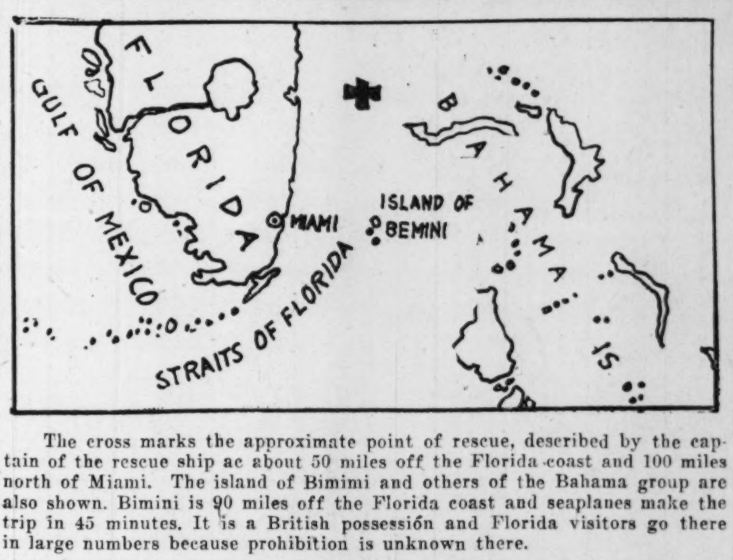
THRILLING STORY OF FLYING BOAT TRAGEDY TOLD BY RESCUED PILOT

Map Showing Approximately Where Wrecked Seaplane Pilot Was Picked Up



The cross marks the approximate point of rescue, described by the captain of the rescue ship ac about 50 miles off the Florida coast and 100 miles north of Miami. The island of Bimimi and others of the Bahama group are also shown. Bimini is 90 miles off the Florida coast and seaplanes make the trip in 45 minutes. It is a British possession and Florida visitors go there in large numbers because prohibition is unknown there.

Details of Tragedy as Gathered From Lone Survivor in Lucid Intervals of His Delirium

Pitiful Wreck of a Brave Man Is Robert Moore, Almost Crazed by His Harrowing Experiences While Trying to Save His Passengers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—Through the swollen lips of a lone, delirious survivor, there dribbled today the fateful story of the flying boat, Miss Miami, and the five passengers who laughingly boarded her Wednesday for a holiday voyage. The narrative came in fragments from a man who alternately babbled piteously, and entreated a strange woman whom he called "Mother," not to leave him.

This afflicting wreck of a brave man was Robert Moore, pilot of the craft, and his condition was the result of two days and nights in the sea, clinging to the wreckage of his boat, during which period three women died in his arms, and two men were swept away and to death by the thrashing waves.

Almost Crazed by Experience.

The sympathetic stranger was Mrs. J. Stewart Williams, a passenger on the tanker William Greene, which rescued Moore early this morning. With his courage and his senses literally battered out by the heavy seas, the pilot conceived the woman who sympathetically bathed his distorted face, as his mother, and refused to be transferred to the sub chaser which had been sent out to take him off, unless the woman went with him. She remained on the tanker, but another woman took her place. Moore did not distinguish the change.

With three women and two men—Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith, all of Kansas City, and Mrs. J. E. Dickson, of Memphis—the Miss Miami took off Wednesday for Bimini. Forced down 15 miles from their destination by a broken propeller, they were not seriously alarmed until night came on without a ship having sighted them.

But the wind came up, and the seas began to wash over the craft. The men worked the pumps, and the women clung together, praying for morning and succor. As Thursday dawned, however, it brought disaster. An unexplained obstruction opened a leak in one of the pontoons, and the boat began filling. The women were now frantic with terror.

Smith became exhausted from pumping. Bulte, an older man, was tiring. They could not keep pace with the leak. It was not until the crippled craft capsized. Smith and Bulte each hedl their wives, Moore taking Mrs. Dickson, and the three men managed to drag the three women on top of the wreckage. But the exposure had been too much. After fainting seven times, and being revived with increasing dificulty each time, Mrs. Dickson expired in the pilot's arms, and he alowed her body to float away in the trough of the sea.

Mrs. Bulte was also suffering heavily. Moore climbed over to the Bultes, and endeavored to help her. Before long, however, she succumbed, and her body went the way of Mrs. Dickson's. The Smiths had been terribly depressed by these successive tragedies. Mrs. Smith became virtualy unconscious, and died, in turn, in Moore's arms. As her despairing husband saw the lifeless form of his wife washed away, he let go, and followed her to the wet grave. Bulte and Moore were left.

That was on Friday morning. The two men hung on desperately. Hours passed. Whether ships passed obliviously by, is uncertain. The raving pilot says that nine vessels came within sight, one so close that he could read her name. He waved a pocket handkerchief, he says, but suffered the bitter despair of seeing her steam on, and out of vision.

Bulte's hour came. He had been praying for help. He realized that he could endure no longer. Handing Moore a roll of currency containing, according to rumor, $2000, he whispered hoarsely: "You're a young man—maybe you can come through. I can't—God help you—good-by!" His numbed fingers relaxed; he was gone.

Five were dead; the strength of the rugged young pilot was ebbing fast now. He doubted that help would come. He couldn't last very long. It had been ages and ages since that propeller splintered. Wednesday, it had been. This was Friday evening. Dusk was coming on. Doubtless he had looked upon his last sun. But he would fight it out. As well make a grim end. With a piece of rope he lashed his neck to a piece of the wreckage. That would hold his head above the water if he became unconscious. It might strangle him, too, but there was no help for that. Darkness was falling—or was it delirium?

Story of the Rescue.

Here the story is taken up by Capt. Wachsmuth of the tanker: "I was about 41 miles off East India Inlet, at 6:30 o'clock, when I sighted, a mile to port, what appeared to be a man lashed to a spar. He was waving his arms feebly. A boat was lauched, and we managed to get him aboard. He was totally exhausted. As the seamen cut him away from the spar he mumbled: 'I'm sorry to put you fellows to so much trouble.' Then he swooned.

Aboard the ship, aid was quickly administered. The pilot's body was blistered from head to foot. His lips were so puffed from the salt water that he could not move them, and his eyes were closed. It seemed that he was blinded, but he was able to see after Mrs. William had tenderly bathed his face with a soothing lotion.

He awoke from stupor, but not to lucidness. Through the night and into the morning he recounted the horrors of the nightmare, and clutched at Mrs. Williams' hands, and begged her to stay near him. He was beaten, broken, crushed to a moral pulp. Anon he told of how the women had died against his

Pontoon Sprang Leak Next Morning and Soon Turned Turtle — Men Dragged Women to Top of Boat, but They Died One by One

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.Pilot Robert Moore of the ill-fated flying boat, Miss Miami, recovered sufficiently in a hospital late tonight to describe with some coherence his experience. He said that the flying boat alighted on the water so close to a fishing vesel that he could read its name and he added that he knew the captain. The fishing vesel, however, he declared, failed to heed his signals for assistance and continued on its course.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—Nursed by a woman who he believes in his delirium to be his mother, Robert Moore, pilot and only survivor of the six persons who left here for Bimini last Wednesday in the ill-fated flyingboat Miss Miami lay in a hospital tonight more dead than alive.

A submarine chaser took Moore off the tanker, William Green, early today as she passed here bound for Tampico. Picked up by the tanker late yesterday more than 40 miles off shore as he clung to the wreckage of his flyingboat, Moore was tenderly cared for all during last night by Mrs. J. Williams, wife of an official of the Pan-American Petroleum Corporation, who was a passenger on the ship. This morning when the relief boat pulled alongside the big ship Moore refused to go without her.

Tragic Story by Piecemeal.

Piece by piece during the night and day, Moore has revealed the tragic story of his experiences as he clung for two days and two nights to the wreckage of the lost flyingboat.

No trace had been found tonight of the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith, all of Kansas City, and Mrs. J. S. Dickson of Memphis, Tenn., who one by one gave up their lives as the struggle became too much for them.

Moore's statements while aboard the tanker were retold today by Capt. Charles A. Wachsmuth.

"I was about 41 miles off the East Indian Inlet," said Captain Wachsmuth, "when just about dusk I sighted what appeared to be a human figure feebly waving his arms, a mile off the starboard bow. We drew close until we could discern a man, who appeared to be lashed to a spar. We hove to, launched a boat and rowed out to the rescue. A heavy sea was running and it was no easy task, but after considerable difficulty we managed to get him aboard. He was lashed with a piece of rope about his neck and another piece about his waist, and was totally exhausted.

Soon Became Unconscious.

"As we cut him loose, he murmured, 'I'm sorry to put you fellows to so much trouble.' Then he became unconscious.

"We found that he had attached himself in some manner to an overturned flying boat. The exact location in which he was picked up was latitude 27:38 north, longitude 79.33 west. The time was 6:30 p. m.

"We undressed him and placed

TREATY APPROVAL PLEASES LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES

Republicans Happy That They Have Put Through First Big Pact of World-Wide Import.

DEMOCRATS ALSO SECRETLY JOYFUL

Minority Finds Its Consolation in Commitment of Majority to International Co-operation.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Ratification of the four-Power treaty abolishing the Anglo-Japanese alliance on the one hand and formally placing the United States in the Pacific league of nations has given decided impetus to the growing movement for more international co-operation instead of national isolation.

The group in the American Senate which has insisted that the United States could get along without political involvment with other nations was found to be less than one-third, so that President Harding now can count upon a two-thirds vote in any proposals he may make for closer relations with other nations.

Vote Big Precedent.

The four-Power treaty vote is a big precedent. Democrats and Republicans who voted for it cannot consistently change their positions when Mr. Harding, for example, proposes that the United States become a member of the Reparations Commission to safeguard American rights in Europe. The vote in favor of American co-operation in questions arising 7000 miles away from one coast line is considered ample justification for a similar vote in favor of co-operation in maintaining American rights 3000 miles from the other coast line.

Friends of the League of Nations plainly are happy over the result. They see the Harding administration going through a process of evolution on foreign policy which will lead to bigger and broader international action. While it is true, for instance, that the United States found fault with the program of the Genoa economic and financial conference, declaring that some of the items in it were political instead of economic, the fact is the American Government didn't want to go to Genoa until it had demonstrated to the world that the treaties negotiated at the Washington arms conference could be ratified.

Senate Resistance in Mind.

Another exhibition of Senate resistance to a treaty signed by an American Chief Executive was feared, and administration officials used almost the same language in referring to such a possible consequence as did Woodrow Wilson after he came back from Paris. There are Republicans and Democrats today who somehow feel that America has vindicated herself before the world in standing by a contract made by the constitutional executive.

To that extent they admit that the Senate performance after the Versailles treaty while technically constitutional and perhaps thoroughly understood in America, was morally embarrassing to American influence and is still the subject of much ill-feeling in Europe where the alliance made on Apri 7, 1917, between the United States and the allied powers was welcomed as a departure from American traditional policy of no alliances with Europe.

Although the Senate has adopted a reservation proposed by Senator Brandegee stating that the four-power pact is not an alliance and does not commit the United States to armed force, there are few Democrats who believe the League of Nations was a commitment to armed action. They think it was just as flexible and gave much freedom of action as the four-power pact. Indeed, Democratic support of the four-power treaty was based largely on the argument that the four-power treaty was not inconsistent with the League of Nations covenant and that article two of the Pacific treaty is hardly different in essential particulars from article ten of the covenant.

Leaders on Both Sides Happy.

So the Republicans are happy that they have put through the first big treaty of world-wide import and the Democrats are secretly joyful that the Republicans have become committed to international co-operation as definitely as the phraseology of the four-power treaty indicates.

Wilson Attitude Recalled.

To the impartial observer the record of the United States Senate on the four-Power treaty is hardly different from the votes on the Versailles treaty. In the case of the latter pact there always was a two-thirds vote ready to ratify the Versailles treaty with reservations. Republicans blame the Wilson leadership which was uncompromisingly against the Lodge reservations on the ground that they nullified the pact. President Harding has felt that the Brandegee reservation was unnecessary, that he submitted to the judgment of the party leaders who insisted that without the reservation the four-Power pact was lost.

It is a matter of history that practically all the Democratic leaders urged Mr. Wilson to take the Lodge reservations and secure American membership in the League of Nations. Mr. Wilson believed the election of 1920 would decide the issue in his favor, but unfortunately the contest was encumbered by many other domestic questions and political experts still differ as to whether the vote was definitive of anything but a desire for a change in administration.

The Harding administration stands today encouraged by the action of the Senate. More international co-operation is inevitable and judging by significant statements made here and there in official quarters the United States will from now on assert itself affirmatively in world affairs.

Statue of Victory Which State Will Erect in France

THE Missouri Memorial Commission yesterday approved of the scale model of the figure Victory, which, when duplicated in bronze will be erected in the Military Cemetery in the Argonne in France in memory of Missouri soldiers. The monument was designed by Mrs. Nancy Coonsman Hahn, sculptress, who will depart next Saturday for Paris to superintend the mechanical process of copying her model.

The model was made of wax, after the fashion of the preliminary design with which Mrs. Hahn won the contest for the design to be used. Yesterday afternoon the scale model was taken to a caster's and sawed into three sections, to be put in plaster for shipping. It was four feet high; the bronze figure will be twice that size, and will stand on a 10½-foot granite base. The whole will cost $25,000.

Mrs. Hahn and her husband, Emanuel Hahn, who live at 6171 Delmar boulevard, will sail for Naples, Italy, on the steamer Giuseppe Verdi and then go to Paris, where they will remain from six to 12 months. Four of the seven members of the Memorial Commission, headed by Norman Comfort of St. Louis, chairman, met at the Hahn residence yesterday and examined the model.

A contest for a suitable inscription for the memorial is under way and entries may be made to the commission at Jefferson City.

issues in a "dangerous" situation. He recalled that before yesterday's vote he tried without success to get the supplement included in the ratification resolution.

These arguments were supported by Senators Pittman, Democrat, Nevada; Swanson, Democrat, Virginia; Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, and others, Swanson declaring that to reconsider the treaty vote and include action on the supplement "is the only way this Government can get a guarantee that the immigration question is not to be within the scope of this treaty." Several times they raised again the question of why the supplement signed at the same time as the treaty was not included in the body of the treaty itself.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the Republican leader and an arms conference delegate, maintained that the declaratory supplement was not in fact a part of the treaty, and did not require Senate approval. He described it as merely an interpretation of the treaty by the signatory Governments and asserted that even if it did not exist, domestic questions never could be brought within the scope of the four-Power arrangement.

Republicans Back Up Lodge.

Several Republicans, including Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, backed up the position of Senator Lodge, but for the most part the treaty supporters made no attempt to reply in detail to the arguments of Senator Hitchcock and his associates. For a time late in the day, with the Democratc attack at its height, Lodge sat alone in the midst of rows of empty seats, the only Senator on the Republican side at work on the new ratification resolution, he said he would offer as soon as the geographical supplement had been ratified.

"Doesn't that situation over there remind you of the boy who stood on the burning deck 'whence all but he had fled?'" asked Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas.

"Yes," replied Senator Stanley, Democrat, Kentucky, "and I don't know which is in a worse fix, the deck or the boy."

LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID ON ROOM AT ANDERSON LAUNDRY

Gualdoni Says He Will Ask for Warrant for William D. Anderson Who Occupied Room.

RELATIVE MAINTAINS PLACE IS HIS HOME

Widow of Founder of Business Says Liquor Was Purchased Before Prohibition Went Into Effect.

Prohibition Enforcement Agent Gualdoni, assisted by Detective Sergeant Roach and a squad of detectives, yesterday afternoon raided a room in the basement of the J. Arthur Anderson Laundry, 3970 Olive street, and confiscated 16 pint bottles of creme de rose, a bottle of Mobottle of creme de menthe, two bottles of creme d ros, a bottl of Moselle wine and a small quantity of liquor. They had a search warrant.

Arthur Donald Anderson, 19 years old, protested against the raid, stating that the room had been set aside for William M. Anderson, 65 years old, his uncle, brother of the late J. Arthur Anderson, founder of the laundry. Gualdoni said he would apply for a warrant for William M. Anderson, charging possession of liquor in a place other than his home. The maximum penalty under this charge is a fine of $1000.

Mrs. J. Arthur Anderson last night told a Post-Dispatch reporter that William M. Anderson made the room that was raided his home and that the beer and liquors belonged to him. She said no one else had access to the room and that her brother-in-law had a bill of sale showing that he purchased the ale and liquors before the prohibition law went into effect.

The city directory gives the address of William M. Anderson as 3970 Olive street.

Gus O. Nations, Chief Federal Prohibition Enforcement Agent, said Gualdoni swore to the information upon which the search warrant was issued. He added that it made no difference whether the room was Anderson's home or not, since the law, he said, forbade illegal possession of liquor. In case a warrant is issued for Anderson, Nations added, he would have to prove that he came in possession of the liquor before the prohibition law went into effect.

UNUSUAL HOLDUP STORY OF GIRL, 19, INVESTIGATED

New York Detectives Take Her Over Route Where She Says Veiled Woman Took $237 From Her.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Detectives today took Miss Catherine Burns, 19, over the scene where, according to her story, a "mysterious veiled woman" yesterday pressed "something hard and heavy" against her back, marched her around a corner, and there robbed her of $237 which she was taking from a bank to her employers.

While she was threading the stream of traffic in Fulton street, the girl related, she felt the menacing thrust of an object in her back and a feminine command, "walk around the corner and don't scream," issued from behind the impenetrable veil.

Because her employers had warned her not to risk her life by resisting in case she ever was held up, Miss Burns said she quietly obeyed the command. When they reached the comparative seclusion of a side street she handed over the money, she said.

The girl did not know whether she was struck or fainted, but the next she remembered, she said, was when a well-dressed woman appeared before her and asked "What's the matter?"

Asked why she did not immediately notify the police of the hold-up, Miss Burns told the detectives she was so upset her only thought was to inform her employers of their loss. The police said the girl bore no marks indicating she had been struck.

WASHINGTON U. TO START WORK ON $250,000 BUILDING

Construction of School of Law, Held Back for Two Years by High Costs, Will Be Begun This Week.

CARPENTERS TO TAKE UP WAGES TUESDAY

Contractors and Workers Likely to Confer This Week, Former Being Willing to Grant $1 an Hour.

Construction of the School of Law building at Washington University, the money for which was donated by Miss Isabelle Valle January as a memorial to her mother, will be started this week. The building will cost about $250,000, and would have been started tomorrow but for certain changes in the plans which contemplate marked improvement.

This is one of the buildings mentioned in Director of Public Welfare Cunliff's survey as being held back by high costs of labor and building materials. Ground recently was broken for one other building in this list, St. Mary's Infirmary, which will cost approximately $1,000,000.

The new law school building is to occupy the site at the south of the library building and will complete the quadrangle at that point. At the north end a building is to be erected for the School of Commerce and Finance, a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Duncker, as a memorial to their son, who was killed in action in France. It is not known when work on this structure will be started.

High Costs Hold Back Work.

James P. Jamieson, architect of the School of Law building, said work on that structure had been held back for two years on account of high costs, but that a substantial drop in material prices, together with some reductions by organized labor had enabled the university to start the building, with the expectation of keeping the price within $250,000.

"We are now in a falling market," Jamieson said, "and were it not that material prices are down and that the wages of some trades have been reduced, with other trades inclined to make concessions, it would not have been advisable to start this building."

As has been told, seven unions of the building trades have reduced wages from the basic scale of $1.25 an hour. The number of workmen affected is about 6000, or 50 per cent of the membership of the building trades unions.

The unions which have thus far declined to accept wage reductions are the carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers, plasterers, electricians, hoisting engineers and their affiliated organizations.

The carpenters have no contract with the builders, and the Master Builders' Association, as has been told, has announced that carpenters, who now receive $1.25 an hour, will be paid 95 cents an hour beginning April 1.

This announcement has led to discussions that are likely to result in wage conferences this week of representatives of the Carpenters' District Council and the general contractors.

Willing to Pay $1 an Hour.

The contractors are willing to make a contract with the carpenters at a wage of $1 an hour, provided the carpenters agree without further delay to relinquish the prevailing scale.

J. Lee Fritz, secretary of the Carpenters' District Council, said his organization would be reasonable in considering any proper readjustment of wages and probably would agree to open conferences at once on this subject.

The contractors wish to avoid an arbitrary reduction in wages of carpenters, as announced for April 1, as a chaotic condition may be created by such action. But they say they are determined to enforce it unless an agreement by conference is reached before that date. The union is receptive to the conference idea, and efforts are being made to get both sides together this week.

The Carpenters' District Council will meet Tuesday night, when the announcement of a cut in wages for April 1 will be discussed.

Rescued Pilot Tells of Flying Boat Tragedy

him in my cabin where he was cared for through the night by Mrs. J. Williams, a passenger.

"We found that his entire body was blistered and burnt, and that his lips were so badly swollen he could not open his mouth. His eyes from the salt water and blazing sun were in such condition that at first we thought he was blinded, but after Mrs. Williams had bathed his face he seemed to recover somewhat, though he appeared to be entirely out of his mind.

"On his person we found three one dollar bills in which he had torn holes in his delirium, a pair of glasses which had been smashed and a woman's vanity case."

Thought Nurse His Mother.

Mrs. Williams, who reluctantly relinquished him to the physicians aboard the submarine chaser, said that Moore had been in constant delirium through the night and was under the impression that she was his mother. He told her practically the whole story of his experiences during the 56 hours he had been adrift in the gulf stream.

It developed that the Miss Miami had broken her propeller when about 15 miles from Bimini and that she had descended in the gulf stream during a gale. All through that night and next day the flying boat drifted helplessly northwards, becoming swamped after being in the water a few hours. An effort was made to pump the water out of the cockpit, but the seas were running so high that the cockpit was filled each time a wave washed over the fragile craft.

On Thursday morning, as related by Moore to Mrs. Williams, the pontoon of the boat sprung a leak and soon afterward turned turtle. The three men—Moore, Bulte and Smith—managed to drag the exhausted women to the top of the boat where Moore endeavored to hold them. One by one, however, the women died in his arms and slipped into the sea, the fury of which seemed to increase with each passing hour.

Mrs. Dickson Died First.

First Mrs. J. S. Dickson of Memphis died and fell into the ocean. Then Mrs. Bulte gave up the struggle and finally Mrs. Smith also succumbed. Both of the other men by this time were completely demented and, losing their holds on the precarious craft, slipped into the ocean. When night came on, Moore alone remained on the boat.

"In some manner," said Mrs. Williams, "Moore said he managed to obtain a piece of rope, fastening one end around his waist and the other to the plane. This alone saved him from being washed into the ocean with the other five members of the party. On Friday morning the pilot, having been two days without food and water, was almost at the end of his resources.

During his delirium he told me that nine ships had passed him while he was in the water, one of them being so close that he could read the name. Though he waved frantically, no one apparently saw him, and the boats passed out of sight, leaving him to his fate.

Threw Money Away.

"Just before one of the men went to his death he handed Moore a large sum of money, asking him to save it, but Moore threw it into the ocean. When he was rescued all he had on him was three dollars."

Mrs. Williams was the only person on the boat the half-demented man would allow to touch him, and it was not until she promised to go with him that he allowed himself to be removed from the tanker to the submarine chaser. He was under the impression that she was his mother and he told her of his heroic efforts to save the three dying women under the strictest admonition that she would not say anything about it to anyone else.

"He kept telling me that he had done his utmost to save the women," said Mrs. Williams, "and that he had held them above the water until they died in his arms."

The decision to bring Moore back to Miami was reached early today after word had been received from the captain of the William Green by wireless than the tanker had picked up the lone survivor. The submarine chaser 154 had been held in readiness for an emergency and she left the municipal pier at 5:45 o'clock holding out to sea in search of the tanker, which it was estimated would be somewhere off Miami about 7 o'clock.

Transfer Difficult Task.

A heavy sea was still running and the small boat was at times completely submerged by the waves. Everyone aboard was seasick, including the two physicians who were going out to give first aid. In fact so sick did the physicians become that when the tanker was finally located about 24 miles north of Miami and 12 miles out in the gulf stream, they were almost as badly in need of attention as the injured pilot.

The task of transferring the sick man from the tanker to the submarine chaser in a heavy sea with half a gale blowing presented difficulties, but after half an hour's work the little chaser was finally navigated into the lee of the tanker and made fast. Before this could be done, however, the chaser was badly smashed and will have to undergo considerable repairs before it can be put to sea again.

Capt. Thomas James, in charge of the submarine chaser 154, said the task was the most difficult he had ever been called upon to accomplish and under ordinary circumstances he would have launched a small boat and made the transfer in that way. The case was so urgent, however, that he decided to take a chance and by expert seamanship managed to bring his boat alongside after three attempts.

Moore in Great Pain.

Mrs. Williams sat by the sick man's bedside moistening his lips with a sponge and he refused to allow the men to lift him onto the improvised stretcher until Mrs. Williams, whom he called "mother," told him it would be all right and that she would not leave him. He was in such pain that with every movement he flinched and moaned. The submarine chaser tossed about like a cork and the greatest care was necessary in order that the stretcher should not be pitched into the sea. Capt. Wachsmuth superintended the transfer, while Mrs. Williams looked on with tears streaming down her face.

Physicians stated that after an examination of Moore, that although he was in a serious condition due to exposure and lack of nourishment he probably would be in a fair way towards recovery in a few days.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN LOST FROM AIRCRAFT AT SEA

AUGUST J. BULTE.

Disaster Cited as Illustrating Need for Radio Equipment Law.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The wrecking of the commercial seaplane Miss Miami off the Florida coast with the loss of the five passengers was said tonight by Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the Naval Air Service, to support the contention of army and navy air service officials that every airplane should be required by law to be equipped with radio communication instruments.

The Miss Miami disaster, Admiral Moffett said, was "additional proof, if any were needed, of the urgent need of the passage of the bill now before Congress creating a bureau of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce for the regulation of commercial aviation."

"Until such a law is passed," the Admiral added, "there is no way of requiring the use of radio in passenger-carrying planes, for licensing of planes and pilots, and in general of safeguarding life in the air."

Bulte Formerly Lived in St. Louis and Has Three Sisters Here.

August J. Bulte of Kansas City, who was lost with his wife in the seaplane disaster off the Florida coast, was born in St. Louis and educated at St. Louis University. He was 59 years old and was in the milling business here until 20 years ago, when he went to Kansas City to become vice president and general manager of a milling company.

Three sisters live in St. Louis—Mrs. Joseph Gummersbach, 3840 Westminster place; Mrs. Victor Albrecht, 3224 Lafayette avenue, and Mrs. Frances Eberle, 4300 Virginia avenue. A fourth sister resides at Springfield, Mo.

Mrs. Bulte was Mrs. H. S. Raymond of Cherryvale, Kan. They were married in January, 1921, and lived at the Brookside Hotel in Kansas City.

L. P. Aloe and Wife Made Trip on Twin Flying Boat of Miss Miami.

Louis P. Aloe, President of the Board of Aldermen, and Mrs. Aloe, made the voyage from Havana to Key West two weeks ago yesterday in the Balboa, twin flying boat of the Miss Miami and operated by the same company.

Aloe said he made inquiry before embarking and was informed that none of the company's ships, including several of the Miss Miami type, had had any serious accidents. The carrying capacity of the Miss Miami type of ship is 11 passengers, besides a pilot and helper, and 25 pounds baggage allowance for each passenger.

The Balboa flew from Havana to Key West, 109 miles, in one and one-quarter hours, which is six and three-quarters hours faster than steamship time. The ship flies about 25 feet above the water, except when approaching land, when it ascends to clear bridges and structures, he said, and the vibration from the motors is less than that of a Pullman coach.

Theory of Aviators as to Failure to Sight Wrecked Flying Boat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—Belief on the part of local aviators that the wind was stronger than the current of the Gulf stream prevented the rescue of Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith of Kansas City and Mrs. J. S. Dickson of Memphis, who went down to their death in the Atlantic on Thursday after the seaplane Miss Miami, on which they had taken passage for Bimini, an island in the Bahamai group, some 36 hours earlier.

Pilots of searching planes for the missing air boat confined attention to searching the Florida coast and the many keys nearby and in scouting over the nearer islands of the Bahamas, but did not go farther north than Palm Beach, about 50 miles.

The disabled plane drifted over 110 miles to the north before it was sighted by the tanker William Green just as the sun was sinking Friday evening, 50 hours after it left here at 11:30 Wednesday morning with its tourist passengers.

In his delirium, Robert Moore, pilot of the wrecked plane and the sole survivor, said that the propeller was broken soon after leaving Miami on the fatal flight, and that the plane was forced down in the gulf stream, which at this point comes within five miles of the shore.

By the time it was learned the plane had not reached Bimini, it had floated far outside the radius of the search as conducted by the aviators who flew in a dozen machines over the nearby waters and keys throughout all the daylight hours of Thursday and Friday.

Relatives of Kansas City Victims on Way to Miami.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTONA, Fla., March 25.—Relatives of the Kansas City passengers who were lost in the airboat tragedy off Miami passed through here today on their way to join in the search for the missing. As one of the men alighted from the train to obtain the latest word he was met by a newsboy loudly proclaiming: "All lost in Miss Miami wreck."

PILOT'S STORY OF DISASTER AS TOLD IN LUCID INTERVALS

breast, and moaned: "I did my best; I tried to save them; the sea was too high." Again disordered memories of his career as a racing automobile driver came upon him, and he begged: "Mother, I gave up racing for you—please let me keep my plane. And don't leave me, mother—please dont' leave me—the seas are so high—I can't hold on much longer."

"Couldn't Keep Them Alive."

When the ship officers entered to inquire about his condition, he covered his face, and clung desperately to the hand of his nurse. Once when water was offered, he pushed it aside, saying: "Give it to the women; I'm not thirsty," a delusion probably illuminating his experience. Yet again, he groaned: "I held them as long as I could, mother; but they died; I couldn't keep them alive." But even then, lucid moments came, and in them he told, with his pitiful lips, the pieces of the story.

When the sub chaser hove to, to take him off, he cried hoarsely that he would not leave "his mother." Mrs. Williams assured him that she was going with him. As the cot was passed over to the chaser's deck, another woman took her place at his side; the pathetic sufferer did not discern the substitution. In the hospital the task of soothing his tattered nerves was taken up by a nurse, but to him she was the same—"Mother."

Physicians said tonight that he was in a serious condition, but probably would recover if no complications arose. The nurse kept close vigil at his fitful pillow. Nobody else will be allowed near him for a few days, save hospital attendants.

SEVEN OF SCOUT TROOP ON OUTING DROWNED

Boat Capsizes on Lake in Michigan; Executives, Two Masters and Four Boys in Party.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 25.—Seven persons, four Boy Scouts, a Scout executive and two Scout masters, were drowned this afternoon in Magician Lake, about ten miles northwest of Dowagiac, Mich., when a steel motorboat which they occupied foundered in the rough waters of the lake. The persons drowned, all of whom are residents of this city, are:

Joseph Taylor, Scout executive.
James Taylor, 10-year-old son of Joseph Taylor.
Vernon C. Murphy, Scout master.
Judson Taylor, Scout master.
Clinton Matthews.
Kenneth Borroughs.
William Kingsley.

The accident took place sixty rods from the shore after the party had left for an island, in the center of the lake, on which the Boy Scouts were establishing a new camp for the summer. Several trips had been made to the island in the boat earlier in the day, and on the last trip there were seven persons in the boat. The Coroner of Dowagiac, who is investigating, gave it as his opinion that the boat was overloaded.

Scout Executive Taylor and his little son were the last to go down. Fifty feet of water separated them from rescue by W. C. Harper, who had driven one of the automobiles in which the scouts made the trip to the lake from South Bend. From the shore he saw the boat go down on an even keel, and saw the party floundering in the water. He procured a leaky rowboat, and with one oar pulled frantically against the rough waters to the scene, only to arrive too late. When within 50 feet of where the boat sank, he saw Scout Executive Taylor go down with his son in his arms after having fought a game fight to stay above water.

There were 15 in the party from South Bend and eight have been accounted for. None of the bodies has been recovered.

DECISION LEFT TO COUNTY AUDITORS

Missouri Speaker Declares Organization Represented by Nevada Man Works With "Big Business."

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 25.—William Hirth of Columbia and Chester P. Gray of Nevada, representatives of rival farmers' organizations which are seeking to lessen the influence of each other in organizing farmers in Missouri and other states, debated this afternoon in the Boone County Courthouse, Hirth speaking for the radical organization and Gray for the conservative.

The Hirth organization is the Missouri Farmers' Association, or more generally known as the Farm Club Plan, and Gray is retiring president of the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation. The Missouri Farmers' Association is seeking, through legislation and by the formation of co-operative live stock companies, grain dealing companies, elevators, creameries and other farm product marketing concerns, to obtain control of the marketing of all farm products. The Farm Bureau Federation stands for marketing through the usual trade channels and with co-operative buying of farm essentials through local county federations.

No judges presided at the debate and no decision was rendered, the verdict being left to the individual view of the several hundred Boone County farmers who heard the speakers.

Differ on Membership.

There was a wide difference between Hirth and Gray as to the strength of the rival organizations. Hirth said he has about 7000 members in Missouri, and that Gray had fewer than 2000 members. Gray insisted his organization had more than 50,000 and that, judging from the information he had as to the money receipts of Hirth's association, it had about 15,000.

Hirth, outlining the purpose of the Missouri Farmers' Association, said:

"There is ahead of the farmers the greatest economic battle ever fought in this country The only thing for the farmer to do is to take possession of the marketing facilities of the country and have something to say about the prices they shall receive for their products. You have heard much about the problem of the farmer being able to produce two blades of grass where one grew before, two ears of corn where one grew before, and so on. That is not so, the problem is to prevent overproduction, which would be fatal to the farmers."

"Work With 'Big Business.'"

He said the Farm Bureau Federation worked with "big business," and did not represent the farmer, and complained that the strength of the organization consisted of employes of the College of Agriculture of the State University, and of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

"Unless they are stopped," he said, "we will go into the next Legislature and when we get through, they will find themselves off the State pay roll."

Gray said the farmer needed the packer and the trade channels just as much as he needed the soil, and that the purpose of the Farm Bureau Federation was to influence them through legislation and such other means as presented to abandon policies which were detrimental to the interests of the farmers.

Hirth disclosed in his talk that the Farmers' Association had retained Senator Reed, who several days ago announced his candidacy for renomination, to oppose the injunction suit brought several months ago by the Kansas City Board of Trade to stop the operation of a law passed by the last Legislature at the instance of the farmers' organization, compelling boards of trade to admit farmers' co-operative companies to membership.

MURDER SUSPECT HANGS SELF WITH SHIRT IN HIS CELL

John Campanella of East St. Louis Held After Man Was Found Slain Above Saloon.

John Campanella, 38 years old, held in connection with the murder of Charles Lemon, 55, of 6900 State street, East St. Louis, committed suicide in his cell at the East St. Louis Police Station last midnight by hanging himself with his shirt. He was discovered suspended from the bars at the top of the cell by the turnkey when the latter passed the cell to lock up another prisoner.

Lemon was shot and killed last Monday night in a bathroom over the saloon conducted by Campanella at 2005 Missouri avenue. Mrs. Campanella told the police that the shooting was done by one of two men who had chased her husband from the saloon and then attempted to rob Lemon.

Campanella was arrested in St. Louis two days later, after he had fired several shots from a revolver at Sixth and Wash streets. He said that he had not been at his saloon since Monday noon, and that he knew nothing about the shooting of Lemon.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA GETS BIG RECEPTION IN DALLAS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex., March 25.—The engagement of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra here today was a pronounced success, much of which was previously assured by the reputation of Conductor Ganz, who has appeared here in numerous piano recitals.

The appearance of the orchestra was underwritten by a mercantile concern, but the guaranty will not be needed. The afternoon concert, for school children, brought out crowds that overflowed the Coliseum. Michel Gusikoff, violinist and concert master of the orchestra, was the afternoon soloist, and his offerings were warmly applauded. Mme. Marguerite Namara was the evening soloist.

The appearance of the conductor brought forth an ovation, which partook of a personal tribute, as well as a gesture of welcome to the organization he leads.

FRISCO PUTS BAN ON WOMEN EMPLOYES WHO GET MARRIED

Chief Purpose of Rule, It Is Announced, Is to Relieve Unemployment.

The Frisco Railroad will not in future employ married women whose husbands are able to support them, James M. Kurn, president, announced here last night. This rule, he said, would be strictly enforced against married women seeking employment and single women now in the employ of the company who get married, and will not affect any married women now employed by the company.

The chief purpose of the rule, effective at once, the order states, is to relieve employment.

The policy, Kurn said, was decided upon at a recent meeting of the officers, who are of the opinion that married women with husbands able to support them should withdraw from business life and make room for those who are dependent upon work for a livelihood.

The Frisco employs about 3000 women, he said, many of whom are married to men able to support them, while it has been the experience of the company that many single women with dependents cannot find employment. He added that married women with disabled husbands or with persons dependent upon them will not be affected by the rule.

The order says the company will expect the resignation of any woman employe who gets married, on the assumption that she marries a man able to support her, and that the services of any who fail to submit their resignations will be discontinued.

FORMER CITY SANITARIUM PATIENT GETS $50 PENSION

Had Been Entitled to Award Since 1890, but Applied Only When He Needed It.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 25. — A pension has just been granted to Joseph Aloysius Harley Sr., who was said to be in the City Infirmary of St. Louis, on account of Civil War service. The case is unusual in that Harley, though entitled to a pension in June, 1890, did not apply for one till last August, after his health had broken. He told Representative Hawes, who recently became interested in the case, that he did not believe in pensions, and never would have applied if he had been able to care for himself.

Harley was unable to furnish any proof that he had served in Troop A of the Eleventh Missouri Cavalry other than his own statement. With Hawes' suggestion, the Pension Bureau waived a special examination and satisfied itself of the validity of the claim by checking Harley's statement against War Department records and comparing his signature, a peculiar one, with that on a yellowed Civil War payroll. Harley will receive $50 a month only from the date of his application.

The records at the City Infirmary show that Joseph A. Harley Sr., who was received there Dec. 16, 1920, left the institution of his own accord May 12, 1921, and left no forwarding address.

Woman Had $89,000 in False Name.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Seventy-six bank pass books, representing part of the $270,000 estate of the late Harriett L. Kingsland of Elberton, N. J., were filed in Surrogate Court today. She died at a New York hotel while visiting in this city in 1919. Among her possessions were found the 76 bankbooks, showing deposits totalling $89,000, all made out to "Annie Randolph," a fictitious person.

ZOELLNER QUARTET ON K S D PROGRAM

Radio Concert Last Night Most Successful of Post-Dispatch Series.

One of the most artistic programs thus far given in the Post-Dispatch radio series was that of last night, when home receiving stations throughout the city and at a greater distance had the opportunity to hear a recital by the Zoellner string quartet. Addreses by John H. Gundlach and E. J. Brennan were also included in the K S D program.

The quartet, consisting of Antoinette, Joseph J. Amandus and Joseph Zoellner, was passing through St. Louis on the way from an engagement in Tulsa, Ok., to a series of concerts in Florida. The quartet has given about 1100 concerts in the United States and Canada, and has been heard in most of the European centers, the members having been decorated after concerts at the Royal Palace in Brussels.

New adjustments made yesterday on the transmission set improved the service and telephone calls from St. Louis and surrounding places last night, brought word that the concert was going out more loudly and clearly than ever before.

Their First Radio Concert.

It was the first radio concert that the Zoellner Quartet has given. The quartet has played for phonograph records in the past, and the members remarked that they were not required to sit so near the transmitter for the radio concert as they had been in record-making.

Of a group of classical selections, Tschaikowsky's "Andante Cantabile" gave perhaps the best opportunity to the thorough artists who compose the quartet. The Rimsky-Karsakoff "Russian Carnival Scene" was another fine number.

During the recital, telephone calls were received from different parts of the city, all expressing pleasure at the high quality of the program and the distinctness with which it was being received.

It was suggested by the announcer that someone call Joseph Zoellner Jr. to the telephone, and within a minute the young man had received the first of a series of calls. It came from E. A. Ganss, 5323 Minerva avenue, who praised the quality of the program and asked for an encore selection. This was given, and some of the places from which telephone messages of appreciation came were the Hamilton-Brown shoe factory, Twenty-first and Locust street, the Battery Service Co., 2120 Locust street, and residences at Spring and St. Louis avenues, at 2516 Belle Glade avenue and on the St. Charles road.

Gundlach Makes Talk.

John H. Gundlach's talk was on the theme, "What St. Louis Should Do for Civic Beauty."

"Let us build a beautiful city," he said, "an orderly, clean and inviting place. We talk about making St. Louis the greatest steel producing center, river transportation port, lumber mart and what not; but let someone raise his voice to make St. Louis beautiful—not the most beautiful, but just passing fair so folks will notice us—and how the grand chorus of joy-killers will play the poison gas to asphyxiate the stuff beautiful. But make St. Louis a young people's town, and notice how the traveling bag and grip will multiply on our streets."

E. J. Brennan, manager-counsel of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, expounded the motto, "Before you invest, investigate." He told of bureau's willingness to furnish free information as to the reliability of investments. "Schemers work night and day inventing new propositions to get your money," he said. "It looks perfectly sound, but you can't win; the cards are all stacked against you Fewer persons would get stung if they would show the same care in buying investments that they do in buying merchandise."

3 KILLED, 18 INJURED IN TEXAS TORNADO

Beaumont District Hit by "Twister" That Causes Much Property Damage.

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., March 25.—Three persons are known to have been killed, 18 injured and property damage estimated at $100,000, caused by a tornado that swept through this district late today.

Fannett, a farming village 15 miles southwest of here, suffered most severly, according to reports. Thomas Johnson, 80 years old, and an unidentified man were killed and 10 persons injured, four seriously.

A negro woman was killed in Beaumont. Property damage was caused at Burkeville, Tex., but there were no casualties.

The tornado struck Beaumont late in the day, demolished one large building and several smaller ones, broke windows and demoralized wire communications.

The twister passed through Beaumont and entered Orange County. How many farm houses were struck has not been determined, but an undertaking establishment has been notified to send an ambulance to bring the injured here.

The Norvell Wilder Hardware company's building here was wrecked. The J. S. Gordon wholesale grain company building was unroofed and one brick wall collapsed.

At the corner of Park and Bowie streets, a number of small houses occupied by negroes were demolished. As a result, Park street is piled with wreckage for three or four blocks. It was at this point the six persons were hurt. A barbecue stand collapsed, but everyone escaped except a negro employed there who was felled by a flying brick.

The tornado came in the midst of a heavy rainstorm.

A messenger arriving here tonight from Fannett asked that every ambulance in the city and a number of physicians go at once to that place.

An unidentified white man picked up on the Fannett road is reported dying in a hospital here.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The Weather Burea uannounced tonight that the disturbance centered over Southern Texas would move northeastward and would be attended by general rains in the States east of the Mississippi River, within the next 36 hours. There is a probability, the Bureau added, of heavy rain from the lower Ohio Valley, southward over Tennessee, and the East Gulf States Sunday and Saturday night. Southeast storm warnings are displayed from Bay St. Louis, Miss., to Apalachicola, Fla.

Several Houses Wrecked by Wind at Corpus Christi, Texas.

By the Associated Press.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., March 25.—A tornado swept through the southwestern edge of Corpus Christi this afternoon, lifting one small house from its foundations, carrying it through the air, and dropping it on the ground where it broke to pieces. Several other houses were blown from their foundations. Windows were blown out of houses and the fences leveled.

Fifteen Reared at Methodist Home Remembered by Woman Who Had $35,000 Estate.

Miss Margaret A. Sleith, who was for 37 years superintendent of the Methodist Orphans' Home for Girls, and who died last Tuesday, left bequests in her will for about 15 young women who were reared by her at the home, and for whom she had special fondness. She used to say that she reared 1500 girls and boys, and referred to them as "her children."

Miss Sleith died of heart disease at Barnes Hospital, after two days' illness, and was buried Thursday in the children's lot of the home in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Funeral services were held in the chapel of Pilgrim Congregational Church, of which she was a charter member. She retired as head of the home last Oct. 1, and since had stayed with friends. She made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Siegrist of 5446 Vernon avenue since March 10.

Took Charge of Home in 1885.

Miss Sleith was the daughter of a New England Congregational preacher. She took charge of the Methodist Orphans' Home in 1885, when it was at 3533 Laclede avenue. The home was moved to its present location, 4385 Maryland avenue, in 1896. It has cared for small boys as well as girls of all ages. There are about 105 children there now

R. M. Nichols, Miss Sleith's attorney, said that her estate amounted to about $35,000. Her legacies to the girls she chose to remember in that way ranged from $300 to $2000 apiece. Besides, she left $2000 to the orphans' home, bequests to two societies of Pilgram Church, and provided that the church should be residuary legatee.

Miss Sleith's 1500 "children" have scattered all over the world. Some are in Hawaii, some in other distant places, and many in various states of this country. Two of them, at the Siegrist home yesterday, related things they remembered about "Mother," as they called her.

She always used to get a month's annual vacation, they said, but worry for the welfare of the children always made her hurry back before it was over. She used to say that the "ladies of the board" told her that, though she had started in charge of the home on April 1, she was "no April fool." She would fret sometimes because she was not a Methodist, but a pastor told her it was all right, she was rearing good Methodist children.

Some of her girls were married, then took their own children back for her to bring up.

Wanted Home for Grown-Ups.

Her economical administration of the home resulted in the saving of sufficient money to start the Methodist Orphans' Home for Boys in Clayton. Her economy extended to her personal affairs, allowing her to accumulate the estate she did. Her hair was white for 30 years. After her retirement her fondest hope was to establish a home for the grown-up girls whom she loved best, now supporting themselves, over which she might preside. She found it hard to accustom herself to the inactivity.

One of the young women who related these circumstances said she thought Miss Sleith "would be tickled to know that even now the ladies of the board don't know her age." The burial permit stated her age was 70, but she is said to have been older.

350,000 GALLONS OF LIQUOR DUMPED INTO CHICAGO RIVER

Several Thousand Persons See Wine, Beer and Whisky Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 25.—Federal prohibition agents today dumped 350,000 gallons of wine, beer and whisky into the Chicago River while several thousand persons gathered along the bank to watch the performance. The liquor was ordered dumped into the river by Prohibition Director Gregory despite the fact that Federal Prohibition Director Haynes at Washington had suggested in a long-distance telephone call that it would bring undesirable publicity and present too ostentatious a display.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—All Federal prohibition agents have been ordered to avoid unnecessary display in the destruction of seized liquors, Commissioner Haines said today. Such instructions, he added, were issued with a view to preventing needless irritation through public destruction of alcoholic beverages.

143,847 "Suspect Notices" in Chicago

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 25.—Chicago's gain of nearly 152,000 in registration for the April primaries may be materially decreased, it was indicated today, when "suspect notices" were sent to 142,847 persons. This is the largest number of suspect notices ever sent out, according to George F. Lohman, chief clerk for the election commission. Lohman said an effort was being made to take from the registration lists the names of all those disqualified for any reason.

Robbers Loot Two Safes of $47.

Safe robbers obtained $47 and damaged two safes in the same neighborhood Friday night by using a "come-along," a device to pull combination knobs from their sockets. In the office of the William Schreiber Manufacturing Co., 1814 North Eighteenth street, the burglars got $40, and $7 was obtained at the office of the William Schaefer Wagon Co., 1301 Cass avenue.

"The West Is the Place," Says Mrs. Asquith, "but Men Dress Abominably"

She Stops in St. Louis on Way Back From Kansas City and Omaha—Says Arrest of Gandhi Is "Madness."

Mrs. Margot Asquith has seen the West—specifically, Kansas City and Omaha—and pronounces it good, notwithstanding the men, to her mind, dress abominably.

She was bubbling with these and other pungent observations yesterday morning when she stopped at Union Station for breakfast between trains, on her way back to New York and England, by way of Chicago. She made naive confession that the West, after the East, had bolstered up her opinion of Americans considerably.

True, she had undergone certain trials. A woman reporter whom she described as "a 16-year-old flapper with petticoats up to her knees," had gushingly besought her to tell "of your famous quarrels with your husband"—("Dear me!" said Mrs. Asquith, "who ever heard of anyone quarreling with Henry?")—but she had seen a genuine squaw in Omaha, and had been the guest of a Kansas City hostess whom she pronounced "the most superior woman I have met since I left England."

The West Is the Place.

"Ah, but the West is the place!" she declared. "It seems to me they are quicker," and she tapped her forehead significantly. "Perhaps I'm wrong, but there doesn't seem to be such a stupid obsession for making money. The people are not sodden; they seem to want to learn. That's right, isn't it? I felt it so.

"And can you tell me why the men dress so abominably? They do dress abominably, don't they, Horton?" she appealed to her suave secretary. Horton agreed that the tailoring of the Western male left much to be desired.

"But that will come," she added quickly. "After all, such things don't matter in a country so young. And the boulevards are lovely. Such trees! I'm sure we've nothing like it in all England."

She had met Gov. Allen of Kansas, and had been told that he was a possible candidate for the Presidency at the next national election. "I thought him a very clever man, but isn't he a trifle illiberal?" She was told of the Industrial Relations Court in Kansas, which Gov. Allen sponsored.

"Fancy putting men in jail for calling strikes!" she exclaimed. "I didn't know people did such things nowadays."

An Omaha Experience.

Then she related a curious experience in Omaha. A man and his wife had called upon her, explaining that they had come ever so far to hear her. "He was a sort of countryman, I think—a pleasant old fellow, too," she said. "He said he had an odd question to ask me—one I hadn't heard. I doubted that. I have been interviewed about nine times a day for two months. I fancied about everything had been asked.

"This old chap had an enormous stomach. He stood up, crossed his arms, looking very imposing, I dare say, and said: 'Doesn't your butler look just like this?' Oh, dear!" and she choked at the memory. "I thought I should explode. It was too grotesque for words. Of course, I daren't tell him that my butler looks very much like Napoleon and is a marvelous person who orders us about in the severest way, so I told him that he was ever so much more imposing than my butler, really."

Mrs. Asquith made known, too, that she had encountered some frankly anti-British sentiment. She was not at all put out by the fact, but she remarked with considerable asperity on the lack of information behind it.

"It's all well enough to hate us," she said. "No doubt we jolly well deserve hating for any number of things. But so many of these people don't know why they object to us. A man in Kansas City told me that we had gobbled up land all over the globe. And so we have, but we're giving it all back, gradually, and always in better shape, than when we took it. Civilising backward people certainly isn't wicked.

"Oh, you'll say our way of giving it back isn't always wise; and, indeed, it is often downright shabby, but then we have a democratic government, and statesmen of the people aren't perfect."

Gandhi Arrest "Madness."

What did she think of the arrest of Gandhi, the Indian revolutionary leader. "Madness!" she exclaimed, with an eloquent gesture. "You can't throw saints in jail like that; you can't without terrible consequences. I rather think if I had been in Lord Reading's place I should have sent him a note, apologizing for my impertinence, but asking him if he wouldn't come to tea, so that I could get his advice on governing the country. Ah, what a foolish, wicked thing to do! I tell you, no good will come of it."

With a characteristic gesture she changed the subject. "I shall be sailing for home next week. Have I made a success? Do people here realize what I have come to say—that we must be friends to save civilization and stop war? Oh, I know that the stupid newspapers have put me in the light of criticising everything. How vile a certain section of your press is! But surely you wanted me to be frank (one could hardly imagine Margot anything else), and friends get on better by speaking plainly, don't you think? I have met masses and masses of people and I think I got on with them."

The train was pulling out when she bade the reporter good-by. As the latter scrambled off, he heard the request: "Horton, you saint, hand me a cigarette out of my bag."

TEX RICKARD TO TAKE STAND TOMORROW, HIS LAWYER SAYS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Tex Rickard will take the stand Monday to refute the charge that he attacked 15-year-old Sarah Schoenfeld last November.

This announcement was made by counsel for the sports promoter today after he had been from the Tombs to the Sheriff's office for a conference with his lawyers.

At the Sheriff's office Rickard was visited by his mother, wife and sister.

Assistant District Attorney Decora announced that the prosecution expected to summarize next Wednesday, indicating that the case would go to the jury that night or Thursday. If necessary Rickard would be tried, Decora said, on the other three indictments against him alleging intimacies with other young girls.

SUES INSURANCE COMPANY

Mrs. William Van Nive Asks for Payment for Husband's Death.

Suit was filed yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nice for $7500 accident insurance carried by her husband, William J. Van Nice, in the Metropolitan Casualty Co. of New York. Van Nice died last November at his home, 515 Kirkwood road, St. Louis County, after having taken carbolic acid. A Coroner's jury at first returned a verdict of suicide but this verdict was changed by Coroner Bracy, following an investigation, to accidental death.

Mrs. Van Nice alleges that her husband got hold of the poison by mistake. It is stated that he was a victim of heart attacks and occasionally took aromatic spirits of ammonia to quiet palpitation. The bottle containing the ammonia is said to have been identical in size with one containing carbolic acid, and it is presumed that Van Nice, who was near sighted, intended to take ammonia but got the wrong bottle. The insurance company has refused to pay the insurance, the petition states. Van Nice was a member of a firm of silk jobbers at 1312 Washington avenue.

HYDE FORCES ABANDON PLAN TO ATTACK REFERENDUM ON BILLS

Petitions Against Consolidation Measures Returned After Search for Frauds in Signatures.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 25.—Gov. Hyde and his friends have virtually abandoned their plan to bring court attacks against the referendum process by which the administration consolidation bills enacted by the Legislature have been rendered inoperative pending a vote in November, the Governor admitted today.

Former State Senator Alroy S. Phillips, attorney for Hyde in the matter, and who had removed to St. Louis the referendum petitions circulated in the Eleventh and Twelfth (St. Louis) congressional districts against the consolidation bills, has returned the petitions to the vaults of the Secretary of State. At Phillips' direction a start was made toward examining the signatures on the petitions, in a search for fraud, but not much was found, and finances of the Citizens' Committee, formed to conduct the fight, began to run low. So the plan has been dropped as to the consolidation bills.

The organization, however, will go forward with its onslaught against the referendum on the workmen's compensation act, on which a suit has been filed in the Circuit Court of Cole County.

BONUS BILL MUST TAKE ITS TURN IN THE SENATE

Members of Finance Committee Say It Will Not Be Ignored, but Pending Matters Will Come Ahead of It

PRESIDENT TO BE CONSULTED FIRST

Senators Anxious to Frame Such a Measure as the Executive Will Be Certain to Approve.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Soldiers' compensation legislation must take its turn in the Senate Finance Committee, according to the opinions expressed this afternoon by members of that body. It will not be ignored or slighted, but pending matters will be hustled along to conclusion before the bonus is brought up for a general review.

This means that the tariff revision measure will be rounded into final shape before the bonus bill is given real consideration. Chairman McCumber of the Finance Committee said this evening that the proposition will not be turned over to a subcommittee for preliminary work. He said the full committee will take the subject up immediately after the tariff bill has been completed.

It is not intended to defer bonus legislation until the tariff bill has been passed by the Senate. That measure may be shunted aside temporarily and the bonus bill given a chance after it has been evolved. No program on that point has been arranged.

Harding's Views First.

The first step in the direction of bonus action by the Finance Committee will be to ascertain from President Harding his exact views on the subject and how far the committee may go without invoking the executive veto. Chairman McCumber will visit the President within a few days and discuss the bonus proposition with him. He desires to frame such a measure as the President will be certain to approve and will meet the exigencies of the approaching campaign.

There has been no determination reached by members of the Finance Committee to throw away the bill just passed by the House and frame an entirely new one. The House bill may be taken as a basis and worked over to meet the committee viewpoint.

Many members of the Finance Committee adhere to their old contention that Treasury certificates should be issued for the cash payments and redeemed later when payments begin to come along on the war loan indebtedness due from foreign Powers. The President formerly held that this plan is too uncertain but he may be persuaded to the contrary. It is expected that efforts will be made in that direction.

No Undue Delay.

Chairman McCumber is positive in declaring that there will be perfected bonus legislation at the earliest possible time. He says there will be no undue delay in the Finance Committee. He insists a bill will be favorably reported and urged for passage in the Senate. There is no intention of pigeon-holing this proposition, he says, and the issue will be squarely met with some measure that is predicted to prove acceptable to all those interested.

Members of the Finance Committee declared this afternoon that the tariff revision bill will be ready for placing before the Senate in approximately a week's time. It might be brought in a week from today unless unexpected complications develop. If not, a report early the following week is prophesied.

With the tariff out of the way, finance committee members say they can settle right down to the task of formulating a satisfactory compensation measure and keep right at it until the work is completed.

SCHOOL TAX COMMITTEE CLOSING CAMPAIGN TO MAINTAIN 85-CENT RATE

Supporters of Rate Say Educational Activities Will Be Seriously Curtailed if Tax Is Reduced to 60 Cents on the $100.

The Citizens' School Tax Committee is preparing to wind up its campaign for the success of the school tax election Tuesday, with the slogan:

"Again Vote Eighty-five to Keep the Schools Alive."

That is a succinct way of urging support of the proposal which will be passed upon by taxpaying voters, and which, if it receives a majority vote, will continue the present rate of taxation for the schools at 85 cents on the $100 valuation for the next four years. Should the proposal fail there would be a reversion to the basic rate of 60 cents, which, those urging support of the proposal say, would be inadequate to keep the schools alive.

Heretofore, unless a higher rate was voted annually, a 60-cent rate obtained. A year ago the people granted the present rate of 85 cents, and a short time later the Legislature made it possible to continue a rate for four years. That is the object of the present proposal, and proponents stress the fact that no increase is being sought.

103,000 Pupils in Schools.

The war made it necessary to drop behind in the routine building program, so that the 140 public school buildings have become crowded. The war made people more appreciative of education and attendance has, therefore, increased, as well as increasing by reason of natural growth in population. The present enrollment of 103,000 in the public schools is the largest number of pupils in the city's history—nearly one-seventh of the city's population.

The high schools are accommodating nearly 5000 more pupils than they should. So-called "irregular accommodations"—portable schools, rented buildings and school storerooms are being used for classes totaling nearly 7000 pupils.

As soon as the Board of Education is assured of sufficient income by the success of the election it will prepare a building program which will care for all elements in the city and furnish adequate room in all sections. It has already decided to erect a new high school in North St. Louis, one on the South Side, and a new grade school in the northwestern section and one in the southwestern region, at once. These will serve only for immediate relief.

The Board of Education had a $3,000,000 bond issue for buildings in 1916, but this fund has been exhausted.

There is another chief object in seeking the maintenance of the present tax rate, and that is the enabling of the Board of Education to maintain the "wider use" of the schools. The term "wider use" refers to use of the schools as community centers and for night schools, Americanization work and many other things besides routine instruction of children. Without a continuation of the present tax income many of these things could not be kept up.

There is a present enrollment of more than 21,000 men, women and children in the night schools, which is 8000 more than there were last year. When the night schools were started in 1859, 777 boys and 84 girls enrolled. The pupils now range in age from 14 to 75, but most of the scholars are young persons, 17 and over. There are 2000 boys and girls between 14 and 16 in the continuation schools, which are classes for employed children, who attend four hours a week, employers being compelled to send them.

The Citizens' School Tax Commission cites the popularity of these special schools as a reason for supporting the tax proposal, stating that without the needed income much if not all of this special work will have to be abandoned. Melville L. Wilkinson, chairman of the committee, has issued the following statement:

"A city grows in greatness, beauty and strength in accordance with the class of citizens produced by its public schools. Our public school system is the biggest manufacturing plant in St. Louis. It is producing the most valuable commodity of the community—future citizens. The boys and girls of today are the men and women of tomorrow. We who are at the helm directing the ship of state today will soon shift the burden of steering the craft upon the shoulders of the city's youth, and it is our duty to see that the public schools are equipped and financed that they may be made to manufacture a high standard of citizenship. The manufacturing of any product demands the investment and spending of money. We must vote to maintain the present rate of school tax on next Tuesday."

Women Voters to Parade.

The parade of the League of Women Voters on Tuesday, to arouse enthusiasm and "get out" the vote," will be composed of units which will form at Soldan, Yeatman, Central and Cleveland High schools, and which will join at Grand avenue and Pine street at 11 a. m. The units will form in front of the schools at 10 a. m. and move to the meeting place, led by high school bands, in trucks.

The parade will be composed of decorated automobiles of organizations and individuals, and anyone is welcome to join. The League of Women Voters will furnish banners in support of the measure. The route will be: North on Grand to Washington, east to Broadway, south to Pine, west to Twelfth, north to Olive, east to the Federal building at Ninth street, where Mayor Kiel, President Tobin of the Board of Education and Supt. Maddox are expected to deliver addresses at noon.

FACTS about the special school tax election to be held Tuesday, briefly stated, follow:

What the vote is about—Adoption or rejection of a proposal to maintain the school tax at the present rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation; an increase of the tax rate is NOT proposed.

Who may vote—Men and women voters who pay taxes; a taxpayer is one who regularly pays general (real or personal) taxes, a merchants' and manufacturers' tax, or State income tax; where State and city taxes are assessed against a man and his wife jointly, both are taxpayers.

When and where to vote—The 609 regular polling places will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. Tuesday.

How to vote—If you want to maintain the efficiency of the St. Louis public schools, scratch "No" and leave the "Yes." Reverse the procedure if you want to vote the other way.

What the proposal means—Passage of the proposal by a majority vote will mean that the needed school buildings can be provided and the Board of Education will not have to curtail its widespread activities for the good of the children and the people in general.

Lammert Protests Against Clause in Union Resolution.

Charles J. Lammert, secretary of the Painters' District Council, which has a membership of about 2000, and former president of the Building Trades Council, has issued a statement protesting against a provision of the resolution by which the Central Trades and Labor Union recently indorsed the school tax proposal. The resolution indorsed the maintenance of the 85-cent rate, "provided the Board of Education agrees to proceed with the erection of buildings for which money has been voted." Lammert, in his statement, said:

"This action indorses the tax, but puts union labor in the position of supporting the tax on condition that the board agrees beforehand to carry out a building program it is asking the people to enable it to finance. As one who has long been a worker in the cause of union labor, I feel myself obliged to protest against a proviso that puts union labor in a false position by neutralizing the resolution's practical effect. An adequate, progressive school system is the workers' hope; to refuse to sustain it is an abandonment of the most effective ally that has come to them. I urge all members of organized labor to vote for the proposal."

School Tax Supporters Speak at Tea at Hotel.

The St. Louis League of Women Voters yesterday gave a tea at Hotel Statler at which speeches in support of the 85-cent tax rate were made by John C. Tobin, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. B. F. Bush, vice president of the board; Miss Lillie R. Ernst, Assistant Superintendent of Education; and Miss Tillie Gecks, primary supervisor.

Mrs. Bush said a rate higher than 60 cents was necessary and without it the continuation schools for boys employed, for one thing, could not be maintained. Miss Gecks described crowded conditions in schools; Miss Ernst reviewed the ideals of past Boards of Education, whose members always advocated secondary or high school education. She declared it was not reasonable to presume that St. Louis would halt its progress in educational advancement in this age.

Two playlets, one enacted by primary pupils of the Webster School, emphasizing the necessity of voting "Yes," and the other by Cleveland High School students, showing by comparison the school tax conditions of St. Louis and other cities, were special features of the tea.

EXHIBITION OF RARE STAMPS AT LIBRARY

Collections of Several St. Louis Amateurs Represent Many American and Foreign Issues.

An exhibition of rare stamps, including as extremes the first one-pence stamps and the old Mulready envelopes, the 1922 issue of the Irish Free State and stamps of the Hungarian Soviet Republic, was held yesterday at the Public Library.

Collections of St. Louis amateurs belonging to the St. Louis Stamp Collectors' Society were shown, representing many American issues, and the stamps of Esthonia, Latvia and Livonia.

Imprints of two stamps said to be worth $15,000, issued in Maritus in Africa, were shown, as well as valuable examples of the triangular stamps of the Cape of Good Hope.

The American collection included issues of the various international expositions, the Lincoln issue of 1909, Alaskan stamps and many others rare because of peculiar coloring, water-marking or other governmental or mechanical eccentricity.

Small Countries Represented.

Stamps of the air mail represented, besides America, such small countries as Tunis, Esthonia and Latvia. Several reconstructed plates were shown, in which the stamps bear in one corner a microscopic plate number and in another corner an initial showing where it belongs on the plate.

There was a large collection of issues of the Argentine Republic, besides, among others, stamps of Venezuela, Honduras, Mexico, Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, Prussia, Saxony, Persia, Hawaii, Monterral, Dominica, St. Christopher, St. Lucia, San Salvador, Trinidad, the Falkland Islands, North Borneo, Barbados and Brunswick.

A large exhibition of the maltese cross cancelation was exhibited, and several Mulready envelopes, bearing a picture of elephants, slaves, and sea to represent the fabulous—and mythical—wealth of the Indes.

Method of Splitting Stamps.

Several envelopes showed the ancient method of splitting stamps—using half a two-pence stamp for a one-piece— and it was remarked that all of these long-preserved letters were addressed to men, and further, that most of them seemed to have been addressed by men.

The stamps of the Irish Free State were inscribed in Gaelic, but had the King's picture on them, and the large half crown, 10-shilling and five-shilling stamps showed also Brittania with the trident.

The collection of the Hungarian Soviet Republic was captioned by a clipping calling it a "portrait gallery of Freebooters, assassins, and pirates." The engravings included Marx, Engels, and Petofi, the revolutionist poet.

An illustrated lecture was given last night in connection with the exhibition.

CREDITORS TO LET OIL AND TRANSPORT COMPANY OPERATE

Decision Reached at Conference in New York Called by Federal Judge.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Counsel representing creditors and stockholders of the Island Oil and Transport Co. today agreed to permit continuance of the business by the receivers for at least two weeks, or until such time as a close study of the company's condition could be made. The receivers, H. Snowden Marshal and Arthur J. Stevens, were empowered to use available funds to cover the expenses of operation.

This decision was reached at a conference called by Federal Judge John C. Knox. Francis E. McIlheny, representing the Sun Oil and Ship Co. of Philadelphia, a creditor firm, opposed the continuance, declaring the money which would be used in operating the Island Oil and Transport Co. really belonged to the Island Marketing Corporation, the selling agent and subsidiary of the defendant company. The marketing corporation, he asserted, was indebted to the Sun company. All other creditors favored continuance of operation. The order empowering the receivers to use the company's available funds, signed by Judge Knox, could be revoked, or modified, he explained, on one day's notice.

Another conference of creditors and stockholders' counsel will be held April 6.

HAS PLAN FOR 35-HOUR WEEK

Clothing Company Head Suggests Innovation for Women Alone.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Arthur Nash, president of the A. Nash Clothing Co. of this city, who on Jan. 1 made an innovation in American industry by placing his 2000 employes on a basis of 40 hours a week—eight hours a day and five working days in a week—announced today that he was planning a still further reduction in the working time of the women employed by his company to a basis of seven hours a day and five days a week.

"I do not think eight hours for five days a week to be too much for the men," he added.

Member of Peary's Expedition Dies.

By the Associated Press.

NEWTON, Mass., March 25.—The death of George C. Castigan, who was a member of Admiral Peary's expedition to the North Pole in 1909, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, the Boxer uprising and the Philippine insurrection, became known today. He had been in a hospital here for a year and a half, suffering from the effects of poisoning.

MEN STUDENTS FACE SUSPENSION AFTER POSING AS GIRLS

Disguised as Co-eds and Attended Play "for Women Only" at Univrsity of Michigon.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 25.—Because they disguised themselves as co-eds and sought to witness the junior girls' play, which was being presented "For Women Only," in the largest theater here, four University of Michigan students face suspension for a year.

Resplendent in low-cut evening dresses and the conventional drug store complexions, the four youths presented themselves at the theater door and had no difficulty in deceiving the young women taking tickets. After they had been shown to their seats and were waiting for the curtain to rise, however, a hoarse giggle, emanating from one of them, aroused the suspicions of a theater attache, and they were escorted to the theater office, where they finally confessed all.

Last year an enterprising student succeeded in witnessing the play, but was apprehended when he tripped on his dress and fell getting into a taxi outside the theater. He and a real co-ed who was with him were suspended from the university for a year as a result.

NEW COMPLICATIONS IN CASE OF QUAKERTOWN "WILD MAN"

Conductor Identifies Him as Father Who Killed Man 20 Years Ago; Woman Claims He Is Her Son.

By the Associated Press.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., March 25.—The case against the Quakertown "wild man," instead of being cleared up today became more complicated. Although James Weaver, a Philadelphia street car conductor, identified the man as his father, Adam Weaver, wanted in connection with a killing in the Haycock Mountains 20 years ago, word came from Mrs. A. D. Long, of Santa Barbara, Cal., to the effect that the "wild man" was her son. She said that her "missing boy" had only one arm and that he was in a school in Illinois at the time of the killing.

Revenge for cruelties suffered in childhood prompted the identification, Weaver told the police.

"Look at these," he said, attracting attention to slight scars on his face and neck. "They were all inflicted by my father. They are the result of the beatings he used to give me as a child."

Despite the charges of Weaver, the prisoner maintained that his name was Hecox. But when the latter showed signs of anger, Weaver declared his mother will be able to recognize the "wild man." Weaver also said that his father had treated his mother cruelly and that she is now an inmate in the State hospital at Norristown.

Meanwhile, according to the authorities, the prisoner will be held at the request of Harry Rhoades, Chief of Police of Quakertown, to await the arrival of his mother from California.

FOUR WORKMEN INJURED WHEN BRICK WALL FALLS

They Were Repairing Old Scenic Studio Roof at Olympic Theater.

Four men were injured when a section of brick wall extending above the roof of the old scenic studio of the Olympic Theater collapsed yesterday noon. The studio is in the rear of the old theater building, facing the north and south alley, between Elm and Walnut streets and Broadway and Sixth street.

The injured men, with four others, were working on the roof repairing damage done by a fire several weeks ago. The section that fell was about 10 feet high by 20 feet long. Two of the workmen, Al Braswell, 24 years old, of 121 St. Louis avenue, St. Louis County, and Robert Matthews, 29, of 1411 Lake avenue, East St. Louis, were said to have been seriously injured. They are at the city hospital. George Haines and Peter Solomon were only slightly hurt.

A 15-foot section of smokestack on the roof adjoining the studio fell last Sunday. Work on the studio and the adjoining buildings has been stopped.

MAN WHO ESCAPED FROM POLICE FOUR TIMES SURRENDERS

Charles Stapf Gives Self Up Because of Wound Suffered Week Ago in Maplewood.

Charles Stapf, 21 years old, of 2508 Drury Lane, Maplewood, who has escaped from the police on four separate occasions, surrendered yesterday at police headquarters.

He was suffering from a bullet wound in the thigh inflicted a week ago by Maplewood policemen who went to his home to capture him. He fled out a rear door and eluded a policeman stationed there. The wound became serious, causing his surrender. He was taken to the city hospital.

Stapf was held in connection with an automobile theft last Nov. 20. He escaped from a patrol wagon by lathering his wrists with soap secreted in his mouth and slipping the handcuff which attached him to another prisoner.

WOMAN, 70, CLIMBS DOWN ROPE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENTONVILLE, Ark., March 25.—Age proved no barrier to Mrs. A. A. Pyle last night when her home caught fire. Mrs. Pyle was alone in the house in a second-story room. With escape down the stairs cut off, Mrs. Pyle, who just passed the 70-year mark, tied a clothesline to furniture in the room and garbed only in her night clothing, slid down the rope to safety.

TELLS OF IDEALS OF NATIONS OF PACIFIC

Writer Says at Town Club Peace Conference Overlooked Their Aspirations.

"An effort to understand the aspirations and ideals of the nations of the Pacific was the one thing totally and completely overlooked at the peace conference," said Sydney Greenbie, author of "The Pacific Triangle," at a luncheon yesterday of the Town Club.

"I am not saying that the conference was in this much a failure, but we can't attempt co-operation in the Pacific without getting down to a human basis and regarding the Oriental peoples as individuals and groups of individuals.

"Asia is essentially democratic, and so are Australia and America, but there is an urge in all insular peoples to expand, to branch out in the world. On the other hand, the tendency of continental nations is to break up sectionally, and so strong is this feeling of independence in Australia, for example, that to this day they are divided in their railroads, so that each province has a different gauge track and one must change roads whenever he goes from one province to another.

Japanese Ideals.

"New Zealand is, broadly speaking, democratic, but, being isolated, is leaning strongly toward imperialism. I do not say that this is undesirable—for New Zealand it is the very life of the country.

"Japan is a nation of 56,000,000 inhabitants, with a territory smaller than California and no resources which would make it self-sustaining —that is why we find there the urge and necessity of expansion.

"This problem, basically economic, is represented in Japanese ideals, which are deeply rooted and which the Japanese will fight for. So will the Australians fight for their ideals, and so will the Chinese. We must find a way in which to dovetail them."

"There is now growing up in Japan a suppressed but strong sense of democracy," said Grenbie. Stimulation of the feeling of racial pride means also a stimulation of the sense of individual worth, and this factor tends to break down the submissiveness which the rulers are trying to strengthen.

"Our trouble with Japan will never come from the Japanese in America. Our problem is not a problem of invasion, but of what will happen over there. The Japanese are not colonizers, and in general do not like to emigrate.

Japan and Korea.

"Japan possessed Korea 10 years ago and lost to it only 300,000 Japanese, and to Manchuria it has lost only 400,000. Only a few thousand have emigrated to South America and to the United States. Altogether about 1,200,000 have emigrated.

"Japan must have the material with which to industrialize, and that material may be found in China and Siberia. If Japan were forced to subsist on her own coal supply it would last but 50 years. Yet in one province of North China there is coal enough to supply the whole world for a thousand years.

"We are all familiar with the results of grab in the Far East in the last 100 years, and no nation is better off for it than 50 years ago. The Britishers are realizing this and so are the French. All the nations except Japan now sense the fact that grab is a failure, and the Japanese are beginning to realize it.

"The only country to refrain from the concession-hunting form of grab in China during the last 50 years, I am proud to say, is America. The nations commercially established in China are all marking out spheres of influence with the result of retarding the development of the country. They all want to trade with China and the result of the method of grab is that China is in many ways worse off than 50 years ago.

"For many years we have been reiterating in every treaty that the integrity of China must be maintained. The open door several times has been shut. We once had a treaty to trade with Korea, which Japan made impossible by manipulating the railroads so that it was difficult and almost impossible to get goods to the inland purchaser. Shipments would be lost until the order had been replaced by merchants nearer at hand.

"For this reason it was childish for the world to assume that since Shantung was given back to China and Japan agreed to keep the railroads, 'It's all right—Shantung belongs to China.' Shantung doesn't belong to China so long as Japan owns the railroads.

"My criticism of the treaty is not of its aims but of what it has not done. And it has not cleared up the debris of former treaties. If in the spirit of the conference and the treaty we maintain the status quo and work out future policies along their lines, in 15 or 20 years we may begin to solve the problem of the Far East.

"We can't afford to sit back and say that the whole thing is solved. A clear and constructive public opinion, well versed in the state of things and what must be done for the future improvement of them, is the only solution.

"Legal cases of American, French and British citizens in China are tried by the laws of their native country and by their nation's Consul; and Japan was not entrusted with such cases until she codified her laws 25 years ago. If it is possible to force on Japan what we like to call our advanced sense of justice, law and order, why is not the same thing possible in other lines—in trade and in all international relations? That is the solution.

"In addition to the World Court there should be a World Health Commission. Steamship traffic makes safe and easy the transmission of disease from one country to another. The same thing is true of education. Japanese children, although they know something about Abraham Lincoln and George Washington, seldom get the democratic angle, and we might better understand the Japanese if we knew more of their national heroes.

"Further, the nations must stop glossing over the issue and refusing to tell their troubles. The mighty generalizations of international politicians may satisfy the minds of statesmen but I doubt that they satisfy the minds of the public. Let us as nations get down to each other on a human basis, find out what each needs and aspires to, and what each should cut out of its national structure."

$25,000 WORTH OF ROSES ON DISPLAY AT FLOWER SHOW

National Exposition at Indianapolis This Week Expected to Cost $1,500,000.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 25.—By pushing a button in the White House which rang a bell in the Manufacturers' building of the State Fair Grounds here, President Harding tonight formally opened the fifth national flower show, given under the auspices of the Society of American Florists, ornamental horticulturalists.

The exposition, which it is estimated will cost $1,500,000, will continue all of next week and arrangements have been made to handle more than 100,000 visitors. Cut roses alone on display during the week will cost approximately $25,000, it is said, and one rose garden of a New England florist has been reproduced in miniature at an expense of more than $2000.

The Mrs. Warren G. Harding, a new rose named in honor of the wife of President Harding, at the New York flower show a short time ago, will be on exhibition at the show part of next week.

WOMEN GOVERN, MEN DON'T WANT EQUAL RIGHTS AT BATAKS

Woman Writer Tells of Community in Sumatra Where There Is No Argument About Who Is "Boss."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Governmental affairs are entirely in the hands of women at Bataks, in Sumatra, it was reported today by Gertrude Emerson, magazine writer, back from 22 months of travel in the Orient.

The men love the situation and are not trying to get equal rights, she said. They don't have to buy shoes for the children, keep the wife in new hats, worry about taxes, promote schemes to keep the country from going bankrupt or perform any of the other dutiful tasks that threatened the masculine the world over. The women boss politics, property and children.

If one tried to reform the matriarchal system, Miss Emerson said, one would get his head neatly severed from his body and "without doubt," she added, "the men would do the cutting."

Miss Emerson traveled alone, now by camel or elephant, now by sampan, horse, train or airplane, often over routes where she was warned no woman had ever gone alone before.

MAX OSER SELLS HIS STABLE

Swiss Riding Master Reported Getting Ready to Visit Miss McCormick.

ZURICH, Switzerland, March 25.—Max Oser, the Swiss riding master and fiance of Mathilde McCormick, daughter of Harold F. McCormick, Chicago, has sold his stable to an officer in the Swiss army and is preparing to leave Zurich within a few days, ostensibly to visit relatives in Western Switzerland.

Oser personally refused to give any further information regarding his purposed movements, but neighbors asserted today that he would sail for the United States early in April to pass Easter with his bride-to-be and be presented to the McCormick and Rockefeller families.

The neighbors of Oser also said he would take with him to the United States a member of the Mangold family, one daughter of which is Miss McCormick's companion.

DRASTIC PROVISIONS IN WORKMEN'S BILL

Proposed Measure Would Repeal Compensation Act and Hold Employer for Injuries to Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 25.—Drastic provisions of a measure to cover all efforts to recover damages for personal injury or death resulting from the wrongful act or negligence of another, which will be voted upon in November under the initiative provision of the State Constitution, have become known with the preparation by the Attorney-General's office of a ballot title for the proposed act. This bill, proposed by the members of the St. Louis Building Trades and other interests in St. Louis, which are largely responsible for the referendum on the workmen's compensation act, was filed with the Secretary of State when the referendum petitions were brought in, both sets of petitions having been circulated together.

Little attention was paid to it at the time, but it now has become evident that if adopted this bill would repeal the workmen's compensation act, abolish the fellow servant rule as a defense, abrogate the defense of contributory negligence, substituting therefor the law of comparative negligence, and would render employers liable in damages for injuries to employes by any act, omission or negligence of any other employe.

HARDING FOR REPRESENTATION ON REPARATIONS COMMISSION

President Said to Be Considering Asking Congress for Authority to Make Appointment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—President Harding is considering asking Congress to authorize appointment of an American as member of the Reparations Commission, it was learned yesterday at the White House. Under the separate treaty of peace between the United States and Germany, it was provided that America should have the right to a membership in the Reparations Commission upon election of this Government. It was specifically stated, however, in the resolution confirming the treaty that the United States should have no representation on the Reparations Commission or on any similar body without express authorization from Congress.

At the White House it was said the President had two methods of seeking appointment of an American on the commission. One would be to make a request of Congress that the United States have a delegate on the commission, and the other would be to nominate an American member on the commission and ask Congress to approve the nomination.

DEATH PENALTY FOR TWO INDIANS FOR KILLING OF AN AMERICAN

Five Others Given Prison Terms, One Acquitted of Slaying Engineer Last November.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, March 25.—Of the eight Indians on trial in the High Court for the murder of William Francis Doherty, an American, during the disorders last year, two were sentenced to death, four to imprisonment for life and one to imprisonment at hard labor for two years. The other man was discharged.

Doherty, according to a letter received in New York in January from Mrs. Doherty, was killed by Indian revolutionists in Byculla on Nov. 18. He was a civil engineer and had been a resident of Bombay for several years. According to the letter Doherty died fighting with his back to the wall in rioting incidental to the visit of the Prince of Wales to India. He was attacked by 500 natives while superintending the construction of a plant in Byculla. Doherty was born in Galveston, Tex., and was graduated from Leland Stanford University in 1901. He was 38 years old.

Two Singles, Two Doubles and a Home Run Sum Up His Afternoon at Bat; He Also Stole a Base.

SANDY FIELD PROVES HANDICAP TO PLAYERS

Inability of Defense to Get Under Way Quickly Responsible for Poor Showing of the Hurlers.

By J. Roy Stockton,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 25.—Acres of sand and a squally wind with a chilling bite, greeted the Browns at this tourist city, this afternoon. If the men of Lee Fohl depart Monday night without having suffered broken noses and fingers, blackened eyes and a whole stable of horses yclept "charleys," they can consider themselves exceedingly fortunate.

The three games with Louisville, the first of which was won this afternoon by the sand lot score of 16 to 11, can be counted as worse than so much time lost, except as far as batting practice is concerned.

The ball park at which the Brownies engaged the American Association champions is one of those real sand lots you hear so much about. When the ball hits in the outfield it drops dead like a golf ball hit into a bunker kept by old Nick himself. And when the outfielders start for the ball they flounder and slip before they get under way. The infield is covered with clay, near the bases, on the mound and around the plate; but it is all an infielder's life is worth to try to field a hopper.

Under these conditions Elam Vangilder, Herbert Pruett and Ray Kolp pitched against the Colonels and were slammed for 15 safe wallops. That is, Vangilder and Pruett were pounded. Kolp was highly effective, being touched for only one single in three innings. But perhaps it was because the Colonels were tired, after laboring through the sands. At any rate the showing of the pitchers and fielders could not be taken seriously. The game merely gave them a chance to toil and toil hard and then they risked their flippers by riding home two miles through the sweeping gale.

Browns Have a Swat Soiree.

As a batting festival the affair was a huge success and a fine time was had by all, with the exception of Kenneth Williams, who blazed away at the short right field fence all afternoon and failed to get a hit, though in practice he put no less than five balls over the rampart.

George Sisler had another perfect day at bat, his second in the last three games, knocking off two singles, two doubles and capping it with a tremendous home run the last time he officially visited the plate. George also drew two bases on balls. He likewise showed that even the ankle-deep sand could not stop him. He stole the only base pilfered during the sandy-andy affair.

Drives which ordinarily would be duck soup for infielder or outfielder went splashing past the inner defense or fell safe before the fly-catchers could wade into range; so the heavy bombardment of the day must be discounted. Four errors were charged to the Colonels and three to the Browns, all of which could easily have been credited to the condition of the field.

Mr. Vangilder's Delivery Badly Bruised.

Vangilder began the pitching for the Browns and was maltreated for 10 hits and eight runs in four innings. The mound was soft and there was no rubber, such as big leaguers are accustomed to. Frequently when a pitcher was delivering a ball his rear foot would slip and all the hurlers sacrificed speed and curves for safety.

Herb Pruett, the promising young left-hander from Missouri University, followed Vangilder, and though he gave two bases on balls in the fifth and one error aided the enemy, they were unable to score. He fanned Massey, the Colonels' left-fielder, with three on the sacks and two on. In the sixth four singles, a walk and a sacrifice fly gave Louisville three runs. Pruett usually is a good fielder, but two of the singles were scratch infield rollers which he was unable to reach because of the loose underfooting. His showing, therefore, despite its poor appearance on paper, was very satisfactory. He worked as confidently as though he had been a big leaguer all his life.

Kolp was aided by the only brilliant fielding of the game, during the three innings he worked. Frank Ellerbe made three stops and throws which would have been sensational on any infield; and on the Pensacola diamond they were sensational. Then, to end the game, Walter Gerber grabbed a bad hop with his bare hand, and made the play at first with a fine throw. The only hit off Kolp was a double by Lyman Lamb, in the ninth.

Nick Cullop Nicked for Eight Hits.

Nick Cullop pitched five innings for the Colonels and was bumped for eight hits and seven runs. He also was handicapped by the field which anchored his fielders at their posts. Estell, a St. Louis boy, finished for Louisville and came in for the heavy end of the Brownie bombardment.

Bruno Betzel, former Cardinal, was the star for Louisville. The husky little second-sacker plucked himself a double, a single and a home run, all off Van Gilder. He went hitless against Pruett and Kolp. His fielding also was brilliant, despite the two errors charged to him.

Johnnie Tobin returned to his uniform and played a fine game for a sick man. The modern Willie Keeler placed a single in left the first time at bat and later laid down a swinging bunt which was the picture of perfection. He was down to first before the ball was touched by a Louisville infielder. He still is a bit weak, but apparently is on the rapid road to recovery from the attack of indigestion.

This afternoon Dixie Davis and Danforth will share the hurling burden. No importance can be attached to the showing of the Browns in the three games. Fohl would be acting wisely if he wired for an all second string team and shipped his regulars to New Orleans. He will go through with the arrangement, but the players will be cautioned to take no chances and to ignore the score and consider the games no-contests.

DURST STARS IN FIELD AND AT BAT AGAINST MOBILE FOR YANNIGANS

MOBILE, Ala., March 25.—The St. Louis Browns second team, with Cedric Durst and Phil Todt hitting like demons, defeated the Mobile Southern Association team, this afternoon, 13 to 3, at Monroe Park.

Durst worked savagely on the pitching efforts of Ashley Pope, regarded as the ace of the local club, and Ray Roberts. He made six visits to the rubber and poled out two triples to deep right and two singles to the same spot. He showed the Mobile ball fans that he was a real deerfoot on the paths and fielded in mid-season shape with five putouts to his credit.

Phil Todt, the property of the Columbus club, showed the effects of his training here under Lee Fohl and Bob Coleman, covering right field in a sensational manner. Todt with three singles drove in four runs.

The final game of the Browns in Mobile will be played tomorrow afternoon.

LEADERS HOLD PLACES IN A. B. C. TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, March 25.—About to enter on its final week, the American Bowling Congress tournament here seems to have settled down to a matter of routine.

A Minneapolis pair, C. Jones and J. Stasch, led the two-man event with 1221. W. Larsen and C. Erickson of Racine, Wis., were one pin behind the day's leaders.

The highest score of the day in the singles was 663, by G. Steel of Newark, N. J.

Two five-man teams, the Zieglers of Milwaukee and the Imperials of Auburn, N. Y., who lost out on the original schedule on account of illness, were permitted to bowl this afternoon. The Zieglers scored 2747 and the Imperials 2345.

The Charles Weber five of Chicago bowled into third place on the first squad with a score of 2909. Another team to enter the list of first 10 was the South Side Malleables of Milwaukee with 2904 for a tie with the Mineralites of Chicago for fourth place.

Philadelphia Owns Two Best Cellars; Athletics and Phillies to Occupy Them

National League Baseball Club of 1922 a Team of Hopeless Misfits, Seemingly.

Athletics Have Some Stars and With Pitching May Nose the White Sox Out of Seventh Place.

Here is the first of a series of articles presenting this year's big league title candidates to Post-Dispatch readers. At least three articles will appear weekly.

No. 1 — THE MACKS AND PHILS.

By Herman Wecke.

WHEN it comes to tough assignments for a baseball manager, slip the palm to Connie Mack of the Athletics and Irving (Kaiser) Wilhelm of the Phillies. These two piloted eighth placers last season. In fact, Mack has been stymied by seven other clubs for seven successive campaigns. Ever since 1914, when Mack broke up a pennant combination, he has been promising Philadelphia fans another championship team. But it never happended."

However, Mack owns a great deal of stock in the club, so his job is secure.

With Wilhelm it is different. Wilhelm took hold in mid-season last year. This will be the first campaign he has started as a big league leader. Prospects do not look any too bright.

Connie Mack will make few changes. He will have a new first sacker and one new outfielder. The other positions will be covered by athletes who were on the team's payroll last year. Joe Hauser, much touted player from Milwaukee, is scheduled to play first. In the event he falls down, Doc Johnston, snared from the Indians, via the waiver route, will be ready to step in.

Dykes a Shining Star.

Jimmy Dykes is a fixture at second. He's one of the stars of the Johnson circuit. Calloway, who came up late last season, is favored to play short. "Chick" Galloway, a shortstop in 1921, is picked to handle the third sack, vacated when Joe Dugan was sent to Boston. Scheer and Barrett are the most likely looking rookies for infield duty.

The outfield will be patrolled by Tillie Walker, Welch and Miller, obtained from Washington. Witt and McGowan, from the International League, are making strong bids for places.

Cy Perkins will do the catching, assisted by Johnny Walker and Fuhrman.

Mack intends to carry 10 pitchers. Harris, Rommel, Hasty, Naylor and Moore are the veterans from 1921. The other quint will be picked from a flock of rookies who are striving to make the grade as major leaguers.

Phillies a Nightmare Team.

About the Phillies. They were a misfit aggregation last year. Little has been done to strengthen the club. Art Fletcher was lured back to the pastime. He will play short. Leslie, a first-sacker from New Orleans, is the only other newcomer, with the exception of pitchers. All of which makes Wilhelm's task anything but an easy one.

Leslie is booked to cover first. He was with New Orleans last season. In case he fails, Wilhelm will be forced to fall back on Lee, a reformed catcher. Parkinson, a heavy hitter, but poor fielder, is down to cover second, replacing Smith, who is still around. Fletcher will be at short and Goldie Rapp at third. Substitutes do not loom up as sensational.

Veterans will patrol the outfield, although several of the athletes were unable to cover a dime last year. The regulars will be Williams, Walker and Lebourveau. King and Wrightstone are the others.

With Bruggy, a .300 hitter, gone, Peters, Henline and Withrow, recalled from Newark, will do the catching.

And the pitchers. Meadows, Ring, Smith and Hubbell are the best of the veterans. Betts and Winters, holdovers, may come through. Snover and Pinto look best among the rookies. Wilhelm has 16 flingers in the South and may find a few wonders. Then again he may not.

On paper, at least, there's little for Philadelphia fans to enthuse over. The Phils look like certain eighth-placers. The Athletics, if they get the pitching, may sink the White Sox into the cellar.

The 1922 Athletics.

Pitchers: Harris, Hasty, Moore, Rommel, Naylor, Eckert, Pierson, Heimach, Yarrison, Ollinger, Sullivan and O'Neill.

Catchers: Perkins, J. Walker, Fuhrman.

Infielders: Dykes, Galloway, Barrett, Brazill, Calloway, Johnston, Hauser, Scheer, Maitland.

Outfielders: C. Walker, Witt, Welch, Mallone, McGowan, Miller, Hughes.

The 1922 Phillies.

Pitchers: Meadows, Ring, Smith, Hubbell, Baumgartner, Betts, Sedgwick, Weinert, Winters, Snover, Behan, Sullivan, Pinto, Singleton, Morgan, Apperson.

Catchers: Henline, Peters, Witherow.

Infielders: Lee, Smith, Fletcher, Rapp, Parkinson, Miller, Leslie.

Outfielders: Williams, King, Wrightstone, Walker, Lebourveau

Walking Match Today.

Harry Fisher, former champion of London and Frank Kriege will meet in a 30-mile walking match from Third and Washington to Belleville and return this morning starting at 9 o'clock. Conditions for the match are that the winner must cover the distance in less than six hours.

Soccer Teams in Benefit Contest

Proceeds of Game Today Between All-Star Elevens Will Go to Pete Ratican.

Two all-star soccer teams, picked from the four clubs in the St. Louis League, are scheduled to play at High School Field this afternoon in a benefit game for Pete Ratican, manager of the Ben Millers. Ratican has been ill for more than a year. Prior to taking the management of the Ben Millers, who won St. Louis' first national championship in 1920, Ratican was one of the best halfbacks in St. Louis. Today's game starts at 3 o'clock.

The elevens that battle this afternoon will be known as the Bradys and Foleys. To the victor goes the right of playing an out-of-town eleven here next Sunday. Harrison and Philadelphia were unable to come. Officials are trying to bring the New York F. C. here for the contest.

There should be some real battling in today's clash. The two elevens are about the strongest that have ever been picked from the roster of the local clubs.

Paul McSweeney and Phil Kavanaugh, the regular league referees, will handle the game, each working one half. The halves will be of 45 minutes' duration.

The lineups:

Bradys.	Positions.	Foleys.
Bartnett	Goal	Reidy
Bentley	Right full	Pepper
Nolan	Left half	Quinn
Peterson	Center half	Zarschel
R. Murphy	Right half	Fink
McCarthy	Outside left	Potee
Schwarz	Center	McCaffrey
Bechtold	Inside right	Dunn
Kehrman	Outside right	McHenry

Reserves will be Vaughn and White for the Bradys, Hack and Schweppe for the Foleys.

Bright Here for Bout With Kabby

Brooklyn Lightweight Has Had Busy Season Since He Fought Here Last.

Harvey Bright (Breitman), the clever Brooklyn boxer, who surprised local fight fans by outpointing Harry Kabakoff here in an unusually interesting fight earlier in the current fistic campaign (Dec. 20, to be exact), is with us again. Bright arrived from Brooklyn last night and will shape up at a local gymnasium for Tuesday's 12-round affair If the coming contest proves as good as the previous setto it will be worth viewing. Bright is a very shifty fighter and won an uphill contest.

Since his last appearance here Bright has fought eight no-decision contests against men little known in the West, but considered good boxers in the East. The best of these was Billy de Foe, a featherweight championship candidate.

Besides the Bright-Kabby event, the Angelica Club's secondary feature will be a bout between Jimmy Kerns of East St. Louis and Happy Howard. Surgeons have operated on Happy's beezer nine times. Wednesday night Dr. Kerns will attack the same objective

Boundless Energy and Stamina Made Dundee a Great Fighter

In Spite of His Low Poundage He Has Proven Dangerous and Unhittable Foe for Best Lightweights—Will Jackson Only Opponent to Land a Knockout Against the Italian.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

Johnny Dundee has had one of the most remarkable careers known to the ring. The number of his battles runs into the hundreds. For several years, fight fans have been watching him and waiting for him to "crack," but he has gone on with undiminishing vigor while nearly all of the youngsters who started with him years ago are out of the same profession entirely. Dundee has been boxing continuously for 13 years. He began when he was 16.

Dundee's right name is Joseph Carrora. He was born at Sharkai, Italy, Nov. 22, 1893. He is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, and weighs 130 pounds.

Carrora started out with a manager of about his own age, Scotty Montieth, a real Scotchman. It was Scotty who gave young Carrora the Scotch name, Johnny Dundee.

Dundee made good in fight after fight, meeting the best men in his class and attacking them all with the same dauntless audacity. There was something about Dundee's fighting that made everyone fancy him. He wasn't afraid of anybody. He didn't care whether they were wallopers, or fancy boxers. He met them all in the same way, and if he didn't whip them he at least gave them a mighty exciting evening.

Dundees Energy Unequaled.

In a good many years following ring events I never saw another fighter with Johnny Dundee's endless store of energy. From the start he had an unusual fighting style—one that seemed likely to burn him out in two or three years. He danced about constantly—always in motion, and was usually going ahead.

His dancing steps weren't to the rear, as with most dancing boxers. Dundee was a fighter. He had a curious trick of crouching low and moving in with his jaw unprotected to draw the enemy's fire.

He had a quick eye. As soon as a blow started for his jaw he'd drop his head a trifle lower, or moved forward and a little to one side, instead of pulling back in the orthodox way. This made his rival miss, and left Dundee within easy countering range.

It was a puzzling maneuver, and fooled them all. Even some of the greatest boxers in the country, knowing all about Dundee's bobbing, tantalizing style, practicing ways to get him, were unable to catch him squarely with a damaging punch. And when Dundee was hit hard on the chin he only fought twice as fast and hit twice as often in the flurry that followed.

In 1917 it looked as if at last Dundee had begun to slip, when Willie Jackson caught him with a right-hand smash flush on the chin in the first round and knocked him out cold.

But, to the astonishment of all the fight followers in the East, Dundee came right back without the slightest impairment of his confident spirit and won a row of battles. He fought Jackson again and tore into him like a wildcat for 10 rounds, outfighting him all the way—and met Jackson several times afterward with fairly consistent success.

Dundee's Energy Unequaled.

Willie Ritchie, a great fighter, a plunging, aggressive fellow who never backed up, made an especial study of Dundee's trick of bobbing in under punches, exposing his chin and making his opponent miss, and that he would hit at Dundee's chin at every chance, and land on it, too. He was confident of stopping the Italian. In the fight Dundee bobbed under his well-meant leads and came up inside, fighting like a wildcat. After the fight Ritchie said it would be a long time before anyone caught Dundee with a damaging punch.

And it was. Even clever Benny Leonard, in several hard fights with Dundee, has been unable to do it. Terry McGovern, Chaney, Lew Tendler and a score of other hard hitters have failed to make a dent in Dundee.

In the past two years Dundee has fought Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard half a dozen times, and Willie Jackson more than that, besides a great number of other slugging lightweight "contenders," and he hasn't shown a sign yet of losing either his speed or his endless store of stamina. Dundee has quite a lot of boxing skill, but his speed and strength and aggressiveness account for most of his ring success.

Last year he won the "junior lightweight championship"—a new class invented for Dundee and a lot of other fellows who were a few pounds within the lightweight limit—by taking a decision over George Chaney on a foul. It looks as if Dundee can defend that title for several years to come.

ROOKIES AND REGULARS BATTLE FOR BERTHS ON ST. LOUIS U. HIGH NINE

Dan Savage, coach of the St. Louis University High School, is conducting "open house" for positions on his Junior Billiken nine. Every rookie reporting to the coach this season is sharing the mentor's attention with the regulars of last season. Each position is open to all comers. The reason of this failure to recognize the veterans is the fact that the Blue and White will be "wrecked" by graduations this year and Savage is building for the coming season.

Several promising box men have been uncovered in the new material. Higgins, Googerty and Macheca are showing good pitching form. Finan and Wildermuth are understudying Westhus behind the bat. V. Bradburn and Baumgartner are seeking to displace Stanton at first, while a youngster named Carroll is trying to shove Capt. McShane into the shadow at the keystone sack. Dowling is contesting for Fegan's job at short field and three new comers, Bradburn, Gilmartin and Murphy, are seeking the third base assignment.

Rice, Fitzgerald and Karst are the first string garden men with a relief squad composed of Halloran, Mehan and Cooney.

Games have been arranged with Eden Seminary, Ranken Trade School, Chaminade and Belleville. Coach Savage intends to invade the nearby Illinois towns and is also seeking games with all of the local high schools.

CINCINNATI OFFICIALS ARE ASKED TO RESIGN FROM BOWLING CONGRESS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., March 25.—As a result of the scandal over the illegal substitution of a player on the Buckeye Malt Syrup team of Cincinnati in the five-man event here on March 9, Judge W. D. Alexander, Cincinnati, second vice president of the American Bowling Congress, and Henry Mergard Sr., president of the Central States Bowling Association, will be asked to resign their positions in both organizations. Judge Alexander acted as score keeper for the Cincinnati five and Mergard was captain of the team.

They are charged with substituting A. Burbring in the lead-off position under the name of B. Dryer.

DEPARTMENTS ORGANIZE LEAGUE AT ST. LOUIS U.

An inter-department baseball league composed of teams representing seven departments of the school was formed at St. Louis University yesterday. The season will be opened Tuesday by a game between the Pre-Medical and Law departments. Coach O'Rourke will umpire this game. A round robin in which each team will meet the other twice will compose the schedule.

Coach O'Rourke will select a representative team from the league and will tour the Southwest during the later half of May.

RICHARDS DEFAULTS IN INDOOR TITLE TOURNEY; OTHER NET STARS WIN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Leading players in the men's national indoor tennis championship tournament won their matches handily today in the opening rounds of play.

Frank T. Anderson, the title holder; S. Howard Vishell, the left-handed played, champion in 1917 and 1918; Francis T. Hunter and Percy E. Kynaston all of the "Seeded" group, were victors in the feature matches. Vincent Richards, another former holder of the indoor title, was compelled to default his place in the tournament because of illness.

Anderson employed a fast service and volley game against his opponents, F. K. Scoval of Columbia University, and E. G. McLoughlin. Vishell never extended himself to win his matches from K. L. Bruneau of Brooklyn and Kynaston, while erratic in the early stages of his matches with T. R. Rutsche and Charles A. Anderson, steadied himself for the playing of game points. Hunter scored at will against C. Baker.

Cardinal Teams Are Idle Owing To Heavy Rains

Pitcher Doak to Remain at Houston for Practice During Next Three Weeks.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 25.—So far as the baseball battles scheduled by both Cardinal squads for today are concerned, it becomes necessary to borrow the succinct style of the war communiques of a few years ago and to state: "On the Texas front there is nothing to report." The front line trenches at the ball parks, both at Galveston and Houston, were under water, almost seven inches of rain falling during the day.

The Cardinal regulars are scheduled for a game with the Buffs here tomorrow, while the second team travels to Galveston.

Rickey is trying to so shuffle his athletes that both he and Roy Thomas, who will pilot the second stringers north, will have a full deck. Of course, most of the aces will remain with the first club, but every man Jack sent with Thomas will be able to give a good account of himself.

Doak to Stay at Houston.

Bill Doak is here, having changed his base from Orange, and here Bill will sojourn for three weeks, working out daily with the local Texas Leaguers in an endeavor to get that right arm of his in pitching shape. Pitching of the Doak brand is badly needed at the beginning of the season. Bill says he will be ready.

Lavan may not play in any of the exhibition games, though he will make the trip with the regulars. He is gaining strength and is keen to compete. Mann, also a flu victim, is progressing.

Among those to be absent when the two squads part company early in the week will be Threlkeld, the infielder, and Ralston, the catcher. Threlkeld seems doomed to work in Corsicana, while Ralston, if he cannot be placed somewhere down here, will draw his unconditional release.

Several pitchers are hoping that 10 pitchers will be carried by the Cardinals this season, instead of nine, as has been predicted. Bailey, Walker, Riviere, Goodwin, Barfoot and one or two others, are beginning to worry about the number to be decided upon. Right now Walker, Goodwin and Barfoot stand out from the others as most likely to be carried along with the six first choices, Doak, Pfeffer, Haines, Sherdel, Pertica and North.

St. Leos Capture Municipal Title Beating Henses

Fairground Soccer Team Outplays Sherman Park Eleven and Gains Victory by 3 to 1 Score.

FITZGERALD IS STAR FOR NEW CHAMPIONS

Forward Tallies Two Goals in First Half and Gives His Side a Commanding Margin.

St. Leos Will Play Memphis Champions In Contest, Today

THE St. Leos are scheduled to play the Young Men's Institute eleven, champion of Memphis, in an intercity soccer game at Fairground this afternoon. A preliminary game to decide the junior championship between the St. Marks and St. Matthews will be played. First game at 1 o'clock. An admission of 25 cents will be charged.

The Keen Kutters, municipal champions last season, defeated the Memphis eleven, 4—1, in a contest at Memphis a year ago.

The Memphis lineup is as follows: Gunty, goal; Arnold and W. Walsh or Bischoff, fullbacks; Bassnet or Ackerman, Halley and Guinee, halfbacks; Joyce, D. Walsh, DuHogne, Egan and Butts or McHugh, forwards.

The St. Leos, champion of Fairground No. 2, yesterday captured the Municipal Soccer League title, defeating the Henses, 3 to 1, in the third and final game of the series. The contest was played at Fairground before a capacity crowd. Prior to yesterday's tilt, each had won a game, the Leos winning the first, 2—1, and the Henses the second, 4—2.

In yesterday's battle the Leos, who also won the championship in 1920, completely outplayed the Sherman Park representatives in the first half, and held their own in the closing pediod. George Klosterman, manager of the title winners, was able to use his strongest lineup, Jim Burke returning to the center forward position.

With a heavy wind favoring them the Leos had the ball in Hense territory throughout the opening period, the Sherman Park eleven having few shots at goal. From the stands it looked as though the Henses used poor judgment on the goal kicks. With the wind against them, the fullbacks booted the ball straight down the field—rather, they attempted to. The result was that the wind would hold back the sphere and it would drop at the feet of the Leo forwards. Therefore, "Goalie" Neaf had more than his share of the work.

Leos Tally Early in Game.

The Leos went after a goal from the first kick-off. Their efforts bore fruit after only nine minutes of the battle had been completed. At this point the Leos forced a corner kick. Drew centered the ball. The Hense fullbacks cleared, but not hard enough, and Fitzgerald caught the ball and banged it into the net. Seven minutes later, the Leos tallied again, Fitzgerald again scoring. Halfback Clark carried the ball down field and then passed to the forwards. Jim Burke lifted the sphere in front of the upright and Fitzgerald, beating the rival fullbacks, headed it past Neat. The half ended, 2—0, in favor of the Fairground aggregation.

The Henses missed a chance to score after 13 minutes of play in the closing period, when Rooney booted a penalty kick directly at Walkenford. The boot was awarded when Farmer handled the ball. Walkenford banged both fists into the ball and Pat Burke helped along by booting it down field.

Rooney Scores for Henses.

After this break, both teams missed open chances to score. Fitzgerald, Drew and Flavin all fell down on what looked like "setups." Mitchell made a great effort to score, but Walkenford dived into the corner for a sensational save. It was one of the prettiest plays of the game.

When the 32-minute mark was reached, the Henses drew within one point of the Leos, Rooney shooting after getting a pass from Flavin. Walkenford got his hands on the ball, but the shot was "too hot to handle."

With only two minutes remaining, Clark worked the ball to the center of the field and then passed to McGann. McGann went the rest of the way. Neaf came out of his goal to meet him, but McGann sidestepped and then had a clear field. He made good with his shot.

The Memphis champions viewed the contest.

The lineups:

St. Leos (3)	Posioitn.	Henses (1)
Walkenford	Goal	Neaf
Burke	Fullback	E. Signaigo
chcock	Fullback	Phelan
Farmer	Halfback	Calvin
Clark	Halfback	Schurwan
ch	Halfback	Higgins
J. Burke	Forward	Mitchell
McGann	Forward	Flavin
Fitzgerald	Forward	Rooney
McMahon	Forward	Brady
Drew	Forward	J. Signaigo

Goals scored—Fitzgerald 2, McGann, Rooney. Time of halves—45 m. Referee—J. [illegible] Jr. Timer—M. Byrne.

Wray's Column

Is Our Crown on Straight?

ST. LOUIS soccer circles are imbibing rather recklessly of that very heady vintage, Success. Mound City is admittedly at the pinnacle, in this country. But no less a person than Thomas F. Cahill, the power behind the throne of the United States Football Association has added another size to the local soccer hatband by asserting that an All-St. Louis team could face the best British elevens successfully.

Now is the time to pull the ripcord and get back to earth. For, with all due respect to the excellent talent being developed in this country, it is beyond reason to suppose that, considering local faults in trapping and controlling the ball and weaknesses in team work, a St. Louis team could hope to cope with the best professional events in England—teams as intensively developed as are our own major league baseball clubs.

There would be no harm in making the test; but in advance it would be well to keep down premature cranial swelling. St. Louis is supreme in a race composed of third-rate foreign contenders of ancient vintage. No strictly first-class British soccer star would be permitted to leave England, even supposing he desired to. We get the "has-beens." Unless the war took a terrible toll of football man power in the British Isles, the Scullins probably would be to the British international leaders what Kansas City would be to the world's champions in baseball.

Breakers Ahead.

ST. LOUIS, having proved that its players are the best in this country, there is some danger that their very excellence may be the undoing of the city's soccer supremacy, a supremacy demonstrated both financially and in a playing sense ever since the Missouri district joined the U. S. F. A. Two firsts and a second in three years of cup ties is SOME record.

Eastern promoters, at last convinced against their will that St. Louis talent can hold its own with the second or third rate material imported from the British Isles, may cease to go overseas for talent. Major league players cost too much, over there, today. What is more natural than that the Eastern soccer managers should raid St. Louis and take our Tate Bradys and Cliff Bradys and Bechtolds by paying them unheard-of sums?

Why We May Escape.

THERE are two things that will militate against this for some time. One is that the good income derived by players from local games, plus the pay from industrial concerns employing them, would make their cost to outsiders rather steep.

Another is the known antipathy on the part of St. Louis players to lining up on teams which are made up of part American and part old country men. Brady, Brannigan and Ratican already have found that mixed elevens mean cliques, wrangles and fighting.

It is a subject of wide comment that the Todds refuse to "feed" Center Forward Harry Ratican, except under pressure, although he is the best goal-shooter and probably the very fastest man on the team—not to mention the fact that he is captain.

Friction developed during the recent cup game here when Ratican openly gave Maguire a "bawling" out for not obeying orders to pass to him (Ratican).

However, even in case of mild raids on its talent, St. Louis' soccer supply is almost inexhaustible, the municipal league furnishing much of its new talent.

The great thing needed in this country is first-class coaching talent from the old country, to give our growing municipal players the good points of the old country system to graft onto American speed and aggressiveness.

Other Producing Centers.

ST. LOUIS is not the only football-producing center in this country. In Fall River, New Bedford and other Eastern districts they are taking a leaf from the Mound City's book and building up home talent.

But it would really be detrimental to the United States' football growth if the influx of old country soccer players were stopped. This country's football is too young, and too few coaches today are familiar enough with the finesse of ball trapping and control to transmit a satisfactory "American style" to posterity.

With fresh talent coming annually from Europe, America's weakness in the departments mentioned would constantly be kept before it.

Hoppe's Training For Championship Match Most Rigid

Conditioning of Billiardist Attended by C. C. Peterson and Jake Weber.

Despite the fact that there is a great difference between billiards and boxing, no boxer ever worked more rigidly for a world's championship contest than has Willie Hoppe for his title match with Jake Schaefer, which starts at Chicago tomorrow night. The former 18.2 champion was in St. Louis for 10 days and during that time he followed a regular course of training.

The match with Schaefer, which will be played at Orchestra Hall, will be of 1500, 500 points to be played tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

During his conditioning period for the match, Hoppe had two trainers. One was C. C. Peterson, local fancy shot expert, who handled the billiard end. The other was Jake Weber, trainer of the New York A. C. and Fordham University, who looked after Hoppe's physical condition.

Program Is Mapped Out.

When the practice started a regular program was mapped out as follows:

8 A. M.—Short walk and breakfast.

10 to 12.—Billiards. One hour at making various shots and the other hour in a match with Peterson.

12.—Lunch and long walk, usually of 25 blocks. This was followed by a shower bath and a rubdown which lasted a full hour. Then an hour of sleep, followed by recreation.

5 P. M.—Dinner and then rest until 8 o'clock.

8 to 10 P. M.—Billiards. After this another rubdown and to bed.

That's quite a program, but not one day was a change made. Peterson, who has been with Hoppe for quite a number of years, asserts that Hoppe has trained for his coming match in a far different manner than for previous title encounters. Formerly Hoppe would train while on the road, playing under adverse conditions. But championship conditions prevailed here. The cloth on the table on which the pair worked was changed three times. Never before has anything like this been done.

Expects to Regain Title.

Hoppe, of course, is confident that he will regain the title. But Hoppe does not talk a great deal. However, Peterson will talk. He will tell you that in the coming match against Schaefer, those who watch the games will see the "real Hoppe" in action. He is so confident that Hoppe will regain the championship that he says there is a chance "that they will make a gambler out of me."

Concerning Hoppe's last practice here, Peterson asserts that he never saw such billiards. "He made a run of 329 and showed the most perfect game of 18.2 I ever saw," remarked Peterson. Hoppe followed his 329 total with a run of 200, which for the match gave him an average of better than 125, he having missed on his first two turns.

Hoppe played sensationally here. He played something like 7200 points in practice with Peterson and had a grand average of 80. His best run was a 498, while his high single average was 200 for a 600-point game. He had four runs over 400; four over 300; three over 200, and 12 times he went past the century mark. Which is quite a bit of billiards even for practice.

New Form of Training.

"The training Hoppe has gone through for this match with Schaefer is new stuff in the billiard world," said Peterson. "We have been making him eat his evening meals early so that he will have a few hours to digest it, and start play on a practically empty stomach. In this way his nerves will be steadier and his eyes clearer. He has practiced under real championship conditions and will not be bothered by the fast table on which the match will be decided."

Hoppe, accompanied by Peterson and Weber, departed for Chicago at noon yesterday. The challenger will take part in one more practice workout before the match. This will be at Chicago this morning. After that he will rest and keep his mind off billiards until the match starts.

Herbert Levis, who refereed in the tournament in which Hoppe lost his title, has been named to referee the coming match.

Word from R. B. Benjamin, Hoppe's manager, who has been in Chicago more than a week, states that there is a heavy advance sale of tickets for the championship contest.

HAVANA MEETING CLOSES TODAY WITH CUBAN DERBY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Cuba, March 25.—Racing at the Cuban capital closes tomorrow with the running of the Cuban Derby over a route of one mile and one-eighth, with nine candidates likely to go and with the Monahan pair, Rebuke and Quesada, prospective favorites. Record of Tumbles in The Grand National Was Nearly Equaled Friday

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LIVERPOOL, March 25.

WHEN 27 out of 32 starters fell on the first lap of the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree last Friday, it looked as if the disastrous record of the race for tumbles would surely be equaled—the more so as two more candidates fell on the second lap. Three horses kept their ffet and these were the placed horses at the finish. Sergeant Murphy, owned by Stephen Sanford of New York, was remounted after a fall and finished fourth, two furlongs behind the winner.

The worst spill came at the canal turn where the horses, who were running loose after falls, cut diagonally across the field, riderless, and knocked down nine horses at the canal jump.

Southampton, the favorite, and Shaun Spanadah, second choice, fell at the first jump. Music Hall, the winner, was held at 14 to 1 in the betting; Drifter, who was 18 to 1, was second, and Taffytus, 66 to 1, was third. The time was 9:55 4-5.

The record for spills in the race was in 1911 and 1921, in which eyars Glenside and Shaun Spadah espectively were the only horses of the field not to fall. There were 32 starters in the race won by Glenside and 35 in that won by Shaun Spadah.

Mrs. Mallory Is Winner in Final

Captures Fifth Successive Indoor Tennis Title, Defeating Miss Bancroft.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 25.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York won her fifth national woman's indoor tennis championship today. In the final match of the title tournament on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club, she defeated Miss Leslie Bancroft of Boston, 7—5, 6—1.

Mrs. Mallory and W. T. Tilden II of Philadelphia successfully defended their national mixed doubles title, defeating Mrs. Frank H. Godfrey and R. Norris Williams II of Boston, 6—2, 7—5.

Today's program brought to a close the first national tournament under the new arrangement of "Seeding" the draw. Form ran exceedingly true, the only upset of the week having been furnished by Miss Bancroft, who eliminated Mrs. Jessup in the semifinal round of the singles yesterday.

For a time this afternoon, it appeared that Miss Bancroft would further confound the critics by taking the measure of Mrs. Mallory, but she faltered when within a point of winning the opening set and thereafter was completely submerged. It was Miss Bancroft's first appearance in a national tennis final.

Miss Bancroft earned 13 points in the opening set, as compared with seven for Mrs. Mallory. The local competitor also outpointed her opponent in earned points, in the second set.

Williams, a former national singles champion, used his new steel strung racquet throughout the mixed doubles tournament and at times brought off shots for which he is noted. The scintillating work in this contest, however, was furnished by Tilden, whose tremendous reach and agility enabled him to turn the tide definitely in favor of his side. For the most part Mrs. Mallory's role was that of a spectator, for Tilden poached to his heart's content and piled up 30 earned points in the 20 games, only four of which went to deuce.

After the match Tilden defeated Williams, 6—2, 6—2, in an exhibition singles contest.

TIA JUANA MONOPOLIZES RACING UNTIL APRIL 1

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 25.—Be Frank has been declared out of the Tia Juana Cup, to be run over the two-mile route tomorrow, and Sunnyland will represent the Bronx stable in the race. Planet probably will be favorite. Although Manager Coffroth has announced that the meeting will be continued beyond the 125 days originally set as the limit, tomorrow's stake will be the last important fixture of the meeting.

With the closing of Havana Sunday, Tia Juana will be the sole track running in the United States or Mexico next week, until Bowie opens next Saturday.

EISEL AND DILS MEET IN MAT MATCH TODAY

Gus Eisel, Missouri middleweight wrestling champion, will oppose Homer Dils of Stuttgart, Ark., in a best two out of three falls match at the Rock Springs A. C. this afternoon. This will be the second meeting between the two. Eisel was the victor in the other match, winning the first and third falls in 1:06 and 20 minutes, respectively. Dils won the second in 15 minutes with a toe hold.

Three other matches have been arranged to complete the schedule.

Wray Brown Wins Title.

Wray Brown, tennis star, won the handball championship of Washington University, defeating Walter Goldman in straight sets, 21—11, 21—7 and 21—17, in the final. Forty players started in the competition for the title.

County Baseball Teams Shaping Up For Coming Year

University City High With Nine Regulars Back Has Best Prospects.

Baseball practice has started in earnest at the eight schools which are represented in the County High School League. Ideal weather has helped the coaches greatly. A lack of dependable pitchers is the chief worry and this department is being given a great deal of attention.

Coach Roberts of University City has nine letter men back, six of them regulars. The Delmar avenue school should be able to gain an early lead in the league race. Kortkamp, pitcher, and Crawford, catcher, will be the battery Roberts will use again this season.

Shorty Simpson, this year's captain, will again play short. Simpson was a star last year. Katz will no doubt perform at the middle base. Jones, Murchison and Frazier are being groomed for the garden duties. Besides these regulars Roberts has a long list of good material.

Webster and Clayton Strong.

Webster and Clayton have had wonderful turnouts and the mentors of the schools are looking over their prospects with satisfaction.

Coach Charles A. Roberts of Webster has already issued a call for track specialists and the team will be minus some very good baseball material. Colmey is in charge of the baseball team. Only two letter men are out and Colmey is building around a fair battery. Gene Verling, who after a late start on the hill, won the greater amount of the team's games last season, is back and looks like the best bet.

Fred Stark, who performed at third last year, has been doing well at short. Walter Ingamells, the hardest hitter in the league last season, has been declared ineligible. His loss will greatly cripple the team. Stoute will be retained as Verling's understudy and Lacey will hold down the keystone station. Greene, a football and basketball star, will catch. A lively battle is being waged for the other berths.

Late Start for Maplewood.

Coach Hall, at Clayton, is getting together a group of athletes who loom up as pennant contenders. Al Hayes will, no doubt, gain the pitching assignment. Gruiniger is scheduled to work behind the plate. Rassmussen is showing well at first. McGrath looks like the best of the recruits at second. Miller, Art Hayes and Beckman are other good-looking candidates.

Maplewood, under Fischer, has been handicapped by a late start, due to the prolonged basketball season. Shanks will do the tossing for the blue and white. "Red" Newberry, basketball sensation, will don the mask and pad. Farrow, a new man, has shown well in the early workouts.

At Kirkwood, Coach Tillman is working with a fair sized squad. Only four of the men are regarded as regulars. Fitch will be used on the hill. He has a fair assortment of curves and wonderful control. Keisler, who guarded third base last season, will again cover the far corner. Sturdy will draw the catching job. Martin, Sanders and Russell are doing well in the workouts. Maschoff, who has taken part in all branches of sport, will not try for the baseball team.

Wellston also threatens to break into the top division.

This Season's Schedule.

April 7—Clayton vs. Maplewood, at Maplewood; Ritenour vs. Wellston, at Wellston; University City vs. Ferguson, at University City; Webster vs. Kirkwood, at Kirkwood.

MAX FLACK, OF CUBS, TO BE OUT 2 MONTHS

Max Flack, Chicago Cub outfielder, who was hit on the right side of the head by a pitched effort delivered by Percy Jones at the Bruins' training camp in California recently, will be out of the game for two months, as a result of a fractured skull, according to the physician attending the player. Flack is at his home in East St. Louis.

An X-ray photo of the injury indicates that no operation will be necessary.

Australian Tennis Team May Lift Davis Cup, Tilden Says

Formidable Combination Led by the Still Dangerous 45-Year-Old Veteran, Norman Brookes, Is Composed of Players of Top Rank, World's Champion Avers.

By William T. Tilden II.

Tennis Champion of the World, 1920-21.

DOWN in the land of the kangaroo there is a wizard. This man is the greatest tennis player of all time, and even today, at 45, Norman Brookes stands pre-eminently the finest court general and tactitian in the world. This is the man who will lead the strongest group of players that Australia can place in the field in the invasion in quest of the Davis Cup.

Norman Brookes is through as a singles player. He has slowed up so that I do not look to see him take part in the singles matches for the cup, but he is still the greatest doubles genius in the world. If Brookes plays doubles one thing is certain: the team that defeats the Australian doubles combination must do so by clean, hard hitting, for Brookes reduces the errors of his team to a minimum. The chance, probably the last that we shall have to see Brookes in action, is one that no tennis student or follower should miss.

Gerald Patterson is so well known in America and so deservedly popular that I need do little more than indicate a few changes that have taken place in his game to show what a dangerous player he now is. His terrific service and magnificent overhead are as great as ever. His forehand ground stroke has gained in control and is but slightly diminished in speed. The peculiar loop backhand, the most glaring defect that I have ever seen in the game of a first-class tennis player, is now a thing of the past. True, he uses it at times, but he relies on a defensive chop that, while not dangerous, is at least reliable. Patterson has improved and all who saw his famous five-set match with Johnston in the 1919 national championship can realize that this means only the best tennis will defeat him.

James O. Anderson is a player who has not yet quite fulfilled his great promise. He has a game of superlative features and obvious weaknesses. His forehand, with its peculiar flat, snap drive, is a deadly weapon. He hits with equal ease to either side while disguising the direction. His first service, when it is going in, is very hard to handle, but his second is almost a pat. His overhead is severe and usually reliable, but his volleying is erratic and not too aggressive. He is a tremendous worker and tries for shots that seem hopeless, yet he reaches them. He is a hard fighter and capable of standing a tremendous amount of play.

Pat O'Hara Wood, Norman Brookes' doubles partner, is the other member of the team. This young star is one of the great doubles players of the world, having held the world's championship once and the Australian title twice or three times. He is a magnificent volleyer and one of the quickest men on his feet that I have ever seen. He drives well fore and backhand off the ground, but lacks the speed that is vital to a great singles player. It is the infinite resource, much of which is due to playing with Brookes, that makes Pat Wood so dangerous in doubles. He is a clever, steady getter until an opening presents itself, then he hits for the opening with a decision that is surprising.

It is a dangerous team that Australia is sending on the quest for the Davis cup this year. If ever they are to lift the cup they stand a great chance now. It will certainly be Brookes' last appearance as a player and possibly his last even as captain. Mr. Tilden's next article will be "The English Davis Cup Team."

PIKER NINE DEFEATS ALUMNI IN OPENING PRACTICE GAME, 6-5

The Piker baseball team, playing its first practice game of the season, defeated an Alumni team, 6—5, at Francis Field yesterday afternoon. Both teams used varsity batteries in order to give Coach Davis a line on his material.

The game, which went seven innings, brought out a fair brand of ball. The work of the Piker pitchers was particularly impressive and gives every reason to believe that Coach Davis will have a first-class flinging staff. De Bolt, Trautwein, Scurlock and Fries, all left-handed, showed plenty of stuff.

The Pikers have been playing Conference baseball only two years. They have won the title and finished second another time. This year's outfit seems to be potentially stronger than that of last year.

The Pikers and Alumni will play another second practice game next Saturday afternoon at Francis Field.

BIG THREE DELEGATES DISCUSS FOOTBALL, BUT NOT FOR PUBLICATION

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Whether or not the need exists for a change in the policies and practices of handling college football to avoid the emphasis criticised by President Lowell of Harvard was discussed at length at a meeting of the joint committee of Yale, Harvard and Princeton men at the Yale Club today.

LONDAS HERE FOR BOUT WITH STRANGLER LEWIS AT COLISEUM, MARCH 29

Jimmy Londas, the Greek heavyweight champion, arrived in St. Louis yesterday to put on the finishing touches for his championship match with Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's champion, at the Coliseum next Wednesday night. Londas came from Chicago, where on Thursday night he defeated Ivan Linow, the Russian giant, in the eleventh round of a bout scheduled to go 15 rounds.

The match Wednesday will be the third bout between Londas and Lewis and the Greek boy proved a hard nut to crack for the champion before being defeated. On Thanksgiving day, 1918, they wrestled two hours and 24 minutes in Canton, O., before Lewis gained the verdict. Two years later in New York they went two hours and 24 minutes before Lewis gained the first fall. The Greek grappler broke 28 headlocks in that match only to succumb to the twenty-ninth.

Londas is of the opinion that he has improved since that match, while he is of the opinion that the champion is not any better. Londas is only 26 years of age today, while Lewis is several years older.

CURRAN'S BRIDE GETS $100,000 CLAIM ON ESTATE

Former Stenographer Also Receives $1000 in Cash by Agreement Made Before Marriage Thursday.

SHE WAIVES DOWER RIGHTS TO PROPERTY

Bridegroom Is 56 and Bride 31 — He Divided First Wife's Estate Among 7 Children in 1921.

By the terms of an ante-nuptial agreement, filed yesterday in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, Miss Mae E. Gahan, who was married Thursday night to Con P. Curran, president of the Con P. Curran Printing Co., received $1000 in cash and a $100,000 claim against Curran's property in full discharge of all claim of dower right. She formerly was Curran's stenographer.

By the agreement, Mrs. Curran, who is now with her husband on a honeymoon in the East, waives all dower rights to Curran's property in consideration of the $100,000, which is to be paid to her in annual installments of $10,000 within 10 years after his death, should she survive him. The agreement is also a waiver by Curran to claim any of his wife's property.

Agreement Made Before Wedding.

The agreement was entered into Thursday, before the marriage, and is signed "Con P. Curran" and "Mae E. Gahan."

Mrs. Curran was a stenographer for seven years in the offices of the Con P. Curran Printing Co. and Curran became attentive to her after his first wife's death, May 15, 1920. The first Mrs. Curran was Miss Margaret A. Scully. They had seven children, Mrs. Frank W. Corley, Mrs. Sol W. Gross, Mrs. John L. Tierney, Miss Marie June Curran, Con P. Curran Jr., J. F. Curran and E. Philpot Curran.

Curran is 56 years old and his bride 31. The marriage took place in the parochial house of the Rev. Father Stephen at Normandy, St. Louis County. A member of the family said none of Curran's children attended the wedding.

Made Division of Property.

In January, 1921, Curran made a division of his property among his sons and daughters, dividing that part of his property which he said he had considered as belonging to his first wife. He kept a controlling interest in the printing company of which he is still the active head.

Members of the family declined to comment on the marriage, and those who spoke of it at all said they knew nothing of the bride except that she had been Curran's stenographer. The application for the marriage license gave her residence as Pine Lawn. Curran resides at Normandy.

Miss Marie June Curran, who lived with her father at Normandy, announced a few days ago that she would make her future home with her sister, Mrs. Gross, at 4426 Lindell boulevard.

COURT REMANDS CASE OF DOCTOR AGAINST FATHER

Suit Involving East St. Louis Property to Be Re-tried Before Jury.

The Appellate Court has reversed and remanded the case of Dr. Francis W. Kirsch of St. Louis against his father, Dr. Francis Kirsch of East St. Louis, for possession of the premises at 1513 State street, which was tried in the City Court and in which the trial judge instructed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the son.

The property involved is a flat building said to be valued at about $16,000. Dr. Francis Kirsch and his son contributed a sum toward the erection of the building, and the father alleges that he was financially interested to the amount of $3500. He transferred the property to his son by giving him a quit claim deed. The son then sought to gain possession of the building and filed a forcible entry and detainer suit against his father. The Court gave a verdict in favor of the son. During the trial the father testified that when he transferred the property to his son there was a verbal agreement whereby when the property was sold, each was to receive the amount he had invested in the building, and the remainder was to be divided among Dr. Kirsch and his two sons. The son denied there was such an agreement, and the Appellate Court states that the trial judge erred in not permitting the jury to decide whether or not there was any such agreement.

Printer by Day, Robber at Night.

By the Associated Press.

PORT HURON, Mich., March 25.—Frank Davis, 20, compositor for a local newspaper, robbed downtown stores at night and in the daytime set head lines telling of his own exploits, he told Prosecutor Henry Baird today. Davis, who was arrested today, admitted, according to the prosecutor, a series of 30 robberies. He said he entered the stores "for fun" and that he divided the proceeds with an unknown accomplice, for whom the police are searching.

Mother Searches Bowery for Missing Son Who Is Heir to Million

Each Night He 'Phones Her but Never Goes to Her—Another Mother in Poverty Ready to Start West to Find Son.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—A mother, cultured and refined, with all the resources at her command that immense wealth can give her, today combed in vain the dark, ill-smelling Bowery for her lost son, heir to a million.

At the same time another mother, worn by ill health and hard work, put together her few threadbare clothes and with firm confidence prepared to start into the West to find her missing boy.

The first mother, Mrs. Graham Duffield of Chicago, has almost lost her faith. For eight days she has hunted. Today she visited the haunts of the wrecks who have failed in the battle of life and dropped out of sight into the cauldron known as the Bowery, but she failed.

The second mother, Mrs. Mary Whittager, of Henry street, is supreme in her confidence. Her boy is somewhere in the West and on Tuesday, in accordance with her announcement earlier in the week, she will start out of New York in a poor, bedraggled motor car which she bought with her savings, carrying everything she owns, and ready to back her belief against the hardships of the road.

Mrs. Duffield, whose 17-year-old son, Gordon, rebelled against school life in Plainfield, N. J., and fled to the Bowery, let her presence be known on her arrival and the boy responded with telephone calls. But always after telling her he would come to see her, failed. Tonight his mother appeared on the verge of a breakdown and feared approaching illness would force her to return home tomorrow.

Phone Call Traced.

She picked up her search today at the point it left off last night, when a telephone call from her son was traced to a drug store on First avenue.

Frail, still youthful in appearance, despite the worry she has experienced, she entered squalid rooming houses, rubbing shoulders with unkempt men, some of whom leered at her. She never flinched.

She mingled with the flotsam and jetsam of Bowery life, asking if anyone had seen a boy of five feet, nine, dressed in a faded blue suit.

At one restaurant she was told that a boy answering the general description of Gordon has washed dishes there—up to yesterday. At a squalid 25-cents-a-bed rooming house, not more than two blocks distant, she was informed that a youth who might have been Gordon had slept there—up to last night.

At another restaurant, a sleepy habitue roused himself enough to tell the mother that "A kid like that guy was down ter the Cooper Union," but at Cooper Union, which for eight days has been the center of her frantic search, there was no sign of the boy.

Gordon, so he told her over the telephone, is trying a personally conducted experiment. He wants to experience real poverty to see what it is like.

Promises Each Night.

"But he wants to be good to me, I know he does," she said. "I can't believe he wants to make me suffer. He may be starving. I know he has no money. If he would only come and see me."

And Gordon, with an air of bravado, breezes into a pay station telephone—a different one each night—calls up his mother, calls her "Moms," promises to go at once to her hotel, and see her—and each night leaves her to sit with eyes glued on a door which never opens.

In a Henry street tenement a different scene. A few days ago Mrs. Whittaker told her neighbors that at last she had put away enough pennies to make possible her journey into the west and tonight she was pushing forward with her plans just as determinedly as if the west was only as big as a central park.

Four years ago, in Oklahoma City, she separated from her boy Sidney—who is two years older than Gordon. The lad drifted up to the wheat belt and his mother to New York.

Will Go to Kansas City.

Seated in her tiny tenement, up three flights of stairs, she told a newspaper man that when she drives out of New York on Tuesday, with just a few gallons of gasoline in the tank of her car, she first is going to strike out for Kansas City.

For it was from Kansas City that Mrs. Whittaker last heard from her son. Later she received word from an employment agency in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, that a boy resembling her son had signed from there for work in the Kansas and Missouri wheat fields. So, after Kansas City, Sapulpa.

"I can find him," she said. "I know I can, because I know it in my mother's mind.

"You see this picture. It is the last one I ever had of him. I am taking it with me. Somehow when I see it, I feel more certain he is going to be waiting for me."

The heart of Henry street goes with her. More than that, a small purse will be given her, for although the neighbors can afford only a few pennies, they are gathering those that can be spared.

NATIONAL GUARD FUND DEBATED IN HOUSE

Attempt Also to Be Made to Increase Rivers Appropriation in Army Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Restrictions in the army appropriation bill on the allowances for various national guard activities brought on a concerted movement today on the part of a bloc of House members to increase some of the items. The day was spent in debate, and in the adoption of several amendments and the rejection of a number of others, with the result that a vote on passage of the bill went over until next week.

Before a final vote is reported an attempt will be made, Chairman Dempsey of the Rivers and Harbors Committee said, to increase the amount carried in the bill for continuing work on various river and harbor improvements during the coming fiscal year. The measure provides approximately $27,000,000—slightly more than the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau. The army engineering corps, however, asked for $43,000,000. Dempsey said he would endeavor to have the higher figure inserted in the bill before it goes to the Senate.

Drill Appropriations Increased.

The House, by a close vote, adopted an amendment which would make $11,000,000, instead of $9,000,000, available for armory drill pay for national guardsmen during the coming fiscal year. Another amendment approved increases from $800,000 to $1,002,800 the allowance for feeding and care of national guard horses and mules, and eliminated from the bill a provision that the number of these animals could not exceed 4000.

Despite the contention of representative Crago, Republican, Pennsylvania, that the bill did not carry enough funds to send all men in the National Guard to camp next summer, the House refused to approve an amendment which would have increased the amount carried for this purpose from $6,500,000 to $8,000,000. Chairman Anthony of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, said the amount provided in the measure as drafted would be sufficient for the entire National Guard. During discussion of the National Guard provisions, Representative Dallinger, Republican, Massachusetts, aroused by a plea from Chairman Madden of the Appropriations Committee that House members support the recommendations of the sub-committee which drafted the bill, declared too much power was being placed in the hands of three members of the subcommittee.

$20,000 for Road.

"If we are not to discuss provisions of the bill and make changes wherever we see fit," Dallinger declared, "there is no use spending any time considering the bill at all. It might as well be read through by the clerk and sent on to the Senate and President."

After turning a deaf ear to a number of requests for increases in the amounts allotted for various activities and reluctantly agreeing in a few instances to increases, the House, without hesitation adopted an amendment by Representative Alice M. Robertson, Republican, Oklahoma, the only woman member, providing $20,000 for improvement of the road between Fort Gibson and Fort Gibson National Cemetery, Oklahoma.

AWARD FOR FIRE ENGINES IS DISAPPROVED BY COMPTROLLER

Supply Commissioner Oetting Had Refused Lower Bids on Ground of Maintenance Cost.

Comptroller Nolte yesterday disapproved the award made by Supply Commissioner Oetting to two Ohio companies to supply two pumpers to the Fire Department. Oetting had decided not to accept the lower bids, made by the American-La France Co.

The Seagrave Co. of Columbus, O., and the Ahrens-Fox Co. of Cincinnati, bid respectively $12,005 and $11,700; the American-La France Co. bid $11,200 on each pumper. But Oetting said he had been informed by Chicago officials that the American-La France apparatus cost twice as much to maintain, so he accepted the other bids.

The Citizens' Supervisory Committee, that passes on the expenditure of bond issue money, disapproved the award. Chief Panzer and Chief Mechanic Koeln of the Fire Department recommended the American-La France apparatus, on the ground that the members of the department are familiar with it.

OPINION ON DRIVERS' BILL

City Counselor Holds License Measure Would Not Be Legal.

City Counselor Caulfield yesterday in an opinion to the Legislative Committee of the Board of Aldermen held that the bill now before the committee requiring all drivers of motor vehicles to be licensed by the city and undergo a physical examination as well as a practical test of their competency as drivers would not be legal if passed as it conflicted with the State laws governing the licensing and registering of automobile owners.

The St. Louis Safety Council advocated the passage of the bill.

CHINESE LOTTERY IS REPORTED HERE

Tickets Bear Chinese Characters —Distributed From Cigar Stores and Saloons.

Americans who like to take a chance have the opportunity of a lifetime to take one in the Chinese lottery which is reported to be operating in St. Louis. In the Chinese lottery you not only take a chance on what your ticket will bring, but also on what it says.

The ticket is on the square—five inches each way. There is no way of telling which is the top and which the bottom. China boy knows how to hold it right side up and read it backward, starting at the lower right hand corner, which is as near as a Chinaman can come to starting at the beginning of anything.

With an American it is three to one that he will hold it upside down or sideways, the thing only having one top, against one bottom and two sides, but those who have tried to read it say it doesn't really matter how you hold it, as it is as easy to read upside down as right side up.

There are 85 characters on the ticket. Persons who have bucked them say they are all bad characters. It is understood that, freely translated, they spell: "You lose."

The Way to Lose.

The way to lose is to buy a ticket for $1 and pick out 20 of the characters and mark a ring around each. That means that you pick the 20 as a winner. Twenty chances to win and 65 to lose. When the drawing is made the 20 winning characters are designated. If not more than three of yours are right you find that the odds have been increased to 78 against you, as you have to have four winning characters to get anything. For four you get $2, and from that up the prizes increase in ratio, with the capital prize, $4000, going to the one who has picked 20 winning characters. It is not disclosed whether anybody has ever won the capital prize.

The tickets are being sold at soft drink places, cigar stores and drug stores, it is said, but when Detective Roach of the gambling squad made the rounds with one of them, in quest of information, everybody with one accord said they were not handling laundry.

So over to Hop Alley he went and communed with Joe Sing, who knows the tricks of the gambling Chinee.

Nice Distinction Is Drawn.

"What is it?" he asked, as he handed the ticket to Sing.

"Him?" queried Sing, "him Chinee lottlery."

"What mean, Chinee lottery," says Roach.

"Him allee slamee Melican lottlery," pigeoned Sing, "cept Chinee lottlery hones' lottlery."

In which, it will be observed, Sing revealed that he does not think highly of American lotteries, although he didn't exactly say so.

Sing explained the workings of the Chinese game, as explained above and added that the five characters in the center of the ticket spelled the name of the lottery. Persons who are curious to know the name of it are referred to the five characters in the center of the ticket.

Sing said the lottery was a popular pastime on the west coast as far as Montana, but he was not aware that it had reached St. Louis. If it had, no matter, because "no chleat in Chinee lottery, all pay in, all pay out."

MORE BREAD, FEWER FLOWERS WANTED BY RUSSIAN SINGERS

Nervousness Due to Hunger Cause of Voice of One Opera Star Changing From Tenor to Baritone.

By the Associated Press.

ODESSA, March 25.—Presents of wood, bread or meat are more welcome than flowers to Odessa's grand opera singers. Among the gifts to the orchestra conductor of the famous playhouse at a recent benefit in honor of his 25 years' service, was 25 pounds of firewood. The singers received salaries the best of which, 1,500,000 rubles monthly, will pay for only a pound and a half of bread daily.

Many of the best singers have left, but there are still 35 principals, with a chorus and ballet.

The voice of Kanchan, well known as a tenor, has recently changed to baritone, due to nervousness growing out of lack of food. His salary is 15,000 rubles a day, the price of a half pound of bread.

MEN NAMED BY 28TH WARDES

Republican Club Holds Election at the Hamilton Hotel.

The Twenty-eighth Ward Republican Club held its annual meeting at the Hamilton Hotel last night and elected Walter J. G. Neun president. Other officers elected were six vice presidents, John B. Edwards, retiring president; G. A. Pauley, Foster Brown, Henry E. Oppenheimer, Mrs. George V. Stoddard and Mrs. John B. Edwards. Clarence T. Case was elected treasurer, Carroll W. Harlan, secretary, and Joseph B. Thomas, former City Supply Commissioner, chairman of the precinct organization.

Thomas reviewed the work of the club since 1907, and in accepting the office said that no other clique in the Twenty-eighth Ward, referring to a newly-formed Republican club in that ward, could do the old organization's thinking.

About 100 persons were present, and indorsed the 85-cent school tax rate.

ARTIST TO PROFIT BY DEMAND FOR POUNDS

Refused $25,000 U. S. Coin, Offered to Take $20,312 English, but Now He Gets $26,650.

Members of the Capitol Decorations Commission, who smiled at the demand of Frank Brangwyn, the English painter, specifying his remuneration of paintings in English pounds, instead of American dollars, are now not quite sure that the fluctuations of exchange have not turned their smiles to ashes.

When the commission made up its mind that the one artist in the world to "do" the dome of the new capitol in Jefferson City was Brangwyn, Arthur Kocian, the secretary, wrote him asking him to accept the commission.

Brangwyn replied from London: "No." The commission continued to press him and named $25,000 for four very large works for the pendentives as a figure to make the discussion more definite.

Brangwyn replied that the money offer was a secondary consideration. The chief reward, so far as he was concerned, was the opportunity to do something for a public building which would come under the eye of generations to follow. He said he would do the work for 6250 pounds.

The commission snapped up the offer. It was very low, reckoned in the market price of Brangwyn works. Then as it examined the offer, it began to smile. The 6250 pounds asked by Brangwyn, translated into American dollars, at the then prevailing rate of exchange was only $20,312, or nearly $5000 less than they had offered to pay. Just another evidence—artists have no conception of money matters.

So Brangwyn was paid his earnest money of 750 pounds and the commission urged State Auditor Hackmann to buy up enough English money at about $3.25 a pound, then the approximate rate to retire the entire contract when it should become due. The State Auditor said he could not make that use of State funds.

That was in November, 1919. Today the English pound is hovering about $4.40. If it mounts no higher, the idiosyncratic Brangwyn, when paid in full, will receive $26,650, and the State will pay $6338 more than if it would have invested in pounds in 1919.

However, the commission believes that Brangwyn will make nothing on the contract. He has been put to the great expense of a studio sufficiently large to handle the canvases which are 45 feet wide at the top, 15 feet at the base and 28 feet high. Besides, he will furnish the canvas, transport them to the United States and put them in place on the Capitol's walls.

In making a second contract recently, to paint eight other pictures to go in the Capitol dome in spaces beneath his pendentives, Brangwyn clung to his pay in pounds, asking £9000, approximately $40,000.

EARLY ACTION ON RADIO BILL URGED

President Williams of World Press Congress Calls at White House on Matter.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The quietude which has marked the status of legislation to extend use of Government radio facilities for the handling of press and commercial messages since enactment several weeks ago by the Senate of the House naval radio bill in amended form was broken today.

Chairman Greene of the House Commerce Committee, and of the House conferees announced that the conferees would not accept the measure as amended by the Senate to extend use of the facilities for five years.

Confer With President.

Walter Williams, president, and J. W Brown, secretary, of the Press Congress of the World, called at the White House and discussed the matter of use of radio facilities for press purposes with President Harding. They said they found the President "very sympathetic" towards such use.

Representative Bankhead of Alabama, one of the Democratic managers, said today he was urging immediate action, and that some effort ought to be made to reach a compromise. Reports of a deadlock were denied by Greene and others who pointed out that the question of compromise had not advanced meeting stage. Although managers have been insisting tion, no meeting, Greene said, be arranged until House have decided definitely among selves with respect to changes.

Williams, who is dean of the versity of Missouri, School of nalism, intimated on leaving White House that President ding was favorable toward early tion on the legislation.

Situation Explained.

Press dispatches from Hawaii, the Philippines and trans-Pacific points are now naval radio and Williams, who returned from a four months in the Orient, said that its tinuance of this privilege mean that the English and papers and other publications Far East would receive their dispatches entirely through channels. Williams said it was sential in the American interest have use of the naval radio for the trans-Pacific press dispatches.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Uncomfortable Beds Actually Shorten Life

The medical correspondent of the London Times in a long article on "health" shows that the bedspring plays a vital part in our health and happiness. In fact the inference is obvious that an uncomfortable bedspring, by preventing complete rest, by distorting the spine, actually invites nervous diseases and constitutional weakening, which results in untimely death.

This is by no means an exaggeration. The ordinary coil, woven wire or national spring prevents complete bodily reaction, because it exerts undue pressure on certain parts of the body, and fails to properly support other parts. Sleep on such a spring must be restless, for the body must keep adjusting itself to obtain relief from strained, cramping positions it must assume.

The remedy for this serious state of affairs is to select a bedspring that accommodates the body, instead of the body having to adjust itself to the bedspring.

Such a bedspring is the Rome De Luxe. This bedspring cannot sag into a great unyielding hollow. It absolutely moulds itself to every part of the anatomy, supporting every portion gently and easily. Two bodies lie in perfect comfort on a Rome De Luxe Bedspring, as the spring literally flows about the contour of each body, instead of depressing into one great hollow in the center. Furthermore, the smooth construction of this bedspring saves wear and tear on mattresses.

For your health's sake investigate the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. A comparison will prove it the superior of any bedspring at any price—in scientific workmanship and luxurious comfort. How Detroit's $40,000,000 Mayor Is Solving Problems That Generally Vex American Cities, Including Our Own St. Louis

James Couzens' Latest Triumph in Forcing Detroit United Railways to Surrender Its Property to City Which Will Operate Street-Car Lines Attracts Nation-Wide Attention to City's Executive, Who Attributes His Success to Fact That He Is So Rich Nobody Can Charge Mercenary Motives Against Him.

By Charles W. Wood

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

DETROIT, March 25.

THERE used to be three ways of running a city. Now there are four. It is just possible, in the near future, that there will only be one, for methods which actually succeed have a way, in spite of opposition, to supplant those which don't. Readers who have been in Detroit recently will know what I mean. For the benefit of the others I had better explain.

First, there is the good, old-fashioned way of politics. The voters are divided into parties and the parties into district organizations. The district leader who can do the most favors to the greatest number of voters acquires the greatest prestige; and the more favors he does the bigger his bank roll grows. Where he gets it is the secret, but he's a jolly good fellow, which nobody can deny. As for the voters, they aren't always so jolly; they need the turkey he sends around on Thanksgiving, and the pairs of shoes he sends on Christmas, and they surely do appreciate it when the leader "fixes things with the Judge," and so it comes to pass in the fullness of time that the city gets another kind of administration.

This is a "business" administration. The public service corporations are sick of paying graft. They want to be honest hereafter and have honest officials let them alone. So they elect a clean element, a moral element, a respectable and trustworthy element, who can be depended upon to keep down the taxes and vote franchises only to the very best people in town.

And, thirdly, there is the "scientific" administration. It doesn't often happen; but it frequently gets into the thinking of the people. Best administrators who have made a study of city government; men who won't blunder and won't be swerved one inch from the straight path of duty; men who are so devoted to the correct theory of government that they can't be influenced either by "grasping interests" or by popular clamor; men who are so superior to the common herd that, even if they don't give us what we think we want, will give us exactly what we ought to have. A fatal weakness of such governments, however, is that they never last long enough for us to get an idea as to whether they are of any use or not.

Here Is the Detroit Plan

The fourth way—the new and hitherto unheard-of way—is the Detroit way. Here's the formula: First, frame a city charter under which a Mayor might conceivably run a town, if he is a big enough man and cares to undertake the job, and then wish the job, with all of its responsibilities, onto such a man as "Jim" Couzens.

James Couzens had none of the usual qualifications. He knew no more about politics than most men know about the Einstein theory. Also, he had no political principles. He was elected on a municipal ownership platform, but he couldn't discuss the theory of municipal ownership to save his neck. That is, he couldn't discuss it as a principle; but he could talk rotten railroading as a concrete fact. As for conservatism or liberalism, paternalism or laissez faire, he hadn't the slightest idea where he stood. But he was strongly in favor of clean streets, pure water and adequate traction service; and he had the reputation of getting very busy on any job he ever undertook.

Mayor Couzens is not popular in the old political sense; it is his freedom from entangling friendships, in fact, which makes him the Mayor that he is. Even the people don't love him; they simply worship him. And he doesn't love them; he simply works for them—and works like the very devil. He isn't given to expounding theories; he is given to doing jobs and letting the jobs do the expounding.

The Detroit U. R. Surrenders.

A few hours after my interview with Mayor Couzens a notable conference took place in the city hall. It was the formal surrender of the Detroit United Railways to the City of Detroit. It was a complete capitulation, the climax of a quarter of a century of municipal war. Until Mayor Couzens appeared, however, the D. U. R. had fought with dollars and the city had fought with words. Results: All that could be expected. But now there was a different kind of fight. When "Jim" Couzens set out to fight a railroad, he didn't go to the dictionary for his ammunition. He knew there was only one thing with which he could fight a railroad, and that was another railroad. So he built one—under fire. He didn't have much of anything to build it with, but he built as much of a railroad as he could. Then he dug himself in and started to "nibble," after the fashion of Marshal Foch. And two years later the Detroit municipal railway had bitten off so much of the D. U. R. system that the D. U. R. formally surrendered.

JAMES COUZENS.

By the terms of the contract signed that day practically the whole trackage and equipment of the D. U. R. becomes the property of the City of Detroit. The consideration was $19,850,000, all of which is needed to cover bonded indebtedness, leaving nothing to distribute among the stockholders. Two years ago the best price the D. U. R. would offer was $31,500,000. A special election must be held April 17 to ratify the contract; but no one seemed to think that it would not be ratified and all Detroit seemed to be acclaiming the victory of Mayor Couzens.

City Proud of Couzens' Independence

There were a few backers, to be sure, but they were "the interests." Isn't that funny? Can you imagine an American city where the ruthless municipal government has so steam-rolled the "interests" that all the "interests" can do is to flatten out and squeal? It is usually the city which flattens out and squeals, but Detroit is the only city to date that has ever thought of electing such a Mayor. It isn't a Socialist city, remember. James Couzens is one of the biggest capitalists in Michigan. It is not a city run by municipal experts, for Mayor Couzens has made blunder after blunder which set the experts tittering. Moreover, Mayor Couzens is not a soft sentimentalist whose catchwords have appealed to the fancy of the rabble; and he is not a man whose connections are such that great groups could normally be lined up in his support. He is probably the most hard-boiled business man in the State of Michigan. Worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $40,000,000, he was never known to give a nickel to a panhandler; and although he is the main patron of a children's hospital and contributes small fortunes frequently to such institutions as the Community Fund, he is neither a member nor a contributor to any church.

Said one Detroit clergyman, the Rev. William L. Stidger, whose enthusiasm for the Mayor was unbounded: "Jim Couzens doesn't line up with anybody. He lines up with everybody in general by telling everybody in particular to go to hell. Look around and you will see that I am right. He hasn't a soul with him—except the City of Detroit."

One question was uppermost in my mind when I entered the Mayor's office. It was not the question I had come to Detroit to ask, but it was the question which no New Yorker could repress.

"I want to know," I said, "how you get away with it."

"Because I'm rich," was his answer.

Can you beat it? Didn't I tell you that he is unlike any officeholder that ever was? But he wasn't boasting about his wealth; the fact is that he is almost ashamed of it. But not even his bitterest opponents charge him with self-seeking in public office, and the Mayor attributes this unique advantage to his economic independence. His independence, however, is notoriously more than economic.

Solving Detroit's Employment Problem

"I assumed office," he told me, "under very favorable conditions. I wouldn't have run for Mayor otherwise. The new charter reduced the City Council from 45 members to nine and gave the Mayor complete responsibility over every department. Just about as far as law would allow it I had a free hand.

"But even the best of laws," he added, "get in the way of action. When I became satisfied, however, that the people wanted anything done we went ahead and did it. There were no waits, no delays. We just went ahead with the work. During the hard times, for instance, we spent $1,300,000 for poor relief. The Council was sensible enough to see that it would never do to appropriate any such amount of money ahead of time for such a purpose—it would amount to advertising for the poor to come to Detroit. So the administration spent the money as it was needed and the Council followed with the necessary appropriations."

Yes, Mayor Couzens got action. The municipal railway project is the outstanding example. Municipal ownership had been authorized in Detroit, but a bond issue has to be ratified by at least 60 per cent of the voters at a special election, and the voters had shown their willingness to bond the city to buy the D. U. R. In the D. U. R. system, however, there were some miles of connecting track, the franchises of which could be revoked at any time. There was not enough track to form a system, however, and municipal ownership of these lines would be a dead loss to the city. Mayor Couzens had the situation surveyed and discovered that an addition of about 60 miles might connect these lines so that the city could have a sort of system of its own. He secured another election and induced the voters to authorize the building of these 60 miles. And the day following the election men were laying track, and within one year of actual working time thereafter the whole 60 miles had been laid. It was a relatively simple proposition then to revoke the day-to-day franchises, and in short order the D. U. R. had a formidable competitor.

Advocates of municipal ownership all over the country are now besieging Mayor Couzens to come and lecture in their cities. Uniformly he refuses; I doubt that he himself knows why. He says he would rather be home with his wife and children, which is doubtless true, but I can't help thinking that there is another reason. For James Couzens is a man of action, not of theories, and he knows that there is no magic in municipal or any other kind of ownership. The right sort of railroad, in his eyes, is the one that is working most. Passengers, he knows, cannot ride on a title deed.

"The problem stumps me," he said, characteristically. "Somebody has been spoofing you if they told you we had solved it. I don't know how to solve it. I scarcely know how to begin. But if someone can show me a way by which unemployment can be abolished I am ready to put a good large piece of my fortune into the solution.

"Can you imagine anything more cruel?" he asked. "That is, anything short of being physically crippled, so that one cannot do any of the things a human being wants to do? Just think of it! First a man is denied an opportunity to work. Then, instead of being compensated for this restriction, he is punished for it."

Got $30,000,000 From Ford

Couzens was terribly unhappy at one period of his life; that was just after he retired from the Ford Motor Co., receiving from Henry Ford something over $30,000,000 in cash. Suddenly he had nothing to do. He could spend his money or give it away, but what did that amount to? He started a bank to occupy his energies, but the job was too small to occupy them long. Within a few months that bank became one of the leading institutions in Detroit and didn't need his attention any longer.

"I was just plumb out of a job," he told me. "But I wasn't being punished for it. Can you visualize the position of the workingman—out of a job and therefore sentenced to starvation, not only of himself, but of his wife and children?"

"But what did you do for the unemployed?" I asked.

"Not much," he said. "We found what jobs we could. We established a city employment bureau and had an unemployed registration. We padded the Street Cleaning Department until the streets became almost disgracefully clean (we made it a point always to get work out of a man after we had hired him), and we started every sort of public works for which we had appropriations and a few more for which we hoped to get appropriations. We took a part of the punishment from the unemployed and visited it upon the taxpayers, but we didn't fool ourselves into thinking that we were solving the problem. I cannot see how government can solve it. Industry must eventually do the trick, and when American industry once gets together on the problem I believe it will find a way. As it is, the Detroit Employers' Association accomplished much more than did the city government."

"Panned" by the Critics, Too

Which is also characteristic of Mayor Couzens. He didn't tell me that it was he who took the initiative in getting the Detroit employers together on the job; it remained for the chairman of the Employers' Association to tell me that. Mayor Couzens was a member of the unemployment conference in Washington. Upon his return he got busy, not only as Mayor but as a power in Detroit. At his suggestion the employers generally adopted a system of "staggering" employment. A concern running at half capacity, then, instead of laying off half its employes, might employ them all three days a week. There was no compulsion, no definite agreement. Each employer decided for himself just what he could or could not do. But Chairman Culver showed me figures which surprised me.

At the city registration of unemployed, less than 20,000 registered, and Chairman Culver estimated that there were not more than 35,000 all told. Immediately after this concerted action on the part of the employers, however, reports of the association showed that the employers were hiring approximately 35,000 more men than they would normally have hired under these business conditions. But he, too, agreed that Detroit had not solved the problem. With the first depression, he said, the unattached single men left the city by the thousands, and in spite of census figures showing an increase in the population, he estimated that there had been an exodus of 75,000.

Enough was accomplished, however, to furnish a fine lot of campaign material to any Mayor who happened to care for it; but campaign material is the last thing that Mayor Couzens seems to want. He didn't use it in the Ford Motor Co., where he got his training, and he can't see any reason why he should learn to use it now.

"The papers are panning you," his advisers frequently report. "What are you going to say in reply?"

Generally he says nothing. Sometimes he looks over the panning and is inclined to agree with the panners. "Tell them I said I'm right once in

Miss Goldman is writing this series from Russia fresh from a two years' stay in that mysterious land which she has just succeeded in quitting. After being barred from several other countries through the influence of the Bolsheviki, she has been permitted to enter Sweden. It will be recalled that the writer, who is known throughout the world an an anarchist, was deported to Russia together with Alexander Berkman by order of the Department of Labor in December, 1919. Her narrative is one of deep interest. In breaking her silence of more than two years she reveals in the series beginning today her disappointment in and disillusionment by the Russian experiment.

DURING my two years in Russia articles repeatedly appeared in the American press purporting to be interviews with me. Some have had it that I had reformed, that I no longer believed in revolution, and that I had come to see the necessity of government. One paper even had a sensational story about an American flag in my room, to which, it claimed, I had erected a shrine. In short, that I had become a regular Sunday school teacher, doing penance for my sins against the American Government.

All that is, of course, sheer nonsense. I was never more convinced of the truth of my ideas, never in my life had greater proof of the logic and justice of anarchism. But I did not give interviews to anyone, for the very simple reason that it took me more than a year to get my bearings in the tragic situation of Russia. I considered then, and still consider, that the Russian problem is entirely too complex to speak lightly of it. That is precisely why I find most of the books written by people who had been in Russia a few weeks, or even months, so superficial.

So long as I myself was groping in the dark I would not express a definite opinion for publication. But even if I could have spoken authoritatively, I still would not have spoken to newspaper men. I found it necessary to observe silence so long as combined imperialist forces were at the throat of Russia. Moreover, 30 years' experience with newspaper men has not convinced me of their veracity, though, of course, there may be exceptions.

"Time for Silence Passed."

Now, however, the time for silence has passed. I therefore mean to tell my story. I am not unmindful of the difficulties confronting me. I know I shall be misappropriated by the reactionaries, the enemies of the Russian revolution, as well as excommunicated by its so-called friends, who persist in confusing the governing party of Russia with the revolution. It is, therefore, necessary that I state my position clearly toward both.

Four years ago the United States Government made a felon of me, robbed me of home and hearth, and in the dead of night forced me out of the country. All that, because I dared raise my voice against the World War. I had then called attention to the cataclysm which the war would bring in its wake, the destruction and ruin, the awful loss of human life. That was my crime.

Now many former supporters of the war have come to see that those of us who refused to be swept off our feet by the war hurricane were right—that the war was created, backed and financed by charlatans and their dupes for the benefit of the war lords. The "war for democracy," the "war to end war," has plunged the whole world into a veritable inferno.

MISS EMMA GOLDMAN.

From a snapshot made just before she was put aboard ship at Ellis Island, N. Y., for deportation two years ago.

King Hunger, the grin of death on his lips, stalks through every land, while those who have grown rich and powerful on the spoils of human carnage, pay court to this, the mightiest of kings. Not content with the butchery of millions and the devastation of half the earth, they have turned the world into a fortress, a political dungeon, where the liberties of the people—gained through centuries of struggle—now lie fettered and prostrate.

Democratic America, once the "land of the free, home of the brave;" England, formerly the asylum for the rebels of the world; France, the cradle of liberty, and many lesser countries—what are they now but a spiritual desert?—their once hospitable doors locked and sealed.

"A Graveyard of Thought."

Only the groans and curses of the multitudinous unemployed, and the cries of the political and labor prisoners, disturb the silence of the graveyard of thought and ideas.

Verily the war lords have reason to be proud of their handiwork. They have succeeded in their conspiracy. Their iron heel is firmly planted on the neck of the peoples of the world. They have succeeded. Yet not quite. There is Russia.

That fair couple—High Finance and Militarism—did not reckon on the Russian revolution. How "indecent" of the Russian people to light a conflagration which might have fired the whole world with revolution just at the very time when war profits were running high and imperialism was so confident of complete triumph! Something had to be done to crush "that brazen thing," the Russian revolution.

During the war with Germany the hypocritical slogan was: "We do not wage war against the German people but against German militarism and imperialism." The same hypocritical refrain was heard in the unholy crusade against the Russian revolution: "Not against the Russian people but against the bolsheviki—they have instigated the revolution and they must be exterminated."

The march on Russia began. The interventionists murdered millions of Russians, the blockade starved and froze women and children by the hundred thousands, and Russia turned into a vast wilderness of agony and despair. The Russian revolution was crushed and the bolsheviki regime immeasurably strengthened. That is the net result of the four years' conspiracy of the imperialists against Russia.

How did such a thing happen? Very simple. The Russian people who alone had made the revolution, and who were determined to defend it at all costs against the interventionists, were too busy on the numerous fronts to pay any attention to the enemy of the revolution within. And while the workers and peasants of Russia were laying down their lives so heroically, this inner enemy rose to ever greater powers. Slowly but surely the bolsheviki were building up a centralized state, which destroyed the soviets and crushed the revolution, a state that can now easily compare, in regard to bureaucracy and despotism, with any of the great Powers of the world.

From my study and observation of two years I am certain that the Russian people, if not continuously threatened from without, would have soon realized the danger from within and would have known how to meet that danger, as they had the Kolchaks, Denikins and the rest of them. Free from imperialist counter-revolutionary attacks, the people would have soon become aware of the true tendencies of the communist state, its utter inefficiency and inability to reconstruct ruined Russia.

The masses themselves would have then begun to infuse new life into the paralyzed social energies of the country. Would not the people have erred and blundered, even as the bolsheviki have? No doubt they would. But they would have, at the same time, learned to depend upon their own initiative and strength—which alone could have saved the revolution.

Why Revolution Is Doomed.

It is entirely due to the criminal stupidity of some of the ex-revolutionists who clamored for intervention, and to the imperialists who financed and backed intervention, that the Russian revolution, the greatest event of centuries, has been lost. To them it is also due that the bolsheviki, wrapped in the cloak of persecution, can continue to pose as the holy symbol of the social revolution.

I mean to expose this fatal delusion. Not because I have lost faith in the revolution, but because I am convinced that coming revolutions are doomed to failure should what Lenine himself called military communism be imposed on the world. Not because I have made peace with government do I intend to show what the Bolshevik regime has done to the Russian revolution. Rather is it because the experience of Russia, more than any theories, has demonstrated that all government, whatever its form or pretenses, is a dead weight that paralyzes the free spirit and activities of the masses.

I owe this to the revolution, nailed to the bolshevik cross, to the martyred Russian people, and to the deluded of the world. I mean to pay my debt in full, regardless both of the misappropriation of my words by the reactionaries add of villification by blinded radicals.

Bryan and Evolution.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer could humbly acknowledge the operative existence of a Creator after working out their scientific theories of evolution, it ill becomes William Jennings Bryan, of uncertain scientific attainments or qualifications, to attempt to read out of the Christian religion with his mere ipse dixit those who cannot agree with him on the Hebraic story of creation.

Bryan evidently thinks evolution is a theory designed to displace the Biblical story of creation. He thinks one cannot be an evolutionist and at the same time believe in a Creator. But after all, what is evolution? Is it an act or a method? I hold it is a method. It is a how, not a what. It is simply God's way of creating things. Through scientific explorations Darwin, Spencer, Huxley believed they had hit upon a discovery of the method of creation commonly called evolution. The great Charles Drummond was a contemporary of these men. Bryan evidently forgets that Darwinism did not upset the faith of Mr. Drummond, who despite his evolutionism was still able to co-operate with Dwight L. Moody in his great Scottish revivals.

Darwin's theory of evolution explains a wide area of biological and anthropological facts which the simple creation-story of Genesis does not even pretend to explain other than through allegory and the "mythus" or traditional race-story passed on by primitive people. Simply because the original Hebrews were not evolutionists is no proof that evolution is not so.

Take the oak tree. If the Creator at a single moment produced a 500-year-old oak, we would all marvel and call it a miracle. But is it any less a marvel, or less miraculous, that the Creator should go about in His infinite way to arrange for an acorn that in 500 years would grow into a 500-year-old oak? Would even Mr. Bryan think the Creator was less creative for making an oak tree in time out of an acorn, instead of making the oak tree immediately without the acorn? This perfectly illustrates Mr. Bryan's whole contention.

Mr. Bryan's conception seems to be that unless we acknowledge God created the first human pair full-fledged in one single, sublime creative act at one moment in time, in some way we are robbing the Deity of His majesty as Creator. According to Genesis itself, it took the Creator six days to create the world. Why six days, instead of six seconds? Then, what difference does it make if it took six trillion years to create the world by evolution? What is time with God?

Will Mr. Bryan undertake to say that the Creator stopped his creative work when He produced the pithecanthropus or ape-walking man? Did God create the pithecanthropus and from then on evolved that species into the human being we know today? If so, why not evolution before the pithecanthropus?

Evolutionism is a scientific faith, demonstrable as such, that does not by any manner of means exclude the Creator from His creation, as Henri Bergsen in his "Creative Evolution" has so splendidly proved. In this realm of scientifico-religious faith is Bryan to be taken for Gospel, when in the more mundane certitudes of the science of money his pronunciamentos have been rejected by 99 per cent of the world's economists?

What Mr. Bryan is now doing is merely harking back to an exploded mechanical theory of creation that explains nothing of the beauty and the grand mystery of life. Instead of God being at work all through the ages, even now, producing a better man, physically, morally and spiritually, through evolvement, Bryan's theory would compel us to believe that some thousands of years ago God went to work and produced a single type of man, long since deteriorated, and then when finished with His mechanical task, rested from his labors on the seventh day and apparently has been idly resting ever since!

As an evolutionist, I prefer to believe that God always is at work to improve His creation and even the Church now is but one of the divine agencies He has created to bring about the human and the spiritual improvement of our race whose destiny is an immortality that shall be worthy of the Creator.

A Reed That Won't Wither.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN reply to Mr. W. B. Steiner's article "A Reed That Won't Wither," I wish I could shake hands with the author. If we had more men in office like Mr. Reed (who is a true American, seeking to do that which is best for his country regardless of the consequences), this country would not be in the shape it is today. I should like to see James A. Reed run for President in 1924. Myself and a lot more true Americans who are looking for the betterment of this country would certainly cast our vote for "The Reed That Won't Wither."

MR. HARDING'S OPPORTUNITY.

The ratification of the four-Power treaty was not accomplished by skillful parliamentary generalship, nor by the force of any outstanding personality. The compulsion of facts, buttressed by public sentiment, explains it. The people realized that the policy of remaining aloof from the rest of the world, of refusing to participate directly in the maintenance of peace and good will, had to be renounced.

The ratification, therefore, is a triumph of common sense and, one might say, national sportsmanship; but it is, in a way, a personal victory for Mr. Harding. The qualities ascribed to him when a candidate—tact, discretion, amiability and native shrewdness—were all more or less displayed in his connection with the effort. He made a frank bid for Democratic support in selecting Senator Underwood as one of the delegates to the conference and the wisdom of that choice has been handsomely vindicated.

It is fair to say, we believe, that Mr. Harding today is at the highest point of prestige since his inauguration. He has demonstrated his capacity for getting things done. If that is not the final proof of leadership it is at least an evidence of real efficiency. And that the present moment offers Mr. Harding an opportunity to assume commanding leadership cannot be questioned.

The difference between Congress and the President on bonus legislation is a matter of record. Mr. Harding has said he could not approve a measure which did not include a provision for financing the obligation. That he considers any bonus bill, however drawn, unwise at this time cannot be doubted. Every argument he offered in his original request for postponing such action is pertinent now. The opposition of the Secretary of the Treasury, authoritative by reason of Mr. Mellon's knowledge of the country's resources and requirements, obviously expresses the President's sentiments.

Admittedly it would call for courage for Mr. Harding to advise decisively against a bonus bill, but lack of courage cannot fairly be charged against him. Is it not because self-assertiveness is foreign to his methods and, doubtless, distasteful, that he is apparently marking time? Whatever the reason, the fact is indubitable that Mr. Harding would come pretty close to greatness if he should frankly and fearlessly say that the Government cannot assume any avoidable indebtedness at this juncture, that retrenchment must be the administration watchword in justice to the whole American people, including the former service men.

His announcement that he would veto such an unwise measure would vest in Mr. Harding that moral leadership which all the great Presidents have exercised.

McGLYNN'S DEDICATION.

The Springfield (Ill.) Chamber of Commerce, naturally enough, wished to take advantage of the presence of Frank McGlynn, the now celebrated Lincoln impersonator of the Drinkwater play, in Springfield, Lincoln's pre-war residence, to film Mr. McGlynn, in stage makeup, on the streets and in the old courthouse of the city. The motion picture companies were similarly enthusiastic, while the public, of course, would have liked to have seen the pictures.

But the promoters of the enterprise had made a miscalculation of Frank McGlynn. Here is an actor—we do not say there are not others—who takes his part seriously. He notified the Chamber of Commerce that his respect for the man he simulates on the stage was too great to permit him to parade himself in the part as desired.

McGlynn's decision needs no defending. Nor is there anything to warrant comment in the project to have him photographed in the original Lincoln setting. The impressive thing in this incident is the tremendous earnestness of Mr. McGlynn and his complete devotion to the spirit of the man whose life he lives on the dramatic stage. His impersonation is more than an art. It is a spiritual dedication not unlike that of the Oberammergau players.

It is a higher and more lasting influence on his generation than could be any number of reels of pictures taken for commercial or publicity purposes.

EDUCATING THE ALIEN.

Some important changes are contemplated in our naturalization laws in a bill reported to Congress by Chairman Johnson of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. The first one is a provision for the annual registration of all resident aliens in their local districts, with an annual fee of $5 for a certificate. The proceeds of registration, estimated at $15,000,000 a year, would constitute a "citizenship instruction fund," to be apportioned to public schools to defray the cost of instruction of aliens in the English language and in the duties of citizenship. The method of seeking naturalization by an application, vouched for by two citizens, with an examination in open court as to the fitness of the applicant, would be supplanted by a recommendation from the Bureau of Citizenship, based upon satisfactory progress in the instruction to be provided.

The requirement of registration on the part of aliens in peace time is not novel and it may serve many useful purposes. The proposal to levy a light tax to be used for their own benefit can meet with no objection. Any plan which looks to a more thorough understanding of our form of government and the rights and duties of citizens under it on the part of aliens incorporated into the nation, will meet with general approval.

We have absorbed millions of aliens into our citizenship in the past who have little or no conception of our history and traditions and to whom our form of limited constitutional government has no political meaning. Many of these know of but one method by which to correct the abuses of government, the method of their ancestors in monarchical Europe—a resort to violence. They do not know that our Constitution has provided a substitute in orderly processes founded upon the will of a majority expressed at the polls. It is largely from this class that groups are recruited to propagate fallacious political doctrines antagonistic to our established order.

If this land of ours is to continue to be the refuge of the oppressed of Europe the perpetuity of its free institutions is dependent upon an appreciation of their wisdom and worth on the part of those shaping its destiny.

IS MEXICO TO BE RECOGNIZED?

The confidence in high official Mexican circles of the early recognition of the Obregon Government by the United States, as reported a few days ago, is confirmed in a measure by a letter from President Harding to John Barrett, former director-general of the Pan-American Union. The letter says "there is really no difference of opinion as to what is necessary to restore former friendly relations. * * * The only hitch anywhere is one of proceedings."

Though somewhat vague, Mr. Harding's statement may reasonably be construed as meaning that the substantial matters of dispute between the two Governments have been composed. If that is correct, there should be no hesitancy on our part, on the score of precedent or propriety, about terminating the present anomalous situation and giving Mexico her position before the world as a friendly neighbor.

How earnestly our material considerations urge such action does not have to be discussed. The technical estrangement is costing American industry and trade dearly. The moral considerations are equally insistent. For instance, Mr. Harding's letter was by way of answer to Mr. Barrett's communication reciting the results of an informal canvass of South America as to what the United States might best do to promote friendliness on this hemisphere and advance Pan-Americanism. The concensus was recognition of Mexico.

It is a weighty matter, the recognition of Mexico. If the obstacle is, as Mr. Harding's letter says, merely "one of proceedings" there should be no further delay.

IF it is true, as Vachel Lindsay says, that we are to pronounce calliope to rhyme with hope for another hundred years as a consequence of P. T. Barnum, one cannot help wondering how long we are to renounce the theory of evolution as a consequence of Mr. Bryan. Judging by the communications we are receiving, the influence of Mr. Bryan upon our own time is fully as great as Barnum's influence was in the nineteenth century, and it would not surprise us if it proved to be greater. A poem of the Bryan era:

THE DESCENT OF MAN.

Some years ago a Dutchman found
Part of a skull-cap in the ground
  That caused his brain to think;
He named it Pithecanthropus,
And gravely stated that for us
  It formed the missing link.

There was no doubt within his mind
When after adding to his find
  A thigh bone and two teeth—
Our real progenitors were found:
Those four things proved his doctrine sound
  And crowned him with a wreath.

There is one thing that science proves:
(Though it may run along in grooves
  With little recompense):
We don't know when the world began,
And will not, had the race of man
  Less learning and more sense.

And we do know Biblical laws,
The best our race for any cause
  Has ever found, or will;
Though what professors say is truth
It will not help our nation's youth
  Belief in God to kill.

The theory of man's descent
To us is quite irrelevant—
  It would not help the race
If it was proved beyond a doubt
Our present forms were brought about
  Through evolution's pace.

Let "Science" study Holy Writ,
And Darwin's ultra-study quit,
  Though it may be a bore.
Its inspiration may provide Something to make them satisfied,
  And possibly—know more.

She naturally suffered in stature among the Powers which were in consonance with it, and no delegation could have saved her from that.

Mark Twain on His Missouri Birthplace.

I was born the thirtieth of November, 1835, in the almost invisible village of Florida, Monroe County, Missouri. I suppose Florida had less than 300 inhabitants. It had two streets, each a couple of hundred yards long; the rest of the avenues mere lanes, with rail fences on either side. Both the streets and the lanes were paved with the same materials—tough black mud in wet times, deep dust in dry.

Most of the houses were of logs—all of them indeed, except three or four; these latter were frame ones. There was none of brick, and none of stone. There was a log church with a puncheon floor and slab benches. A puncheon floor is made of logs whose upper surfaces have been clipped flat with the adze. The cracks between the logs were not filled; there was no carpet, consequently if you dropped anything smaller than a peach it was likely to go through.

The church was perched upon short sections of logs, which elevated it two or three feet from the ground. Hogs slept under there, and whenever the dogs got after them during the services the minister had to wait till the disturbance was over. In winter there was always a refreshing breeze up through the puncheon floor, in summer there were fleas enough for all.

A slab bench is made of the outside of a sawlog with the bark side down; it is supported on four sticks driven into auger holes at the ends; it has no back, and no cushions. The church was twilighted with yellow candles in tinted sconces hung against the walls. Week days, the church was a schoolhouse.

There were two stores in the village. My uncle, John A. Quarles, was proprietor of one of them. It was a very small establishment, with a few rolls of "bit" calicoes on half a dozen shelves, a few barrels of salt mackerel, coffee, and New Orleans sugar behind the counter, stacks of brooms, shovels, axes, hoes, rakes and such things here and there, a lot of cheap hats, bonnets and tinware strung on strings and suspended from the walls; and at the other end of the room was another counter with bags of shot on it, a cheese or two, and a keg of powder; in front of it a row of nail kegs and a few pigs of lead, and behind it a barrel or two of New Orleans molasses.

If a boy bought 5 or 10 cents' worth of anything he was entitled to half a handful of sugar from the barrel; if a woman bought a few yards of calico she was entitled to a spool of thread in addition to the usual gratis "trimmins."

Everything was cheap—apples, peaches, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes and corn, 10 cents a bushel; chickens, 10 cents apiece; butter 6 cents a pound; eggs, 3 cents a dozen; coffee and sugar, 5 cents a pound.

I do not know how prices are out there in interior Missouri now (1877), but I know what they are here in Hartford Conn. To wit: Apples, $3 a bushel; peaches, $5; Irish potatoes (choice Bermudas), $5; chickens, $1 to $1.50 each, according to weight; butter, 45 cents to 60 cents a pound; eggs, 50 cents to 60 cents a dozen; coffee, 45 cents a pound.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publi newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

A WELL INSURED NATION.

From World's Work.

LAST year more than thirteen million life insurance policies were issued in this country. These represented more than eight and a half billion dollars of new insurance. Since 1918, when less than five billion of new insurance was written, there has been a phenomenal growth in life insurance in this country. In 1919 it reached nearly eight billion, in 1920 more than ten billion of new life insurance was written. This was a reflection of the great increase in the income of the people and could not be expected to continue but it is also an evidence of a widespread intent to save for the future welfare of dependents. Looked at from that angle this growth in life insurance is most encouraging. Twenty years ago the amount of new insurance written annually was two billion dollars; ten years ago it had not yet reached three billion; now it is nearly three times that amount. According to life insurance officials, this insurance belongs to forty million people. An appreciation of that ownership on the part of forty million voters, or of any considerable part of them, would be ample protection against the spread of Socialism in this country, for bolshevism must break against the rock of man's unselfish concern for the future of his children. An appreciation of this ownership would also engender better public sentiment toward the properties represented by these assets. Public utility companies have come to realize this fact and are now encouraging investment in their securities on the part of those they serve. Life insurance company assets are divided between investments in real estate mortgages, railroad securities, government and municipal bonds and loans to policyholders about as follows: Mortgage loans, 32 per cent; railroad securities 26 per cent; government and municipal bonds 30 per cent; policy loans, 12 per cent.

COAL MINERS AND THE PUBLIC.

From the Buffalo Express.

THE United Mine Workers of America has decided to strike on April 1, unless the miners are granted a six-hour day and a five-day week. Moreover, the anthracite miners must be given 20 per cent more pay than at present and the bituminuous miners' basic scale must not be interfered with. * * * Shortening of the work-day, and the adding of a second holiday each week, are justified by spokesmen for miners on the ground that the six-hour day would be actual working time and not time from pithead to pithead. This explanation is advanced as a virtual concession to the public which must foot the bill. It will appeal to most folk as naive when the same public recalls that it must spend from 30 minutes to one hour and a half morning and night getting to and from work in the great cities of the country. The coal buying public will want to know why the employers in other industries are not paying for time spent traveling between homes and scenes of labor. Fred Mooney, secretary of the West Virginia district of the United Mine Workers of America, told his fellow delegates to the Indianapolis convention that the union would be committing suicide if it adopted the provision for a five-day week and six-hour day. Mooney may or may not be a prophet. But whether or not the provision is the first step to suicide for the organization, the five-day week and the six-hour day never will become a fact until the miners are able to produce coal on that basis more cheaply than it is being produced today. There is a limit even to the patience of the coal buying public.

Artists' Guild Ball, With Old King Cole and His Retinue and Knights and Ladies Trooping Out of Romantic Past in Medieval Costumes, Is a Pompous Spectacle—Pantomime and Specialty Dances Feature of Affair.

ARTISTS' frolics, walls decorated in the colorful insignia of the Middle Ages, and knights and ladies dancing out of the romantic past, characterized the annual ball of the Artists' Guild last night at the guild's home on Union boulevard. About 150 guests attended, chiefly the artists and their friends. The guild balls always open with a spectacle and entertainment before some sort of royal court, as did this one last night, when old King Cole and his retinue started the merrymaking by marching through the ballroom and assembling on the stage. There King Cole called for his celebrated pipe, his bowl and his fiddlers three, and there were thrown in for good measure a pantomime, specialty dances and the feats of a juggler.

George S. Johns was King Cole, and Mrs. Eugene Senseney was queen, though no claims were advanced that King Cole ever had a queen. When the King called for his pipe, it was a prodigious pipe that appeared; and as he opened it, out popped little Eloise Wells, a wee smoke wreath of a Miss, who fluttered over the floor in a pretty dance. The fiddlers three were Percy Werner, first violin; W. C. Mc[illegible], second, and Manuel Hahn, last. The pantomime was entitled "In Amour Bounde," and pictured the [illegible] perils of courtship even in the Middle Ages. At any rate, Dr. Eugene Senseney, as a troubadour, serenaded a tower in a window of which presently appeared a beautiful lady, Mrs. Frederick C. Carpenter. His ballads were irresistible, and she agreed to fly with him; but when she set down some of the things she thought she ought to take with her, including a canary, a dog and a bowl of goldfish, his passion abated and he tried to get out of it. However, he was indeed bound by honor, or so the young lady thought. She promptly pulled the bellrope and rang the castle bell, which brought her father and three knightly brothers. The troubadour on his side summoned from the bush three faithful friends, and the matter was decided in a tilting match such as persons in difference had recourse to in those times. The troubadour lost. His friends were slain in a battle which fairly wrecked Union avenue, and in the end the beautiful lady led him triumphantly off with a yellow ribbon, his back bent beneath the burden of her livestock and hastily improvised trousseau.

The father was Dr. John Beverly [illegible]binson; the knights, George [illegible]ore, Norman Bailey, D. R. Fitzpatrick, Walter Bringhurst, E. M. [illegible]sman and Drs. Ralph Thompson and W. W. Cherry. It is possibly not known who the King was on the occasion when the fabled blackbird pie was served, but at the guild ball King Cole got the pie, and out of it came a troupe of dancing blackbirds who did a medieval dance under direction of Miss Alice Mar[illegible]. The birds were Mmes. Norman Bailey, Laurence Ewald, Ralph Thompson and W. H. Hammond, and Misses Alice Herthel and Margretta Brown. The second specialty dance was by Dr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Goetz. Paul Fries provided the incidental music for the pantomime, and the juggler was Takura Kaji[illegible].

The marriage of Miss Charlotte Lawnin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Lawnin of 5138 Washington boulevard, and James E. Radio Craze Has Struck Capital and Many Notables Are Installing Sets—Gen. Pershing One of Wireless Telephone Fans.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The radio craze has struck Washington society hard. From President Harding to nearly every member of Congress the chat of the day deals with "aerials," "condenser," "tuning in," and other jargons of the fans. Secretary of the Navy Denby, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, Rear Admiral Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations, and General Pershing are a few of the notables who spend spare moments with the ear phones strapped over their heads "listening in."

A former St. Louisan, Capt. C. L. Hussey, has just been appointed naval attache to the American Embassy in London. Capt Hussey had a brilliant war record and his wife, who was Miss Harriett Brownson, daughter of Admiral Brownson, is very popular in Washington society.

Former Governor of Missouri and Mrs. Joseph Folk gave a dinner on Wednesday night in honor of Mrs. Charles Wetmore, who is shortly to sail for Japan to spend several months there. Twenty guests were entertained, among them being Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Gibbons of Princeton, who are house guests of the Missourians.

Mrs. Sherman Downs, of Saratoga Springs, gave a tea recently at the Everglades Club. Included among her guests were Mrs. Louis Vallier of St. Louis.

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was here during the week. The grill of the Poinciana closed Saturday and the Cocoanut grove witnessed its last dance last Thursday, and the hotel closed its doors Friday morning. B. Elkins who is entertaining extensively in her honor.

Miss Beatrice Henderson, who is at school at Simsbury, Conn., will come to Washington on Saturday to spend the Easter holidays with her grandmother, Mrs. John B. Henderson. Mrs. Henderson entertained a company of 10 at dinner on Friday at Boundary Castle.

Mrs. Cleveland Newton, wife of Representative Newton of Missouri, is in charge of the arrangements for the large reception to be given next Friday night at the New Willard by the Women's Alliance of All Soul's Unitarian Church in honor of Chief Justice William Howard Taft and Mrs. Taft. A dance will follow the exercises.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant entertained at dinner on Thursday in honor of her granddaughter, Princess Bertha Cantacuzene. Ten guests were present and afterwards Mrs. Grant took the party on to the home of Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood, who was giving a dance in honor of her niece, Miss Antoinette Graves. The Princess Cantacuzene will speak on "Real Russia and Her Suffering Refugees" at a meeting of the National Cathedral Committee next Wednesday.

Coolidge Boys Home for Vacation.

The two Coolidge boys, John and Calvin Jr., who are here on a vacation period visiting their parents at the New Willard Hotel, are mad on the topic, however, they divide their attention with airships and radio. These lively members of the vice presidential family have thoroughly explored every nook and corner of Washington. They appreciate the many sight-seeing possibilities of the national Capitol, but frankly admit it is not as nice as "home," home being their Northampton (Mass.) house.

The only fly in the ointment is found in the invitations forced upon them by well meaning Washington hostesses. Mrs. Coolidge laughingly tells a story of hearing Calvin Jr. answer the telephone one morning. "Yes, this is Calvin Coolidge, no, not Master Coolidge, Calvin. There was some conversation on the other end of the wire, then Calvin said in a horror-stricken tone, "O, no, no thank you, we never do. Mother would not let us. Good-by." The lad rung off hastily and confided to his puzzled mother that some lady had invited him to come with his brother to tea.

The return of President and Mrs. Harding from their Florida vacation enlivened the Lenten round of social events. Both appeared greatly pleased with their trip and proudly displayed sunburn. A mountain of mail awaited both. Mrs. Harding had a number of special appointments for tea during the week, notably on Saturday when she received the 50 women correspondents of papers at the Capitol.

One of "Press Girls."

As Mrs. Harding says, she "is one of the press girls," having filled in on practically every woman's post on the Marion Star when it was under her husband's management as editor. She always takes particular pains to be considerate of newspaper women and to facilitate their work in every way possible. In this way she greatly resembles Mrs. Champ Clark. Mrs. Clark was ever keenly alive to the best interests of the newspaper women of the Capitol and frequently helped them at state functions to get the details of names, etc. She sought out newspaper friends of hers after the Jessie Wilson-Francis Sayre wedding at the White House and gave a number of valuable details of the ceremony.

All of Washington repaired to the Persian Legation on Wednesday to celebrate with the Minister and legation staff the new year which is so beautifully described by several of Persia's master poets. The legation was attractively decorated for the occasion and all enjoyed the unique Persian native dish, the "polow," a concoction of rice and chicken, which was the main dish served during the reception.

Speaking of diplomats, there are a number of diplomatic changes in the corps at Washington contemplated. One of the most popular bachelors who will leave is Air Commodore Leo Charlton of the British embassy, one of the coterie of gay beaux that surround Sir Auckland and Lady Geddes and make the embassy one of the charmed spots for the belles of Washington just now. Paul de Hevesy of the Hungarian Legation is also going, while there is some talk of the popular Henri de Beaufort of the Netherlands Legation returning to his native land.

The Bust Flesh drops naturally into side sections held down by wide elastic; cannot push up.

Under-arm Flesh The reducing wings are drawn snugly to hold the surplus flesh down and flat.

The Back Brassiere is cut low, and shaped to allow the back flesh to drop in—not bulge over.

The Kabo "Flatter-U" is, in every way, a comfort brassiere, effecting a straight, youthful figure line.

YOU'LL GET RID OF BLACKHEADS SURE

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, and that is to dissolve them.

To do this, get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any mark whatever. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only cause irritation, make large pores and do not get the blackheads out after they become hard. The calonite powder and the water simply dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition. Anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should certainly try this simple method.

Of Distinguished Beauty

Part of the unusual beauty of Almco Lamps is due to the extensive use of hand carving and hand metal work on the bases. The individual touch which this gives to the lamps is further accentuated by the carefully chosen fabrics of the shades, their softly blended colorings, and the exquisite needlework with which they are fashioned. We know of no lamps more finely finished in every detail than Almco Lamps. You can find them in the stores of any dealer who specializes in fine furnishings, and identify them by the blue Almco tag or Almco labels on base and shade.

Mrs. Tibbals testified that she had been engaged to marry Irwin and that he went to the safe deposit box with her on Aug. 22 last and took one of eight $1000 certificates when she was out of the room for a moment. She said she had loaned him two such certificates previously.

Irwin, testifying, denied the charge and exhibited a note showing he owed Mrs. Tibbals more than $2000, saying he had borrowed three certificates from her. The jury was out only a few minutes.

OLIVE AT TENTH

ANNOUNCE

A New Shop Devoted to Millinery
Ultrarefinement

Discriminating followers of fashion will be interested to know that we have recently acquired the services of a modiste skilled in catering to the desires of those who seek the ultra-exclusive in Millinery. A tastefully appointed shop has been placed under her supervision—a shop which promises to be the rendezvous of St. Louis' most critical leaders in matters of dress. The formal opening will occur Monday, and patrons of the House of Steinberg's are invited to view the collection of stunning Hats now assembled.

Critical attention has been given to the Hats shown here. Modes typical of the individuality and exclusiveness for which we are noted were selected. An ensemble of chapeaux, bearing the names of celebrated Parisian and New York designers, will reveal the care exercised in their selection.

It will be noted that studied care has been given to the choice of one-of-a-kind styles. Whether for formal, informal or sports wear, one may select a Hat here with utmost assurance that it is anything but commonplace. The collection embraces Hats for all occasions—for misses and matrons.

PAROLE GRANTED SLAYER OF MAN WHO KICKED DOG

John Mahan, 68, Sentenced Last November to Serve 10 Years, Will Be Released From Penitentiary This Week.

A parole for John Mahan, an aged watchman who killed a man who kicked Mahan's collie dog, was approved yesterday by Gov. Hyde, and Mahan will be released this week from the penitentiary, where he has been a prisoner since Nov. 15. The slain man was Melvin M. Tobin, 27, a car repairer, of 3828 Kennerly avenue.

On the evening of last July 20, Mahan who is 68 years old, because it was hot had carried a chair out to the sidewalk in front of his home, at 2215 North Broadway. His dog lay beside him. Two young men and two young women approached. Tobin was one of them. Mahan said the dog growled, whereupon Tobin hit it over the head with a banjo. Mahan protested that the dog was old and harmless, at which one of the women slapped him, and Tobin knocked him down.

As a watchman at the city waterworks at Bissell's Point, Mahan was permitted to carry a revolver and star. He went into the house and got them, intending, as he said, to follow and arrest the party. He overtook them in front of 2007 North Broadway, where Tobin grappled with him, and the weapon was discharged accidentally, giving the younger man a mortal wound. That was Mahan's version.

Tobin's companions testified at the trial that the dog bit Tobin, tearing his trousers, and that when he asked who owned it, Mahan became angry, obtained his revolver, and followed them two blocks before shooting Tobin from behind.

A Police Lieutenant gave evidence that he had known Mahan as a quiet and inoffensive old man. Despite obvious sympathy in the courtroom for the defendant, the testimony was such that the jury found him guilty, but assessed the minimum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment. There was evidence that the man and the dog were deeply attached to each other.

Various agencies have sought his release. The considerations that moved the Governor and Parole Board were Mahan's age and feebleness, his blameless life and recommendations of clemency from both the trial Judge, Garesche, and the prosecutor, Circuit Attorney Sidener. He was paroled to Father Timothy Dempsey.

HOW $40,000,000 MAYOR OF DETROIT IS SOLVING PROBLEMS

a while," is about the limit of his verbal defense.

"What is the biggest mistake you ever made in your political career?" I asked him.

First Office Police Commissioner.

The Mayor was not embarrassed. He turned somewhat red, but it was because he was laughing so heartily at himself.

"You know," he said, "that my first public office was that of Police Commissioner. It was the first time I was out of a job and somebody suggested to me that Detroit needed cleaning up. It was in the height of war prosperity. Everybody was burning up money. The saloons were going the limit and the city was full of brothels and gambling dens. It seemed to me that cleaning up such a town might be an interesting job and I consented to try.

"But I had never monkeyed much with politics. I had a hazy idea, in fact, that people who administered the laws made them; not exactly, but to all practical purposes. I supposed that it was up to a city Government to decide whether or not it could enforce the laws and that that was all there was to it. Well, it generally is up to a city Government to do just that, but that isn't all there is to it. There is a certain hypocrisy necessary which I didn't understand, and that's where I pulled the bone.

"When I got into the office 'to clean up the town' I discovered that I was supposed to clean it up and not clean it up. I discovered that I was supposed to clean it up enough to satisfy the reformers and leave it dirty enough to satisfy the other crowd. This confused me. I had never been up against such a problem before and I didn't know what to make of it.

"Then one day the reporters put the direct question: 'Are you going to close up all the illegal joints?' Says I: 'I'm considering it,' and I never realized what a bone it was until I saw it in the headlines. Here was a Police Commissioner trying to decide whether or not he would enforce the law; I thought they'd never get through roasting me; but I could not help realizing that I deserved all the roasting I got."

Now, am I right? Isn't this a new kind of Mayor and a new kind of city government? I should like to editorialize about it, but I shall quote a Detroit newspaper man instead:

"The Couzens administration seems to us the most important story in the United States. Heretofore we've had all the big executive talent of the country working for private interests and we've had nothing but political talent representing the other side; and we've been so generally frightened by what might happen that we've tied our political representatives down with all sorts of restrictions. Then, even, if we did by the grace of God elect a capable man, he couldn't do anything worth while. That is, not for the public. He could occasionally do something for himself and he did.

"But Detroit seems to have solved the problem. It decided first to form a city government under which a capable man could function almost as freely as he could work for a private corporation. Then we found a man. Just because he made mistakes we didn't fire him, for we soon saw that he was a big man and we let him work. If other cities in the United States, or the public generally, discovers that secret, we will soon have a new standard of public service."

COLLEGE GIRLS HARD TO PLACE IN JOBS

Factory and Clerical Jobs Said to Be Almost Only Positions Open for Girls at Present Time.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—For the girl hunting a career, a college education is splendid, but for the girl hunting a job, it's a handicap. This was the conclusion of the New York City Employment Bureau today after the hardest industrial winter in many years.

"The college girl is the most difficult of all applicants to place," said Peter J. Rigney, assistant director, "especially this season, because, while jobs have been scarce, careers have been zero. A college education is a nice profession. The only reason it proves a disadvantage when the possessor looks for work is because after spending so much time and money on education, the graduate feels she ought to do something better than clerical or factory work. True enough. The trouble at present is that factory and clerical jobs are about the only ones open."

Mrs. Julia S. Ryan, registrar of the woman's division, has interviewed 2000 jobless girls in the past six months. Of these, nearly 10 per cent were college graduates, an increase of about 8 per cent over normal times. Of the 2000, 65 per cent obtained position, though a much larger percentage had at lesat one chance at a position.

"The highly educated woman usually is less able to hold down an ordinary job than the average applicant," said Mrs. Ryan, "partly because most college women have no knowledge of stenography and partly because benerally they want to start right in as heads of offices. If college women seeking business jobs today would study stenography and accept modest stenographic jobs at the start, they would have a far better chance to reach executive positions later. The good jobs are going to girls, not college graduates, who know stenography.

"It is surprising how often a college girl will seek a secretarial position when she knows nothing of the important rudiments, typewriting and shorthand.

"A few college graduates, too, seem not to realize the importance of personal neatness. You expect such carelessness in girls of lesser education. But one of the sloppiest applicants we had was a college graduate."

COL. POTTER TELLS OF CONSTANT FIGHT TO CONTROL RIVER

Job Will Be There for Generations, but Will Never Be Completed, Head of Commission Says.

MILLIONS OF ACRES CARRIED AWAY

System of Brush Retards Effective on the Missouri, but Value on Lower Mississippi Held in Doubt.

The never-ending struggle of Government river engineers and employes against the ceaselessly rolling waters of the Mississippi and Missouri was described by Col. Charles L. Potter yesterday in an interview prompted by the news of a new sort of dike work. Col. Potter is president of the Mississippi River Commission and engineer in charge of the Western Division of the Army Engineer Corps' river work.

"Does the work keep us busy?" he said. "The work will be there for generations after I am gone, and forever, I guess. We've been building levees since '82, but a complete job can never be accomplished.

"How much land has been washed away by the rivers? Millions of acres. No one can tell exactly, save by comparing the present charts with old ones and noting the changes in course, and by the time you got through the river might have shifted some more.

"There is a lot of talk about land being washed away by rivers, but the fact is that the area of water surface remains constant, for while banks may be caved in on one side, the land is made up by deposits on the other side, or somewhere else. The river may take one man's land and put it in another man's farm, or in another county, but the widening of rivers does not change land and water area.

Length May Vary.

"The length of rivers is subject to variation, but in time the normal length is reached, after a change, though the return to normal may not be for years. That is to say, a river may cut off nine miles' length by cutting through instead of following around a bend, but eventually there is going to be another bend some place that will make up for the lost distance.

"All these shifts of the rivers mean work for someone. The Mississippi River Commission has jurisdiction over all flood control and improvement work on the 'lower river,' as the Mississippi from Cairo, Ill., to the mouth is called, and of levee or flood control work on the upper river from Cairo as far as Rock Island, Ill. The St. Louis office of the western division of the engineer corps has charge of work on the Mississippi in this locality and the Kansas City office has charge of the entire Missouri River.

"On the Missouri and the upper Mississippi there is no Government flood control work, but many farmers have worked up their own levees. On the lower Mississippi our work is the building of levees to hold flood waters within limits, which not only protects the bottom farm land and towns, but helps maintain the proper channel. Confining the waters within levees has raised the height which floods may attain, so the more levees there are built, the higher the existing ones have to go. Earth is scooped up from the adjoining country to keep the levees high enough. Sometimes the levee faces are concreted to prevent wave washing.

Banks Reveted With Mats.

"Navigation makes it important to hold the present channel from Cairo down, so much of this object is met by revetting the banks and by dredging in a few places where the river might get below a 9-foot depth at low water. We revet the banks with willow mats, about 250x1000 feet in size. 'Fascines,' or small bundles of native willows, each piece about four inches by 40 feet, are made and bound together by wire cable to form the mats, which are laid on the surface of the water by workmen in boats. The mats are sunk to lie along the curving bank and bottom, by rocks, and the banks above the water are surfaced with rock.

"On the Missouri mats are made, too, but the willow is woven into something like basket work. Revetments and dikes are the principal works there. Dikes are built out in series from one side of the stream and the settlement of soil from the water, as it is retarded by the dikes, is allowed to fill in the space between dikes. This prevents much washing of the banks, narrows the river and maintains depth. The most such work is being done in the vicinity of Jefferson City."

The new dike work is one advocated before committees of the Senate and House of Representatives at Washington recently by Mark W. Woods of Lincoln, Neb., who has used the system to forestall the ravages of the Missouri on a farm he owns.

The dikes constitute an improved basis for land saving. The piles for anchoring these dikes are made of concrete, about 16 inches square, and hollow, with apertures at the lower end which serve to drain the cavity. They are set on bottom by means of derrick boats and water is pumped into the cavities. The water forces sand and mud away and gently the piles slip into a resting place, as deckhands slacken the supporting ropes. What sometimes stumps the brute strength of a pile driver is accomplished readily by ingenuity.

How Retards Are Placed.

Four piles are set for the ordinary retard, which is a hundred feet long, at right angles to the stream. Several hundred trees are anchored to the piles by cables, and nature does the rest. It is in effect a gigantic filter of rough kind. Col. Potter said that such retards as these nearest St. Louis have been built in the vicinity of Kansas City. He said there were many places where the system would work, but that he would be doubtful about its success in other places. It would probably work out in the Missouri, he said, and added, "For the lower Mississippi, set down a big question mark."

"These rivers, in time, if left alone, would switch their courses from one bluff to the other," Col. Potter went on. "The control of that is not com-

TELLS OF AMBITION TO GO TO ANNAPOLIS

Negro Youth Nominated for Naval Academy Wants to Prove Qualities of His Race.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Nomination of Emile Treville Holley, 17-year-old negro, as a midshipman in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis was a fulfilment of campaign pledges made by Martin C. Ansorge when he was campaigning in 1920 for the seat he now holds as representative from the Twenty-first Congressional District. The next election in that district will be next November.

The youth said yesterday that the nomination came as a surprise to him and without his seeking it. He said the first he knew of it was when Ansorge called him to his office in the Woolworth Building two weeks ago for an interview. The boy explained it this way:

"During all my high school days I was a member of the Inter-High School Association, composed of negro boys banded to promote the interests of the negro children in their scholastic work, athletics, etc. When I was graduated last June I was made an honorary member.

Campaign Promises.

"Ansorge made a lot of speeches up here through Harlem in which he said the first opportunity that came he would nominate a negro boy for the Naval Academy. Then when the boys of the Inter-High School Association learned appointments were to be made in Ansorge's district they got together without my knowing it and nominated me as their choice.

"Richard Williams, a senior in Morris High School and president of the Association, wrote to Ansorge reminding him of the speeches he had made and telling him I was the choice of the Association. At the same time the West Side Colored Republican Club got behind me and between the two organizations lies the credit for having got me the nomination for Annapolis.

"And now I want to go to the naval academy just to show what the negro can do when an opportunity is given. I know it will take a whole lot of tact and perhaps it will be a little rough sledding for a while. But I am willing to take anything just to prove the qualities of the negro."

Wants to Be Lawyer.

Young Holley wants to be a lawyer and hopes he will be allowed to follow that course if he is successful in gaining appointment to Annapolis.

The boy's father is a steward in the dining car service of the Erie railroad and runs between this city and Jamestown, N. Y. Before her marriage to Holley, 19 years ago, the mother was a teacher in the Swift Memorial Institute, Rogers, Tenn. Both show the refinement of education.

Holley is the fourth negro to be named for appointment in the naval academy, but he is the first since the reconstruction days following the Civil War.

No negro has ever been graduated from the acedemy, as is shown in the history of the institution, written by Park Benjamin, father of Enrico Caruso's widow. Benjamin was graduated from Annapolis with the class of 1867.

Award in Barge Repairing Dispute.

Arbitrators of a dispute between the Philip A. Rohan Boat, Boiler & Tank Co. and Meyer Katz, over a bill for repairing five barges for Katz, yesterday brought in an award of $19,362.50. The boat company had sued for $20,152.93. Katz gave a surety bond to cover any award. Circuit Judge Taylor now is asked to approve the award.

COL. POTTER TELLS OF CONSTANT FIGHT TO CONTROL RIVER

plete. I don't suppose man ever will have entire mastery of it. The prospect for improved control is best on the lower Mississippi, because of the great amount of Government levee work. Having spent so much there, the Government is not going to sit back and let the work be washed away.

"The only excuse the Government has for its work on the Missouri is navigation, and there is little navigation there, except for local work between small towns. Flood control work will not be undertaken there, but if navigation picks up, the Government will hold the channel.

Have Men Out Always.

"We have men out always, fighting to hold back floods if the water is high, working on improvements at normal stages. There are several thousand men scattered over the Mississippi under the commission; the engineers' office has not so many employes. Government engineers conduct all the bank revetment work with hired labor, but levees are built, by the Government, by contractors and by communities. The Mississippi River Commission was given $6,670,000 for the year ending June 30, 1922, and the St. Louis engineers' office received $400,000 allotment from the last rivers and harbors bill, while the Kansas City office got $200,000.

"After all, floods do not work so much havoc as low water, for low water cuts the banks, which cave in at the bends. Then comes the shifting of land. Some very big cutoffs occur in this way. Vicksburg was set back two miles from the river by such a thing and Mark Twain once wrote, jokingly, that cutoffs would bring Cairo and New Orleans together some time. Rivers have to have a certain slope, to flow. If the slope increases, the banks are cut, or if it decreases on a bend, the bend is shortened by the waters working across the point. It keeps the river men working."

Tucker Returns to House.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia came back to the House today to take up the service he laid aside in 1907 after being in congressional harness for eight years. Mr. Tucker was elected from the Tenth Virginia district to succeed the late Henry D. Flood.

Members of the espionage squad tried to get him to make a complaint, but he knew what consideration stockholders were entitled to and refused to make any.

The police acknowledge that Palmer refused to file charges against the three, which explains why they were merely transferred.

Well-dressed women, this season, are demanding the clean-cut, swagger lines of man-tailored Suits.

The same exactness of tailoring, snappiness of cut and excellence of materials that have placed this establishment high in the esteem of the men of St. Louis, will be exerted in the fashioning of Suits for women.

We are confident that, in very few instances, will it be possible to secure the superior qualities which are characteristic of our Suits—certainly not at so low a price.

The illustration shows one of the many popular models our designers have to present. Our stock of materials is varied enough to supply all demands.

REPUBLICAN FIELD FOR SENATE STILL PROBLEM

Proctor Only Candidate to File So Far—Dwight F. Davis' Chances Much Discussed.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 25.—Whether Dwight F. Davis intends to forsake his Federal appointment as a director of the War Finance Corporation under President Harding and return to Missouri to seek the Republican nomination for United States Senator is a question of considerable interest to Republicans at the State Capitol, who believe that the chances of their candidate are enhanced by the definite presence of Senator Reed in the race for the Democratic nomination.

Extent and makeup of the field which will contest at the August primary for the Republican nomination is little more certain than it was a month ago. Only one aspirant has filed, State Senator David M. Proctor of Kansas City, who is actively campaigning. Proctor is so inoculated with the senatorial bacillus that, tacitly, at least, he is supporting for Mayor of Kansas City Matt J. Foster, whose confirmation as police commissioner of Kansas City Proctor fought with bitterness rarely seen even in the Senate.

Dickey Still a Puzzle.

Walter S. Dickey, Kansas City capitalist and newspaper owner, still remains a threatening possibility, but Dickey has given not the slightest indication of an intention either to run or not to run, though his henchmen have been taking soundings constantly for months.

John C. McKinley of Unionville, former Lieutenant Governor, and Congressman Faust of St. Joseph both are regarded as possibilities, but there has been no indication from either here.

Some certainty is felt that there will be a candidate from the southern part of the State, there having been slight flurries weeks ago successively for E. E. E. McJimsey of Springfield and Oliver J. Page of Springfield, Prosecuting Attorney of Greene County. Page in fact told friends in February that he intended to file right away. But something seems to have happened to his plans, as he has not filed.

Barrett a Possibility.

Attorney-General Barrett is regarded as the only member of the State administration who is even considering the senatorial race objectively, as Gov. Hyde's friends are known to have dissuaded him from even contemplating such action, and there are sufficient reasons why none of the other State officers will make the effort. Some pressure has been brought by Barrett's friends, however, to get the Attorney General into the contest, and though the idea probably appeals to him, he is non-committal on the subject and likely will remain so until the time for filing draws to a close.

With prospects so aligned, the Davis suggestion, heard here coincident with a flying visit this week by City Collector Edmond Koeln, has elicited much discussion. In every instance, however, politicians who have talked of Davis' prospects have "wondered" if Davis could get the united support of the St. Louis factions.

In his experience in 1920 as runner-up to Senator Spencer for the Republican nomination, Davis had only the support of the Koeln wards, which was not enough, especially in view of the unfavorable reaction in rural Missouri to the broadly scattered report that Davis was not as dry as the powderhouse of well-worn use.

Skeptical of a St. Louisan.

Some doubt is felt here that any St. Louisan can get the United support of the St. Louis factions, because of the strongly suspected wish of Senator Spencer that the Republican candidate come from the west end of the State. For although the Senator still has four years' term to serve, he doubtless realizes that when the time comes for him again to go to the people, he will be much stronger if he is the only Senator from eastern Missouri, and for this reason whatever influence the Senator retains with the St. Louis faction's leaders is expected to be thrown against the candidacy of any St. Louis man at this time. In this attitude no doubt Spencer will receive some assistance from the State administration, with which he has established reasonably close relations. What effect this would have on the aspirations of either Davis or Barrett is problematical.

A few scattering suggestions have been heard recently that former Supreme Judge Lamm of Sedalia might be drafted as a candidate. The favor with which this idea has been received however, has been dampened somewhat by recollection of the manner in which Lamm declined to consider nomination as a delegate at large to the constitutional convention on the ground of his age. Desultory talk on the subject still continues however.

GARAGE MANAGER DID NOT MAKE CHARGE AGAINST POLICE

They Are Stockholders in Business, Richard I. Palmer Says.

Richard I. Palmer, manager of the Grand-Gravois Garage, 3664 Gravois avenue, wants it understood that he did not complain about three policemen, stockholders in the concern, sitting around with their feet on the desks, smoking corn-cob pipes, as was related in yesterday's Post-Dispatch on police information.

Palmer says the first he knew that the deportment of the stockholding policemen was under scrutiny was when he found other policemen hiding about the place keeping watch.

STUDENTS TO PRODUCE PLAY

"Romeo and Juliet" Will Be Given by Washington University Co-Eds.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be produced by students in the English department at Washington University on a May date yet to be determined, on Liggett terrace. Miss Florence Walters and Warren Hagee have been designated for the leads, the remainder of the cast to be chosen as suggested by ability demonstrated through rehearsals.

On May day, the annual production by co-eds of the University will be Tennyson's "The Foresters," this having been substituted for "Sherwood," announced sometime ago, because of the heavy royalties demanded for the latter. Miss Charlotte Coombe is chairman of the committee in charge, and the play will be coached by Miss Margaret Ewing. Special dances are being prepared by Miss Childs of the physical education department.

BUDER BRANCH OF LIBRARY WILL BE OPENED TOMORROW

Second of Branch Libraries to Be Established in School Buildings Will be Used by Public and Students.

The Buder Branch of the St. Louis Public Library, in the Susan R. Buder School, 5319 Lansdowne avenue, in the Southampton subdivision, will be opened with formal exercises tomorrow at 8 p. m.

This is the second of the branch libraries in school buildings to be established by joint action of the Library Board and the Board of Education, the latter furnishing the quarters with light, heat and janitor service, and the former buying the books and paying the assistants.

The first of these libraries was opened in the Stix School on Euclid avenue about a month ago, and has been operating successfully. Both these libraries will function in a dual capacity, as a library for the school in which they are situated, and as a public library branch for the whole community. They are open not only during school hours, but afterwards until 9 p. m., and also on Saturdays, but they are closed on Sundays and on special school holidays. Each has about 5000 new books.

Speakers at the opening exercises will incude President John C. Tobin of the Board of Education, Vice President John F. Lee of the Library Board, Richard Murphy and Stephen M. Wagner of the School Board; G. A. Buder, a member of the Library Board, who has donated a fund of $5000 to equap the quarters in the Buder School for branch library purposes, and Nathan Moskovits, president of the Southampton Improvement and School Patrons' Association. Miss Marjory Doud is librarian.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

COBLENZ, March 25.—General regret is felt and expressed here over the prospect of the withdrawal of United States troops. From the Burgomaster to the householder who has an officer or a non-commissioned man billeted with him, the hope is that the War Department will consent to leave at least a small detachment here in order to avert a visitation of French colonials.

The people have seen the American soldier at his best, and at his worst for three years. Many have lived under the same roof, have the same desire, namely, that he remain so long as occupation lasts.

Shop keepers and cafe keepers will be hard hit, for the soldier is a good spender, and rate of exchange makes him a man of means.

The decision of the War Department was not joyfully received by the soldiers. Most of those stationed here had taken up soldiering as a profession. No post could be more alluring than this one in the heart of Europe. But there is some compensation in the prospect of crossing the sea in spring or summer weather, and not a few of the men are glad to be recalled.

No difficulty is anticipated in getting all of the American troops away by July 1. The number of claims to be settled is few, and there are no long leases to delay the wind-up. Of the 4000 Americans now at the Coblenz bridgehead, 1000 will sail April 9 on the Cantigny from Antwerp. This detachment will consist of one battalion of the Fifth Infantry, and a motor transport company of 60. On April 23 another 1000 will sail.

Save Our Schools!

Your Vote Is Needed

NO VOTER who fails to vote on Tuesday can escape the responsibility if our Public Schools are forced to discontinue a big part of the advantages they now offer our children.

The issue is clear: No increase in taxation is asked. You are asked to vote Yes to maintain the present rate only. Failure to vote the present rate of 85c means that our schools will lose 30% of their present revenue and must abandon nearly one-third of their present program of educating our children.

Don't let any minor question cloud the main issue. You may think the schools should do this or that. You may be right, or you may be wrong. In any event, would you accomplish your wish if the schools were wrecked by lack of support?

There is only one question before us. Shall we vote the schools sufficient revenue to maintain the present standard, or shall we cripple them? No other question is involved. There is no way of getting the revenue they need except to vote Yes on Tuesday.

A stay-away voter doubles the strength of a negative vote. A negative voter never fails to vote.

Good causes are lost through indifference. Don't contribute to the downfall of our schools by being indifferent.

Vote YES Tuesday

Why the Present Tax Rate Should Be Maintained

The Best Interests of the Community Require It

(A) The growth of the city and the ever-increasing demand for educational facilities require greater revenue each year to support the present activities of the schools.

(B) Children stay longer and go higher in the schools than ever before. In 1911, only 2.54 per cent of the school enrollment was in the High Schools. In 1921 this had increased to 13.4 per cent.

There is no single asset in any community more valuable than the habit of sending children through the Grades and into the High, instead of stopping them in low grades. The whole city is the gainer; but it costs more money to send a boy through eight or twelve grades than through five or six. We cannot afford to fill our city with fifth-grade men.

Children Should Have Suitable School Accommodations

(C) There are 6977 children now attending half day sessions or are going to school in portables, rented buildings and residences used as schools; in basement rooms, corridors and converted storerooms, used as classrooms.

(D) There are 120 rooms in so-called portables. These serve well enough in temporary emergencies, but it is not fair to maintain these portables year after year, in any neighborhood. There must be money enough supplied by taxes to catch up in the building program, and then it must continue to be supplied to keep up with the steady increase of children.

Children Should Have Sufficient School Accommodations

(E) High Schools built to accommodate 9600 are now housing 13,930. Also, many of our Grammar Schools are so crowded that extra seats in the aisles are necessary.

(F) Buildings that have been abandoned for years, either because of being unfit for use or because the neighborhoods thinned out, are now being put into repair because this requires less revenue than to build new schools.

(G) Unless St. Louis supplies the money for additional school needs, she has no right to invite into the new industrial districts any industries whose workmen will demand fair treatment for their children. The industrial growth of St. Louis must stop if school funds are reduced.

(H) High prices demand the maintenance of the present tax rate. Eighty-five cents today buys less than sixty cents did five years ago. Because of increased costs alone, the sixty-cent rate of five years ago would not today maintain school activities of five years ago.

If the Present Rate of 85 Cents Fails to Pass, What Would Be the Result?

The rate would drop back to sixty cents on one hundred dollars.

There would be an immediate reduction of 30 per cent in the income from taxes.

If the Evening Schools, Physical Training, Manual Training, Domestic Science, free text books, Industrial School, Summer Schools, Open Air Schools, and many other of the important functions of our present school system were eliminated, only half the revenue lost by reverting to the sixty-cent rate would be saved. The other half would need to be made up by discontinuing some of the fundamentals of our present educational system.

One opportunity after the other would have to be taken away from the children.

Overcrowding of rooms would result, with inevitable bad effect on health and morals.

Half-time sessions would multiply, with the inevitable reduction in efficiency.

No districts would get new buildings no matter how serious the need.

Crowding would increase, with the result that but a few children would have a full year of full-day schooling.

The children alone will pay the tragic price now.

The people of St. Louis will begin to realize their blunder when these children are the young men and women of 1932.

The St. Louis Tax Rate

The St. Louis tax rate is considerably below that of other cities, based on 100 per cent valuation, as will be seen by the following tables:

Los Angeles	$1.645
Chicago	1.375
Denver	1.176
Pittsburg	1.15
Philadelphia	.95
Kansas City	.95
St. Louis (If approved on Mar. 28)	.85
St. Louis (If the election fails)	.60

Even our neighboring suburban towns put us to shame in the amount spent on their schools, as indicated by the following school tax:

Webster Groves	$1.645
Maplewood	1.40
Kirkwood	1.35
University City	.875

Of the largest twenty cities of the United States, St. Louis stands ninth in per capita wealth. This shows her relative ability to support the schools.

St. Louis stands thirteenth in per cent of per capita wealth actually spent on schools. This shows that St. Louis is spending in her schools less than the average city.

USHER RESIGNS AS HEAD OF HISTORY DEPARTMENT

Washington University Professor to Be Succeeded in Former Position by Dr. Thomas Marshall.

Prof. Roland G. Usher, who was to have resumed his place as the head of the history department of Washington University at the beginning of the next school year, has, at his own request, in order to have more time for private work, been relieved of the duties appertaining to that position, and Dr. Thomas M. Marshall, who has been acting head of the department for more than a year, was named as his successor, effective at once.

Dr. Usher spent a prolonged leave of absence in England, returning in time to resume his classes at the university February 1. The actual condition of Great Britain four years after the war will be analyzed by Dr. Usher, in a lecture Tuesday evening, before Washington University Association, in the auditorium of the school of medicine building, Euclid and Scott avenues.

CENSOR OF GAMBLING IS NEXT

New Atlantic City Official Will Pass on Catch-Penny Games.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

ATLANTIC CITY N. J., March 24. With bathing-suit censors and flirting censors now on the municipal pay roll this summer will see the addition of a gambling censor, according to an announcement from City Hall today.

The new official's duty will be to see that the catch-penny games operated along the board walk are "run on the square." There were many complaints last season that the games were "fixed" and that "cappers" were the only persons ever to win at them.

The censor will have police powers with authority to test apparatus when he has reason to believe that it is not governed solely by chance.

PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 26, 1922. PAGES 1—12B.

Voice of the Labor Union and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorials or articles in the organs of labor unions and the Socialist and Communist Parties showing the trend of thought on public topics among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

Making Criminals.

From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.

The crime committed by Harvey W. Church was a savage one worthy of a wild animal. He was classed as a mental weakling, so there is some excuse for him. Before being hanged he was as good as dead. The effect upon him is of minor importance. The effect upon the general public, and especially upon growing boys and girls, is what makes the State's crime the more revolting. The hideous crime committed by Church was insignificant compared with the crime committed by the State.

The State has brutalized every one who read of its murder; it has taught children to believe that savagery is civilized. They will be much readier to commit some bloody deed when they grow up. The law of cause and effect cannot be set aside. Brutal deeds beget brutal deeds. The State's murder will in due time result in horrible murders by individuals. Millions of men, women and children are a little blunted, a little lower in the scale of being because of this awful act.

God knows we Americans, with our mob violence and our lynchings, have a bad enough reputation now. Europeans, with wonder and amazement on their faces, ask if it is really true that Americans gather to enjoy the burning of human beings at the stake.

What can we do to catch up with the rest of the world?

"CAN'T STRIKE" LAWS.

(From the Garment Worker, Labor.)

Behind every "can't strike" scheme is the purpose to create a dependent spirit in labor; to have workers look to their employers and the State rather than to themselves; to have workers again accept the inferior mark that was their badge for ages; to have all their progress come from above—from a kind and gracious master or a benevolent ruler. This is the laborer that industrial aristocrats and their lackeys have in mind when they talk of a "contented worker." * * *

In the eyes of Garyism the greatest crime a worker can commit is to be discontented, though this is a praiseworthy trait in all other classes. * * * But labor is no longer docile and patient. And therein lies its greatest offense. For ages it stood hat in hand. Now labor realizes that its pleas for justice are futile unless backed by intelligence and power. Now labor is united—it agitates, it educates, it strikes when necessary. It laughs at the pretence of modern feudalists and throws in their faces its defiance of slave laws and injunction edits.

This growing power of labor terrifies labor's opponents. They see the foundation of their feudalism undermined. So, blind to history and social progress, they would outlaw strikes and set wages by law in the wild hope that the old serf status may be re-established.

To secure "can't strike" laws the political and editorial parrots of privilege talk of the public welfare. This, of course, is incorrect. Privilege, true to its history, is only interested in its own welfare. It exploits the public and has robbed the people of every natural resource. To live, privilege must break the spirit of labor. It must take from labor the one thing that distinguishes it from bondmen. It must re-establish in labor's mind its complete faith in Government and "superior" persons, rather than its own efforts.

FARM CROPS.

(From Labor, Organ of Plumb Plan League.)

The total value of the principal farm crops of the United States for 1921 was $5,675,000,000. A year ago it was $9,075,000,000, and two years ago, $13,675,000,000. The income of the farmers for the last two years was reduced approximately $12,600,000,000. The Government concedes that this is a conservative figure. Other authorities insist that the total should not be less than $15,000,000,000. Add to that the $5,000,000,000 lost to industrial workers last year through unemployment — another Government estimate—and the additional billions taken away through reduced wages and you will find that during the last two years the producers have been unjustly deprived of a sum sufficient to pay every dollar of the national debt.

They will tell you that the falling off in our export trade is responsible for most of the farmers' troubles. Again Government statistics come to our rescue. According to the report of the Department of Commerce, we sold to foreign countries in 1919 148,000,000 bushels of wheat; in 1920, 218,000,000, and for 11 months last year, 269,000,000 bushels. We actually greatly increased our exports of wheat, but nevertheless the price went down. Why? Because the financiers who controlled the Federal reserve system willed it so. They shut off the farmer's credit and compelled him to dump his crops on the market for whatever they would bring. At the same time the bank supported the speculators and millers, and those gentlemen pocketed the greater part of the money taken from the farmer.

HARDSHIP OF MINERS.

(W. D. Mahon in Motorman and Conductor, Labor.)

The Hon. Joseph Horschberg of Virginia has just submitted his report as Commissioner of Labor for the year, and in that report he shows that the coal mine fatalities in the United States during those years (1915-1920 inclusive) amounted to 14,802 deaths from various causes, averaging over 3000 men killed in the coal mines annually. He shows that in the State of Virginia for the year ending Sept. 30, 1921, there were 26 persons killed and 559 that received injuries of various kinds.

Just think of an industry to which the lives of over 2000 persons are sacrificed each year, to say nothing of those that are injured and maimed for life. What does that mean to the wives and children of these men? What a pity it is that the entire facts as to the conditions surrounding the miners cannot be published and given to the world in connection with the attacks that are being made on their wages. Anyone familiar with the miners' situation knows that they do not average four days a week in pay and that every moment they are at work their lives are in danger. I appeal to all who are considering the matter to investigate the true condition of the miners, and if they do learn them as they actually exist, there will be no demand to reduce the miners' wages.

TOO GOOD A JOKE.

(From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

A. C. Townley says he was put in jail to improve his sense of humor, because he had been taking the Constitution seriously.

Ditto several thousand others who have been persecuted during the past few years for exercising the rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage guaranteed to them by the Constitution. They did not know the Constitution was a joke until the powers that be impressed that interpretation upon them by persecuting them for living up to the term of the Constitution.

One hundred and 13 men are still in Federal prisons because they did not look upon the Constitution as a joke. It is not known just how many are in State prisons, because they took their State Constitutions too seriously. Meantime, Harding and the State executives evidently think it too good a joke to spoil by letting these men out. They must stay there until they acquire a sense of humor.

THE BONUS.

(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

It appears that if there is to be a bill passed by Congress providing for a bonus for the soldier boys it will be one that will enable him to borrow a small amount of money, provided he furnish satisfactory proof that he needs it. * * * We have come to a time when we can never do anything unless we first agree to let the money trust levy a tribute on us. To dig a canal, to build a railroad, to start a factory, to market our farm products, to erect a schoolhouse, a college or university—to do anything—we must, first of all, make terms with the money trust.

The soldiers of the late war entered the army, as they thought, to make the world safe for the institution of democracy, but they are learning very rapidly, bitter as the truth may be, that every other consideration must be submerged to one great paramount purpose, that the world must be made safer for the money lenders, that no great political or civic or industrial duty may be performed without their permission, which cannot be had without an agreement to pay them enormous tribute.

The issue is being more and more definitely and concretely drawn:

VIEWS OF THE RADICAL AND LABOR PRESS

Shall the people or the money trust rule this nation?

RESPONSIBILITY OF COAL PRODUCERS.

(From the Panther Creek News, Labor.)

Members of the Pittsburg Coal Producers' Association have taken upon themselves a grave responsibility. Two years ago, in common with other soft coal operators in the so-called central competitive field, they agreed with the unionized miners to meet them in conference prior to April 1, 1922, to consider the making of a new agreement on wages and working conditions in substitution for the one now expiring. They now refuse to abide by this pledge and they refuse in the face of the pleadings of Secretary of Labor Davis "in the name of common sense" to get together with the miners and other operators and save the country from a costly strike.

Repudiation of labor agreement is something in which employers more than labor unions cannot afford to indulge. It is likely to become a particularly dangerous business for owners and operators of coal mines. Private possession of so limited and vital a store of natural wealth, is heavily affected with a public interest. Its responsibility is not confined to God Almighty, as the late Mr. Baer had it, but extend to the Government and people of the nation, and it will not be permitted to dodge that responsibility.

If these rebellious coal operators of Western Pennsylvania are well advised they will beat a hasty retreat from setting an example to union labor of contract repudiation, and come into line with Secretary Davis' efforts to promote peace and continued industry in the central coal fields. Their possession of the mines is less a matter of will to do as they please than they suppose.

FOSTER SOUNDS A WAR TRUMPET.

(From Trade Union Educational League's "Call to Action.")

Militants! The time has come for action! We must gird up our loins for a great effort to make a real fighting organization out of the trade union movement. We must now plunge directly into our vital task of amalgamating the many craft unions into a few industrial unions and inspiring them with genuine proletarian spirit. The Trade Union Educational League has launched its nation-wide campaign everywhere to carry on this indispensable work of education and reorganization, a work for which the hard-pressed labor movement now stands in shrieking need. All true trade union rebels are urged to join hands with the league immediately.

Militants! Again we say the time has come for action. For a long while we have declared that the supreme goal of the labor movement is to do away with capitalism and to establish a workers' republic. But our efforts because of our tendency to separate ourselves from the mass into dual unions have not helped appreciably to this end. Through our dualistic methods the organized masses have been left to stagnate and to flounder about leaderless and at the mercy of conservative officialdom, totally incapable of leading them to emancipation. We must now end this condition; we must assume our proper function as the dynamic onward driving element in the trade unions. The Trade Union Educational League * * * program represents the only means by which the workers of this country can be roused from their mental slumber and lined up definitely and clearly against the capitalists and their abominable profit system. If you are a wideawake militant, if you really understand modern militant tactics and are not blinded by the impossible theories that have about ruined the American labor movement, you will join hands with the league at once.

CAUSES OF INDUSTRIAL DEPRESSION.

(From the New York Call, Socialist)

Periods of depression are inherent in the present form of production and distribution, whether production is in the competitive stage or in the stage of large combinations. Labor power is exploited as a commodity, and from it the extracted large values in excess of the purchasing power of society. Surplus commodities and surplus capital are heaped up by the workers in industry. We produce not more than we can use, but more than we can buy. The excess that we cannot buy must either find an outlet abroad or accumulate at home with consequent stagnation and increasing unemployment.

The surplus capital is invested abroad and out of it arise imperialist conquest and domination of other countries and peoples. The more we produce the worse off we are. The larger the excess of commodities the more acute the industrial depression. Plenty is transformed into want. A blessing becomes a curse. If all the surplus goods during an industrial stagnation were destroyed work would be resumed. But it would be resumed only to produce another surplus followed by industrial stagnation.

The system of production has become an insane arrangement by which it raises barriers against its own operation. It is fast becoming the greatest absurdity in all history. Industry and employment can never be permanently stabilized until industry is owned, managed, directed and operated by all and for all in the common welfare.

BARS THE INJUNCTION.

(W. Z. Foster in the Labor Herald.)

The settlement of the New York cloakmakers' strike, which was brought about by Judge Wagner issuing an injunction compelling the Manufacturers' Protective Association to live up to their agreement with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union raises still more clearly the question of whether or not labor shall make use of the injunction as a fighting weapon. Schlessinger and Hilquit loudly respond in the affirmative. * * * But as for us, we answer categorically NO. We are absolutely opposed to the labor movement employing the injunction and we unhesitatingly prophesy that any widespread attempt in that direction will only result in more firmly fastening the shackles of slavery upon the workers.

Our basic reason for opposing the injunction, no matter by whom it is invoked, is that it gives the courts an enormous share of control over the settlement of industrial disputes, and we have absolutely no faith in the courts. We are not childish enough to think they will give labor a square deal. On the contrary, we know very well that they are as reactionary as the employers, if not even more so. At least nine times out of 10 they rule against the organized workers. Does Labor wish to leave its cause to the tender mercy of such a brace game as that? If so, all it has to do is to recognize and use the injunction and the job will be done. As sure as fate it can look forward to a thorough clubbing from the courts. * * *

We must not recognize or use the injunction. We must fight it openly because the courts are stacked against us. It is purely an employers' weapon—the decision of Judge Wagner to the contrary notwithstanding. * * * When Labor begins to use the injunction it can no longer complain at the employers doing so, nor can it use militant tactics against its application

STUDENTS at Washington University selected Miss Margaret Hermann of 3654 Delmar boulevard, a sophomore in the college department, as the most popular girl at the university. She was, therefore, crowned "Hatchet Queen" at the annual junior promenade, held in Francis Gymnasium last night. The title is derived from "The Hatchet," annual publication of the junior class.

BARGAINING ISSUE HANGS IN BALANCE IN PRESENT COAL STRIKE CONTROVERSY

Collective Negotiating Between Employers and Employes Which Grew Out of 40 Years' Experience Imperilled by Unparalleled Situation.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 25.—Back of the impending coal strike lies the issue of whether the present form of collective bargaining—the negotiations that take place between employers and employes acting in groups on a wage contract—shall survive in the coal industry. The present form has developed during the last four decades.

As it exists in the soft coal industry, collective bargaining began in 1885, that year marking the first interstate joint conference of the organized miners and their employers. In the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania it grew out of the great strike of 1902, which was settled by a commission, named by Theodore Roosevelt, then President.

But today, especially in the soft coal fields, the joint movement of operators and miners, such being the trade reference to the collective bargaining system, faces an unprecedented situation. No interstate wage conference seems probable because of the refusal of some operators to continue the present system; both criminal and civil proceedings in the Federal Court here attack the legality of the whole bargaining movement, alleging it is a conspiracy to boost the price of coal. For the first time, agreements in both the bituminous and anthracite fields expire on the same date—March 31.

Long before the present bargaining system was adopted local agreements had been made between operators and their employes, the first having been that negotiated in 1869 between some anthracite miners and operators by John Siney, known as the father of the miners' movement in America. But these agreements—when they were made in the early days—only affected small areas, and did not touch thousands of miners as do those of today.

Proposal Described.

The circular, issued jointly by miners and operators for their 1885 conference, gave this description of the proposal:

"This is the first movement of a national character in America, taken with the intention of the establishment of labor conciliation."

From the conference resulted an agreement, executed at Columbus, O., Feb. 23, 1886, which fixed a wage scale in the soft-coal fields of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and West Virginia and created a board of arbitration, on which the miners and operators had equal representation. Similar agreements were made annually until 1895, when, the panic of 1893 having set in, demoralized the coal trade and broke off negotiations, but they were revived again in 1898, and continued down to the present.

The initiative in the joint movement was taken by the miners. Their convention, at Indianapolis, decided to issue a call to all operators for a joint meeting on Oct. 15, 1885, at Chicago. Daniel McLaughlin of Illinois, chairman of the convention, was the father of the plan. He first proposed it in a letter to the National Labor Tribune in 1885, and later brought it to the attention of the miners' delegate convention. As a result, the convention directed Chris Evans of New Straitsville, O., now historian of the United Mine Workers of America, to invite all operators to Chicago for a conference "for the purpose of adjusting market and mining prices in such a way as to avoid strikes and lockouts, and to give to each party an increased profit from the sale of coal."

The proposal so made was, according to the old miners, like asking the lion and the tiger to lie down together, for the coal industry previously had been replete with many strikes or lockouts. In 1884 the great Ohio Hocking Valley strike had occurred, continuing until the early part of 1885, when it was finally settled, leaving both sides suffering from battle scars.

Only One Operator Appears.

Only one operator, W. P. Bend of Chicago, owner of mines in the Hocking Valley, answered the invitation by appearing for the Chicago meeting, and but for his presence the entire plan probably would have been dropped. At his suggestion, an invitation was issued to Chicago operators to attend a meeting with the miners the next day. Eight operators attended, and agreed with the miners to call a meeting at Pittsburg. There 17 operators met with 14 miners' representatives, but were not ready to act on any scale, though they favored the joint movement. The Pittsburg conference deferred consideration of a scale to a meeting held at Columbus, Feb. 23, 1886, when the agreement was executed.

Since the beginning of the interstate joint agreement, many changes have come in the coal industry, among them the following:

Eight-hour day for miners and mine laborers; universal mine-run basis for determining tonnage on which wages are based; increased wages; abolition of company stores, commonly known as "pluck-mes;" better mining laws; improved working conditions, and continuity of labor supply.

The insterstate movement, as practiced in the past history of the soft coal industry, consists of the operators and miners each drafting a set of demands. The miners invariably asked for wage increases and the operators for wage reductions, or changed working conditions, or both, each side usually asking more than either expected. The result of the negotiations between operators and miners fixed wage rates and working conditions for the so-called central competitive field, comprising Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana.

For all other soft coal states wages are based on the central competitive field rates. Similarly, the union anthracite miners and operators—all in Pennsylvania—negotiate agreements. The miners' union is not recognized by the anthracite operators except that officials of the union have since 1903 appeared in joint meetings with the operators and their employes as representatives of the latter.

Bargaining Attacked in Court.

Although in existence many years, the system of bargaining in the soft coal fields is now being attacked in both criminal and civil proceedings pending in the Federal Court here. More than 200 operators, miners and retailers are charged in an indictment with conspiracy to violate the anti-trust laws by combining to restrain trade and force unfair prices upon the consuming public. Action in the case is at a standstill, awaiting removal of nonresident operators who are among the defendants.

The civil suit, brought by the Borderland Coal Corporation, operating in the Mingo (W. Va.) field, makes charges similar to those in the criminal case, asserting that there is a conspiracy to shut off the competition from the nonunion West Virginia fields. The Borderland company scored a partial victory recently in obtaining a preliminary injunction designed to stop violence about the company's mines.

Both the Government's indictment and the Borderland company's suit charge the alleged conspiracy was entered into in 1899, when the interstate movement was revived, with the union getting wage advances for the workers and obtaining the establishment of the eight-hour day in the central competitive field. In return for these concessions by the operators, it is charged, the union agreed to shut off the competition of nonunion coal, giving a monopoly to the operators running a closed union shop. Both the union and the operators deny the charges, and have retained imposing arrays of counsel to contest the cases.

Wage Agreement Provision.

Since 1912 all the wage agreements of the central competitive field have included this provision: "That internal difference be referred for adjustment to the various districts affected, it being understood that nothing shall be done in district or subdistrict convention that will increase the cost of production or reduce the earning capacity of the men." This provision is interpreted to bind operators and miners to strict observance of wage scales agreements, and prevent any action by either that might change the terms of employment. But the strike comes when the opportunity for negotiations has passed, and the threat of a big walkout starting April 1 now hinges apparently on whether the operators for the whole central competitive field agree to meet the miners.

Two unusual changes have been made during the life of the contracts. A voluntary reduction was taken by the miners in 1896, and two increases of wages came in 1917 without a controversy. The agreement covering the year 1896 was made with the understanding that it must be observed by all operators, especially one big company of the Pittsburg district. In July of that year, operators insisted that the big company be made to respect the scale, and the union's failure to induce the company to do so was followed by the miners of the Pittsburg district being called into convention. By resolution, the convention declared all operators should be treated alike, and it reduced the wage 6 cents a ton to meet the wage paid by the one big company.

In 1917 the central competitive field scale had been in effect since April 1, 1916, and was to continue until April 1, 1918. Union officials complained that conditions growing out of the world war made increased wages necessary, and the operators granted an advance of 10 cents a ton. Later a similar advance was obtained, the operators conceding it when the Government's war-time Fuel Administration approved an advance in prices to meet the higher wage.

Further wage advances came after the 1919 soft-coal strike on an award of a Government commission, and today the wages of the miners are said to be the highest ever paid in the coal industry.

Position Explained.

President John L. Lewis of the mine workers recently gave his interpretation of the miners' demand for a six-hour day, five-day week, being a part of any new wage agreement affecting the soft coal industry. In a formal statement he said:

"There has been so much misunderstanding among the people as to the real meaning of the position of the United Mine Workers of America with regard to the proposed six-hour day and five-day week, that I believe something should be said that would set the public right on the subject. It has been charged by coal operators that the miners are demanding more pay for less work. The principle of the shorter work day does not mean anything of the kind. They do not ask for the six-hour day as the maximum, but they do ask that they be given reasonable assurance that they will have reasonably steady employment six hours a day throughout the year.

"Under present conditions, the miners work eight hours a day only a small part of the time each year. In 1921 they were employed only about 40 per cent of full time and were idle 60 per cent of the time. They were employed only an average of about 125 days in 1921, out of the 200 or more work days of the year. They cannot make a living for their families under such conditions. Last year they earned an average of approximately $700 per man.

Capacity of Bituminous Mines.

"The bituminous mines of the country have a capacity of 700,000,000 to 800,000,000 tons a year. In normal times the demand is for approximately 500,000,000 tons a year. If the miners had reasonably steady employment they could and would easily produce in a six-hour day enough coal to fill every possible requirement. If it can be done in a six-hour day, why should miners be required to work eight hours a day only a part of the time?

"Many years ago miners were compelled to work 10, 12 or more hours a day, and when they made their fight for a shortening of the work day to eight hours they were met with the same kind of fight that they are now facing in their request for a six-hour day. But they won, and the country has had all the coal it could use ever since.

"The six-hour day is not a scarecrow, nor is it a menace to the country, as some employers would have us believe. It is simply a humane principle."

Number Strike Would Affect.

Suspension of work in the unionized fields of the country will directly affect more than a half million workers in the coal fields of 20 states. Twenty thousand Canadian miners also belong to the United Mine Workers of America, Nova Scotia forming one union district and the Western provinces forming another district.

The great numerical strength of the United Mine Workers of America is in the soft coal industry, the central competitive field, comprising Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois having a combined membership of approximately 215,000. The anthracite industry, centered in three fields in Pennsylvania, employs 155,000 men, of whom approximately one-half are in the union. In past strikes, however, the union has practically succeeded in bringing a complete walkout in the anthracite fields.

The approximate distribution of union miners by states, obtained from union sources here, is as follows:

Pennsylvania	154,825
Illinois	98,000
Ohio	49,000
West Virginia	48,400
Indiana	31,000
Kentucky	14,900
Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas	14,800
Iowa	13,100
Alabama	12,200
Tennessee	11,500
Kansas	9,700
Missouri	8,350
Wyoming	7,650
Maryland	5,250
Colorado	4,675
Montana	4,625
Washington	4,620
Michigan	2,125
Canada	20,600

Mine Districts.

The states, in whole or in part, form union districts, each bearing a numerical designation. No districts, however, are numbered 3, 4 or 28. District No. 1 is the anthracite field around Scranton, Pa.; District No. 2, the bituminous field of Central Pennsylvania; District 5, Western Pennsylvania; District 7, the anthracite field around Hazleton; District 8, the small Brazil block field of Indiana; District 9, the anthracite field around Shamokin; District 10, Washington; District 11, Indiana, excluding the Brazil block field; District 12, Illinois; District 13, Iowa; District 14, Kansas; District 15, Colorado; District 16, Maryland; District 17, Northern West Virginia; District 18, Western Canada; District 19, Tennessee and Harlan County (Ky.) field; District 20, Alabama; District 21, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas; District 22, Wyoming; District 23, Western Kentucky; District 24, Michigan; District 25, Missouri; District 26, Nova Scotia; District 27, Montana; District 29, New River, Loop Creek and other West V and District 30, the Big of Kentucky.

REHISTORIC MONSTER REPORT DOUBTED

merican Professor Believes Relic That of Animal Primitive Man Kept as Pet.

the Associated Press.

EW YORK, March 25.—The de, the bone and the hank of hair, n the existence of which South erican scientists partly base be- f that a prehistoric monster still s in a Patagonian lake, now re- in the American Museum of tural History, Prof. F. A. Lucas ted today. This fragment was ented to the late Theodore osevelt during his South Ameri- exploration.

Prof. Lucas declines to share the timism of Prof. Onelli, who heads e expedition dispatched by the enos Aires Zoological Gardens to pture a weird monster reported have been seen in Patagonia.

The relic in Prof. Lucas' care is mall piece of wrinkled hide about alf-inch thick, with a substruc- re of closely woven bony cartilage, d having a thin lock of hair cling- to it. It is Prof. Onelli's theory at the animal to whom this hide longed must have been quite re- tly deceased.

"We have definitely established," e New York scientist explains, at the relic was a part of the atomy of the brybobacrius, a e land animal of fantastic pro- rtions, which primitive men kept a pet."

According to Prof. Lucas, the bry- acrius had nothing in common th the animals reported seen in tagonia, which disports itself ut an unexplored lake, wags a l a score of feet long, has the s of the crocodile, the nostrils a pachyderm, and wings like a inese dragon.

"To the contrary, the brybobacrius s strictly a noncarnivorous land mal in the pleistocene period," of. Lucas asserts. "The piece we e was given to Mr. Roosevelt by South American collector, who nd it in a cave near Last Hope let—one of the caves which shel- ed primitive man nearly 20,000 ars ago.

"In fact, the presence of the re- ins of the brybobacrius in one of se human habitations leads us to ieve that primitive man tamed e hideous monster and shared his me with it."

Stenographer Who Is Candidate for Collector of Richmond Heights

MISS HAZEL E. M. MESSENGER.

Miss Hazel E. Morton Messenger of 1403 Maryland avenue, Richmond Heights, is in the race for City Collector of Richmond Heights, which is incorporated as a city of the fourth class, and she is confident she will win.

"Most of the women are my friends, and, though we are unorganized, we are going to show the men what we can do," she said today. "A woman never had a chance there before and no women candidates were selected at the mass meeting, March 16. I just decided to get the office, so I filed my candidacy several days ago. The election will be April 4.

"My opponents are M. Clark Mitchell, present Collector; R. E. Reis, and a man named Brewer. I don't know their politics, but I'm a Republican. The Collector takes in several thousand dollars a year and is paid a percentage of the collections. Last year there was more than $6000 in special taxes. There are automobile and dog licenses, building permits and street taxes, so that I will be busy a lot of the time. I'm positive I'll get the job."

Miss Messenger is a stenographer in the real estate office of her father in the Title Guaranty Building, and is a notary public for St. Louis County. She is 25 years old. Richmond Heights voters will elect a complete group of city officials April 4. James Jensen, who has been Mayor for 12 years, and T. U. Talbot are opposing candidates for Mayor. The ordinances were changed two years ago to allow of women officials, but Miss Messenger is the first candidate.

Medical School Fee Is Increased.

The tuition fee for students at the Washington University School of medicine, beginning with the new school year, will be $300, the increase being from $200. This applies only to new students. The higher fee will not approximately meet the expense of the university corporation, Chancellor Hall said, but was made because no other medical school of the same class has a tuition fee smaller than $300.

SUNDAY EVENING SERMONS TO BE SPREAD BY RADIO

Broadcasting of a Comedy at Service Hours Stirs New York Clergy to Compete.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—When Ed Wynn and his company permitted the "broadcasting" of their comedy, "The Perfect Fool," the other Sunday night, they not only gave radio fans of the whole city a merry evening, but they started something else. Some of these same fans, who otherwise would have been at church on that evening, stayed at home to share in the fun and their pastors heard about it. Now a group of clergymen has started a movement to insure the broadcasting of sermons and sacred songs each Sunday evening from 7:30 to 9, beginning immediately after Lent.

The plan originated in the mind of Rev. Mebane Ramsay, pastor, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, West New Brighton. The Staten Island minister is a radio enthusiast. After a consultation with pastors of other churches in the neighborhood he addressed an inquiry to the General Broadcasting Committee of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. He wanted to know whether it would be feasible to conduct Sunday evening services by wireless.

The response was that it was not only feasible, but desirable. Mr. Ramsay called up several clergymen and obtained their promises to assist.

Lamke, registrar of Washington University. About 200 delegates and visitors are expected.

EX-POLICE CAPTAIN ADDRESSED HIS WIFE AS "MY DEAR MADAM"

Style of Communication Described in Alimony Suit; Wife Said to Have "Deserted Home."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—When former Police Captain John J. Collins had anything to say to his wife, he wrote it, saluting her as "my dear madam," and subscribing himself "Respectfully," according to the testimony of Mrs. Collins yesterday in the trial of a suit for alimony pending separation.

"Dear Madam—Upon your repeated requests the following agreement by us was entered into June 10, 1919: It was to provide you with a home and allowance of $28 weekly for table expenses, $3 a week for laundry, and sufficient for clothing for yourself and the children. In return for same, you were to properly care for the house, provide an adequate amount of food for the family and co-operate with me," he wrote his wife.

"You have not complied with the above mentioned agreement, and violated the same as follows:

"Deserted home from about 9 a. m., Saturday, May 7, 1921, leaving no one in charge, returning 11 p. m., Sunday, May 8, 1921, leaving mechanics working there in violation of my wishes.

"Failure to provide and prepare food during the above mentioned period.

"Left house with no one in charge for several hours on Saturday afternoon, May 14, 1921.

"As a result of these violations, I will be compelled to make other arrangements.

"Respectfully,
"(Signed) JOHN J. COLLINS."

BUILDING RESTRICTION SOUGHT

University Heights Residents Would Bar Houses Costing Below $10,000.

Suit was filed at Clayton yesterday by 38 owners and residents of University Heights, a subdivision of University City, against 19 property owners, to change the restrictions of the subdivision to require that no house costing less than $10,000 may be erected there. The minimum now is $5000, as provided in 1906 by E. G. Lewis, founder of University City.

The petition states that increased building costs have made the change necessary in order to maintain the standard of the district, which comprises 30 acres lying between Pennsylvania and Wellesley avenues and Delmar and Kingsbury boulevards. One of the plaintiffs said that the suit was filed to prevent the erection of some comparatively cheap houses which it is understood real estate interests plan. Some of the defendants refused to agree to the change.

Copenhagen Concern Alleges $3,000,000 Worth of Furs Were Stolen by Russian Government.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

LEIPSIC, March 25.—The claim of the Russian Trading Co., of Copenhagen, against the soviet government, which is accused of having stolen $3,000,000 worth of furs, Danish property, is being heard in court here. The president of the court proposed that the furs be sold at auction, and that the money paid for them be deposited until the trading company's claim is proven.

The company, however, refused to consent to this, insisting they had identified all the furs as their property. They were stored in Moscow in 1918, under the protection of the soviet regime just as if they were Danish Government goods.

Means for Financing City Charities and Welfare Work Discussed in Report

Federation Idea and Community Chest as Agencies for Obtaining Money for Rehabilitation of Families and Meeting Social Problems Are Contrasted.

Community Chests and Financial Federations as a means for financing by joint campaign, the charities and welfare organizations of a city are discussed in a report on "Social Agencies and the Community," just distributed to its members by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Washington D. C. The report was prepared for the Civic Development Department by its secretary John Ihlder. Ihlder is reputed to have had wide experience in social work. His most recent position before becoming secretary of the Civic Development Department of the United States Chamber of Commerce was executive secretary of the Philadelphia Housing Association. The report, in part, follows:

"American business men are the principal financial contributors to the agencies that deal with our social problems. Because of this chambers of commerce over all the country have begun to take an active part in the effort to secure greater co-ordination and efficency of effort on the part of these agencies, fewer and more effective appeals from them for contributions.

"It is important to consider proposals for reorganization, co-ordination or federation—three long words but much used in making them familiar—in the light of their effect upon all our social and economic thinking. The social agencies of today are a product of our present economic system and partake of its character. If their character is radically changed there will be a reflex influence. If they are destroyed an immediate substitute must and will be found, for America today would not tolerate leaving undone the work they are doing. If they are weakened, made less free as agencies whose controlling motive is social betterment for the whole community, the effect will be widespread and serious. Many of them are now regarded with suspicion by elements in the community who believe that consciously or subconsciously, these agencies are biased in favor of those who contribute most largely to their support, or who realize that their work presents a serious obstacle to radical change.

Things to Be Accomplished.

"There is need for far-reaching improvements in organization, for better methods, for broader vision, but while the annoyance to contributors from a multiplicity of financial appeals or other comparatively trivial reason may be the immediate cause of action—as the shooting of an Archduke was the immediate cause of the World War—that action, if it is to do good rather than harm, should be upon some such basis as that outlined in a report presented to the Civic Development Department Committee at its meeting in April, 1921. This was in the nature of a report of progress and, therefore, definitely stated to be tentative.

"It is believed, however, that there should be progress toward an orderly co-relation of community efforts for public welfare, in order that work may become more effective; duplication and waste may be reduced; better methods and standards may be adopted; unity of purpose may become more general; the whole of the local needs may be planned for; the supporting public may be given a clearer and more adequate knowledge, both of what is being accomplished and what must yet be done.

"It is believed that those purposes can most certainly and quickly be accomplished by a federation or council of welfare agencies which will adopt them as the principal reasons for its organization, and which will promote, among existing agencies, mutual understanding and co-operation.

"It is not believed that the results to be desired from federation can be secured by promoting a single inclusive agency or by giving the directing and determining power into the hands of a small group.

"It is believed that there should be the utmost freedom of purpose and of action on the part of individual agencies, which is consistent with the majority opinion in the representative council of welfare agencies to which they may have given their voluntary allegiance, and that the way should be left open for the creation of new agencies when there is need for their services.

"It is believed that a united campaign for contributions may be conducted by such a representative council or federation of welfare agencies with financial economies and with advantageous educational features, but that these purposes stated in paragraph two above, unless the latter purposes are the acknowledged and the principal reasons for the federation, will largely be defeated as well as the fundamental purposes."

Term Distinction.

"The immediate importance of seeking to crystallize sound public opinion on this subject is evidenced by the rapid spread of financial federations of private social agencies, which, because of their success in making the number of taxpayers and because of the methods sometimes employed which introduce an element of compulsion to supplement or increase gifts inspired by interest, are beginning to raise the question, why should not all this be done out of the taxes?

"The federation is a logical development and is a responce to needs analogous to those which inspired the founders of the Societies to Organize Charity many years ago. It differed, in the beginning at least, from the latter in that it did not undertake to do social work direct. In the great majority of instances this difference still obtains, but there are indications in some federations of a tendency to do the work themselves, following the example of the Charity Organization Society. Opponents of financial federations question their singleness of purpose and prophecy that before long those who control the federations will seek to control the present agencies into one great organization under their control, or by imposing policy-determining conditions upon those who would share in the distribution of funds.

"There is a distinction between financial federation and community chest as these two terms are coming to be used. A financial federation takes care only of local needs; a community chest takes care also of the needs of state, national and international agencies. The latter agencies have had hard times in financial federation cities, for the distinction is not always clear to contributors who feel that they have done their part and ignore or resent solicitation from the out-of-town agency.

St. Louis Body Cited.

"It is maintained by some who are in close touch with financial federations and community chests that the proper development is through councils of social agencies like the Community Council of St. Louis, which will bring about mutual understanding and a united effort to raise standards and improve methods. When measurable progress has been made in this direction, then a common effort to raise funds should be added. As a matter of fact, this, in a general way, has been the procedure in many instances. But there has been no uniformity and there has developed no one form of organization which is acknowledged as superior in all respects to others, or as fitted for every city. With some exceptions, as that of Philadelphia, however, the council of social agencies either is an integral part of the federation or is bound up with it and given definite powers.

"In Philadelphia the force of the old autocratic tradition triumphed at the last moment; the agencies which had worked out unusually effective methods of co-operation were practically ignored. Though a council is provided for, it can give advice only when requested by the board of trustees, who are elected by representatives of the contributors. This plan, which puts all power into the hands of a small group indirectly chosen and therefore little controlled by the individual giver or the agencies, makes easily possible a dictatorship. Because of this it has been received with dismay by most advocates of federation, who claim that federation is and will be quickly responsive to the opinion of its public.

"It is stated that at the annual meeting of representatives of federations in New Orleans in 1920, the following were accepted by the majority of those present:

> The democratic form of organization is desirable and at least the member agencies and the givers should be represented on the governing board.
> An annual campaign is preferable, but there must be the greatest attention to preliminary work, to organizing personnel, inspiring enthusiasm and sense of responsibility.
> The "quota" idea should not be carried in actual solicitation to the point of an insistence which might cause resentment.
> Local partnerships and firms should be exempt from solicitation, emphasis being placed on individual gifts.
> The support of industrial (labor) groups should be sought and labor should be brought to participate and to feel that the organization is a community affair.
> House to house canvas by solicitors was favored. (Elyria, O., has found the use of the automatic telephone a more effective method.)

Opinions Differed.

"Opinions differed as to whether chambers of commerce should have representatives on the governing board and also as to the advisability and possibility of securing gifts from corporations with absentee ownership, though it was generally felt that such corporations have an obligation to the communities in which they do business.

"It is accepted that the social agencies are an essential part of our present social and economic system, then it is a matter of great consequence to determine where they are heading under the new method of financing. So far as the evidence goes there is not so much confusion on this subject as lack of thought. There was need for more money, there were ineffectiveness and annoyance connected with the old lack of system in solicitation. The new method has been devised as being more effective and less annoying. Apparently it has achieved these purposes. But what else is it doing?

"Nor is it only in regard to what agencies should be admitted (if many are excluded there will be again the multiplicity of solicitations), designation of gifts, and composition of governing body that opinions differ. Starting with the idea of an organization whose primary function should be the raising of money, nearly all the advocates of financial federation say it shall do more: set standards, compel co-operation. 'Those who have the money—have the power, and they should use it'—though of course to good ends. Some, however, go much farther. They would make the financial federation a federation of all social activities. They still insist, however, on autonomy for the individual agencies. The director of the Council of Social Agencies in Cincinnati and executive of its community fund, one of the most successful, says, 'Those of us who have been advocates of "Federation" * * * have been charged with attempting to establish dangerous "control" in the social field. But * * * (we support) a plan for securing united action without surrendering local initiative * * * Social service agencies will not and should not consent to surrender their place at the social service planning table. * * * From this it clearly follows that a social service federation should be entirely representative of the agencies, having only such powers as the agencies delegate to it.'

"There seems to be tendency on the part of federationists to minimize the financial, though that is still in the public mind the chief reason for financial federations and community chests, as their names indicate. The director of the Louisville federation writes, 'the fundamental idea of the community chest is co-operation between social agencies for a three-fold purpose, viz: the improvement of social method, the education of the public, and the raising of funds were desired.'

Clear Thinking Required.

"There is need of clear thinking if we are to avoid disagreeable surprises. We can not indulge in loose analogies, as a prominent business man of Cincinnati did when he compared all the social work of a large city to a single manufacturing enterprise: 'If one looks at the materials that go into social service and the finished products that come out there is no reason for regarding social work in any given city as other than a single great organization. The materials are the same; money, records, personal service both paid and unpaid.'

"Would not the same reasoning lead us to the conclusion that all the manufacturing concerns in a city should be merged into one organization? The materials are the same, money, raw materials, personal service through the use, both of brain and brawn. Therefore, pins, talking machines, soap and locomotives should all be made by one concern.

"Of course, social service, is, in fact, more varied than industry, which serves only the material needs of man. As between its two great groups, the case workers and the community workers, there is a great difference in attitude of mind, in interest, as there is between a physician and a lawyer. To be sure there is but one great social problem, if one chooses to phrase it that way, and, however, phrased no social problem, no part of the one great social problem can be solved unless others are solved too. So there is a common purpose which is being more and more clearly recognized.

"But this is far from saying that all social work could best be done under one great organization. If it were mere almsgiving from those who have much to those who have nothing, one great organization could do the job; for it would be merely an administrative job. But if it is to rehabilitate families; if it is to cure the sick and having cured them give them the incentive and the will to stay well; if it is to consider and reach decisions on such matters as widows' pensions and child labor; if it is to work aggressively for housing betterment; then it becomes a question whether a single organization can handle it.

"All well intentioned people ar

The Jewett Is Coming

ONE WEEK FROM NOW the new Jewett light Six will be on exhibition in our showrooms and we shall be prepared to accept orders for immediate or very early delivery.

We make this preliminary announcement so that every local motorist may plan to see this remarkable car and arrange for a demonstration early in the week.

Up to now the Jewett has been displayed only at private exhibitions. But good news—important news—cannot be suppressed.

That is why thousands of people are waiting for this car with an eagerness that is quite without precedent.

The word has gone forth that the Jewett is an astounding achievement in motor car value—a fine, high-powered six at a price that is little less than sensational.

Though incomplete, that description fits the car with absolute accuracy.

What the public does not know is this: The Jewett is a very comfortable five-passenger car with superbly beautiful body lines and every appointment that a critical man could desire.

It is equipped with a fifty-horsepower six-cylinder motor that will develop a speed of sixty miles per hour or throttle down to a snail's pace in traffic.

It is built on a specially designed frame that cannot sag or weave. Its springs are unusually long and flexible.

The body is hung close to the ground and perfect distribution of weight insures the calm, steady riding qualities of an ocean liner.

Though very high powered and brilliant in performance, it is a miser on fuel consumption and will turn up amazing mileage on its oversize cord tires.

Such, in brief, is the Jewett. And the price is $1065 f. o. b. Detroit.

Just now we will say no more. There are but seven days before the Jewett will be here to tell its own story as no words could ever tell it.

Come in at that time. See the car—ride in it—drive it—judge it from any angle that your experience suggests. Then, decide whether it is or is not the first real quality six at a quantity price.

INCREASE IN CITY ASSESSMENT THIS YEAR $6,836,911

St. Louis and 7 Counties Have $12,035,291 Added to Burden; $271,868 Decrease for Rest of State.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY'S SHARE IS $1,785,111

Jackson County (Kansas City) Will Have Burden Lightened $53,186,832, Commission's Figures Show.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 25.—While 107 counties in Missouri share a total decrease of $271,868,730 in assessment of realty and personal property as a basis for 1922 taxes, in figures about to be adopted by the State Board of Equalization, St. Louis and six counties, including St. Louis County, bear between them an increase of $12,035,291. St. Louis, as usual, is to bear a leading share of the tax burden with an increase of $6,836,911.

Increases of the six counties are as follows:

St. Louis County, $1,785,111; Cole, $1,882,407; Barry, $663,153; Stone, $571,770; Pettis, $312,594; Randolph, $43,445.

These figures are from recommendations of the State Tax Commission to the Board of Equalization, which members of the board have indicated will be adopted with only a few minor changes, unless something not now foreseen develops. The Tax Commission recommends that the total valuation of realty and personal property of the State be placed at $4,009,132,317, which is $259,833,339 below the total fixed by the board last year, $4,268,965,656. The $259,833,339 is the difference between the aggregate decreases granted to 107 counties, $271,868,730, and the increases to St. Louis and six of the counties mentioned.

Decrease of $53,186,832.

In contrast with the increase St. Louis is to bear, which advances the city's assessment from $902,797,389 on realty and personal property last year to $909,634,250, Jackson County (Kansas City) receives a decrease of $53,186,832. Of this decrease $17,805,252 is on town lots, on which St Louis is increased by $7,437,310. The figures of Assessor William Buder of St. Louis were adopted by the Tax Commission without a change, while those of the Jackson County Assessor were decreased about $128,000 on the total.

Personal property of the State was decreased by the Tax Commission $146,693,179; farm land, $102,482,933, and town lots, $10,646,127.

The Tax Commission is composed of Roy Monier of Carrollton, vice chairman of the Republican State Committee, as chairman, and George M. Hagee of St. Louis, an attorney, both Republicans. The law provides that the commission shall be bipartisan, but Gov. Hyde has allowed this commission to function without a Democratic member since the State Senate declined to confirm A. L. McCawley of Carthage.

The commission has devoted much time to preparing circulars, charts, tables and statements for use by the administration in meeting vigorous criticism of the Governor's taxation policies.

Questionnaire Sent Out.

In getting ready to make its reports to the Board of Equalization, however, numerous questionnaires were sent to county officials and others to obtain information as a basis for assessment findings, and field agents were sent into a number of counties to gather similar data and hold meetings. In addition, about 40 counties sent delegations to Jefferson Cit yto ask for reductions of one sort or another in their assessments. Unfriendly critics are now intimating that the administration is endeavoring to mend its fences in counties which protested loudly abotu their taxes last year, instead of trying to approach nearer to the "true value" theory of assessment, made mandatory by the statutes.

No protest has been filed either with the Tax Commission or the Board of Equalization from St. Louis yet this year. Vigorous objections from St. Louis last year brought substantial reductions in the figures first adopted for St. Louis real estate and personal property.

GIFTS TO WASHINGTON U.

Edward Mallinckrodt Jr. Gives $1250 for Research Work.

A gift of $1250 to Washington University by Edward Mallinckrodt Jr. of 16 Westmoreland place, was announced yesterday by Chancellor Hall, the money to be applied to the accounts of salary and cost of animals and materials used in research work in the department of biological chemistry.

The Union Electric Light and Power Co. had donated a rereach fellowship for graduate work in the department of electrical engineering for two years at $750 a year. This will be utilized by a graduate assistant who will devote half his time to instruction, as a member of the faculty, and the remainder to research.

Comparison of Valuations by Counties

A comparison is presented here of the total assessment of real and personal property in the various counties of Missouri by the State Board of Equalization last year, by county assessors this year and recommendations of the State Tax Commission to the Board of Equalization this year, which are expected to be adopted by the board within a few days with only a few changes, as the basis for 1922 taxes.

MAIL DELIVERIES BEING CUT TO TWO A DAY AFTER SURVEY

Routes in Residential Sections Being Revised to Release Some of Carriers.

Mail deliveries in the residential districts are being curtailed from three to two each day with the advance of a city-wide survey now being made by Postoffice Inspectors. The survey, according to K. P. Aldrich, Inspector in charge, is one of a number being made throughout the United States.

A revision of 111 carriers' routes, in the north and west section of the city, has been completed and it was found that 100 carriers could amply do the work. The remaining 11 will be transferred into the main office.

Aldrich said, that he expected a complete survey of the city to relieve 30 carriers from routes and make them available for office work where they are needed. He estimated that this change would effect a saving of $55,000 annually. There are now 620 carriers.

Postmaster Alt has approved of the curtailment of residence district deliveries. Three deliveries will be maintained in residential districts where the volume of mail is heavy. Business service will not be reduced.

Residential district deliveries will be made at 8 a. m. and 1 p. m. after the completion of the survey instead of 8 a. m., 1 p. m. and 3:30 p. m., as is now the practice.

WOMAN SERVING MURDER TERM BRINGS BABY INTO PRISON

Mrs. Rolla de Hart Had Been Permitted to Leave Penitentiary for Birth of Infant.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 25.—The walls of the woman's department of the State penitentiary here resounded with cheers of women prisoners last night, for Mrs. Rolla de Hart was back, bringing her baby.

Mrs. de Hart is serving a 10-year term for murder in connection with the same crime for which her husband is serving a life sentence. She was taken from the prison the day before the child was born, so that it might be born outside of prison. "Betty June" was born in the State Orthopedic Hospital.

Betty June was named by the women prisoners in the penitentiary. For weeks they had discussed the baby's name, and virtually every woman in the prison worked to contribute something to the baby's "layette."

The devotion of the women attracted the attention of the entire State, and what to do with Betty June became the most absorbing topic of scores of women's clubs, church organizations, and even the Chamber of Commerce. More than 1000 persons appealed to the prison mother for permission to adopt the baby. An American Legion post asked for it.

STRIKING COLORS IN GALT PORTRAIT EXHIBIT

Painting of Bishop Tuttle Particularly Striking—Pictures of Local Women.

Attention is being attracted to an exhibit of the work of Charles F. Galt, a St. Louis portrait painter, in the Noonan-Kocian galleries, Tenth and Locust streets.

Viewers have been struck with the likeness of the portraits to their subjects and with the very striking colors presented. In addition, cognoscente have called attention to a very fine texture.

One of the portraits is of Bishop Tuttle, clad in his robes and seated in a high-back chair in contemplative mood. The robes are black and white, a color contrast accentuated by the flowing white beard of the venerable churchman,

One displaying vivid color treatment is that of Miss Minnie Potter of 4021 Washington boulevard, a sister-in-law of the artist. Miss Potter is gowned in block velvet and over her shoulders, reaching on one side to the floor, is a flaming red shawl. This picture was placed in the street window for a time and attracted passers unusually.

Galt has painted his niece, Frances, daughter of Thomas F. Galt, in an orange sweater and sport hat and holding a black pomeranian.

Other portraits are of Mrs. Kent Clow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Jones; James P. Jamieson and Misses Helen and Norah Jamieson; Mrs. William B. Potter, and the artist's wife and infant daughter.

Galt has won several Artist Guild exhibit prizes. He is 37 years old.

CHILD'S DEATH AN ACCIDENT

Heloice Engle, 5, Killed by Street Car When Playing in Street.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Heloice Engle, 5 years old, of 3004 Kossuth avenue, who died Thursday night from injuries suffered in the afternoon when hit by a street car while she was skipping a rope in front of her home.

Herman Wirtz of 4036 Pleasant street, who was a passenger on the street car, a westbound Lee line car, testified that he had left his seat and was walking to the front vestibule to alight when he saw the girl skipping from the south to the north side of the street. As he neared the vestibule, he said, he heard a thump and realized that the girl had collided with the side of the car. He said he did not believe the motorman saw the girl.

Herman [illegible]. Streib, the motorman, and John G. Faudree, the conductor, did not testify.

A VIOLENT INDISPOSITION

I FIRST heard this one several years ago. I have heard it several times in varying forms since then. But for me age cannot wither nor custom stale it. To my way of thinking it is still worthy of being included in any symposium, great or small, of stories dealing with the Afro-American population.

As my favorite version runs, a colored man, on appearing for work one morning, wore a countenance so battered that almost one might have been pardoned for assuming that its owner had made a more or less successful effort to run it through a meat chopper. The white man for whom the scarred and bruised victim worked took one look at that disfigured face and threw up both hands in horror and sympathy.

"Great heaven, boy!" he cried. "What have you been doing to yourself?"

"Me? I ain't been doin' nothin' to myself," explained the darky. "But somethin' is done been did to me, Mr. Watkins. It's lak dis, suh: Yistiddy evenin' I got into a kind of an argyment wid another nigger an' one word led to another, ez it will. An' purty soon I up an' hauled off an' hit at him wid my fist.

"Well, seemed lak that irritated him. So he took an' split my lip wide open wid a pair of brass knucks, an' he blacked dis eye of mine clear down to my armpit an' tore one ear moughty nigh loose from de side of my haid, an' den, to cap all, he knocked me down and stomped up an' down 'pon my stomach wid his feet. * * * Honest to Gawd, Mr. Watkins, I never did git so sick of a nigger in all my life!"

BOND PRICES RISE DESPITE THE NEW ISSUES OFFERED

Some Securities Work Into New High Ground Regardless of Hardering of Money Rates—New Low on German Mark—Cotton Market Heavy.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"Little that was really new developed in the financial markets during the past week, despite certain superficial indications to the contrary. A situation which comprehends greater industrial activity and disappointing retail business has persisted. It is true that the spring improvement in industrial operations, which has applied especially to the heavier and mechanical industries, has been greater and has come earlier than had been expected. It remains to be seen, however, just how far this has resulted from anticipations of a coal strike which has been advertised and debated unusually far in advance. Accumulations of stocks of coal by consumers began, in fact, as early as January; and, strike or no strike, a sharp falling off in mining after April 1 is extremely probable. The next few weeks should enable us, therefore, to place the present burst of activity in its proper perspective.

"The tightening of money rates, which has caused some little uncertainty during the last few days, is a development of no particular significance. It cannot be considered properly without reference to the pronounced ease of the previous week. It is now thoroughly established that a tax date, with its large treasury operations, invariably produces a brief period of abnormal ease. The reaction from this case is, accordingly, a perfectly natural event. The Reserve Banks' statement shows, meanwhile, another high record ratio of reserve, and the logic of the situation suggests that, as the spring movement slackens, further ease in money will result.

"That the tendency of the money market is unchanged is suggested, furthermore, by the behavior of the bond market. All through the past week, when money rates were hardening all the stocks were reacting, bond prices held firm or worked into new high ground. The advance has persisted, indeed, in spite of the many new issues which have been offered to the public. Even allowing for the recent firming up in the price of money, it is evident that the margin between the rate on bankers' acceptance and treasury cereificates on the one hand, and the Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rate on the other, has been materially increased. If this margin is added to, or, in fact, maintained, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that a reduction in the rediscount rate must follow. The condition, furthermore, is not local, since precisely similar expectations are entertained at London.

Heaviness of Cotton.

"Heaviness in the cotton market draws attention to one of our less satisfactory situations. The movement for lower textile wages has now spread pretty well throughout New England and a trial of strength is in progress. The manufacturers' position hardly is comfortable, since they are carrying considerable stocks of cotton acquired at last aumumn's high prices and find that their customers are quite conservative, both with regard to buying and the matter of prices. Here again a parallel may be brought in the British situation, which is embarrassed further by the Indian attitude with regard to British cotton goods. It is clear that consumers are holding tenaciously to the idea of lower prices, and, if the disparity in the deflation in different kinds of goods be considered, are doing so with justification. As far as may be seen the principal remedy for the unbalanced condition of our price structure is to be found in lowered production costs in certain branches of industry.

"Germany and the reparations situation have again forced themselves on our attention through another bad slump in the mark. It would appear that the conditions which the Reparations Commission have coupled with the reduced cash payments for the present year have caused concern in Germany. The billion gold mark forced loan and the specification regarding a heavy increase in taxation have brought into question the strength of the existing Government's position and the likelihood of serious financial disturbances. Such considerations apparently have started a renewed flight from the mark, individuals preferring to take their chances with foreign currencies while such a readjustment is going on.

"There are, however, encouraging aspects to the situation. The Wirth Government has emerged successfully from a number of crises and is endowed, apparently, with a real desire to carry out its engagements. The allies at the same time, are showing a disposition to be reasonable, and the new cash requirement seems distinctly moderate. The financial reforms which Germany is called on to make, furthermore, while severe and likely to cause temporary difficulties, are proper in principle and inevitable in fact. The next few months may bring Germany severe trials, but she should emerge in a far sounder condition."

Profit-Taking Saturday.

"After a fairly good opening the market reflected the disposition of traders to take profits over the week end. This was especially noticeable among industrials, which, with the exception of a few specialties, showed fractional losses. The rails were irregular, but on the whole did better than the industrials. Judge Gary's comment on the steel situation elicited no special response from the market. Steel shares, both those of the corporation and the independents, were somewhat heavy. Tractions, on the other hand, under the leadership of Brooklyn Rapid Transit, were strong. A feature of the trading was a run up of 12 points in Woolworth shares to 167, but this high level was not held. Trading was in fair volume.

"Quiet week-end trading characterized the foreign exchange market. Changes in rates on the whole were but slight. Sterling was a quarter of a cent better at $4.38¼, while French francs were practically unchanged. Italian lire were slightly above yesterday's closing and there was a continuation of the quiet improvement in the German mark which started Thursday. The Scandinavian exchanges showed a firmer tone, while the Far Eastern currencies were inactive.

"Dullness was also apparent in the commodity markets and price changes were relatively unimportant. Some scattered liquidation was on in wheat with a resulting decline of about a cent from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅜ of a cent lower at $1.21⅜ and got down as low as $1.30⅜, but later reacted. Cotton held steady at the previous day figure in the early trading and worked up a few points later on.

"The surplus reserves of the Clearing House banks at the end of the week show a decrease of $1,589,000, bringing this item down to $45,571,220. Loans are smaller by $13,978,000, and deposits meanwhile have declined to the amount of $86,692,000. Reserves in Federal Reserve Board member banks are less than $52,625,000, and Government deposits declined $21,022,000."

The Investment Market.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Latin-American issues were the only prominent exception to the firm tone of today's bond market. Argentine 5s and Cuban Republic 4½s forfeited 1 point each. Swiss 8s were especially strong, rising 1¼ points, and French Governments and municipals, as well as Belgian issues, also improved with Chile 6s and Cuba Cane 7½s.

Domestic rails were mainly better, especially Union Pacific 4s, Missouri, Kansas & Texas adjustment 5s, St. Paul refunding 4½s, Oregon Short Line 4s and Norfolk and Western convertible 6s. Liberty and Victory issues were steady.

Trading in bonds this week was broader and more active than at any recent period, mostly at higher price levels. New offerings, including several foreign underwritings, exceeded $100,000,000, and all found a ready market.

It is expected that another European loan of fairly large proportions will be floated here next week. There is said to be considerable competition in banking circles for the proposed $25,000,000 bond issue of the Orleans (France) Railroad.

Rediscount Rate Reduced.

CHICAGO, March 25.—The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago announced today to the member banks of district number seven that rediscount rate would be reduced to four and one-half per cent, effective today. The rate has been five per cent.

NEW YORK CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Following is a list of today's highest, lowest and closing prices for the most active stocks dealt in on the New York Curb Market:

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Such further efforts as were made in today's Stock Exchange trading in the direction of higher prices, narrowed down to a dozen or so individual issues. While these were going up the rest of the list was either sagging or barely holding its own.

Bethlehem Steel B made a new high at 72, but subsequently came down and so did steel common.

A jump in Woolworth's stock based upon anticipation of a melon-cutting brought a sharp uprush in other department chain store issues, notably Kresge and May Department Stores. Talk of higher dividends on Coca Cola accompanied the special buying at new high prices in the stock. The new high record for Studebaker and the special strength in Baldwin Locomotive early in the day failed to influence their particular groups.

The Bond Market.

Foreign external loans reaching new high records dominated the bond market during today's two-hour session. The majority of the representative members of the group gained a point or more. Swiss 8s, a feature of the preceding day's transactions, jumped up over a point to the highest point touched by any of the foreign bonds traded in on the New York Stock Exchange. Norway 8s, Berne 8s, Bergen 8s, Denmarks 8s, Argentine 7s and Zurich 8s all struck fresh tops, while the United Kingdom 5½s and the French 7½s and 8s also made slight advances. Liberty Bonds regained part of yesterday's small losses. Republic of Chile 8s of 1941 got to 102.

The $5,000,000 Erie railroad consolidated mortgage 7 per cent gold bonds floated today were all sold.

In the domestic list, the new Missouri, Kansas & Texas issues were active and strong, particularly the adjustments. On the other hand, Erie 7s proved one of the weak spots, selling down 1½ points from last night's final. The majority of the railroad securities were little changed. Ann Arbor 4s fell off about a point after yesterday's sharp rise. New York City tractions kept irregular, with an advance of over 2 points in Brooklyn Rapid Transit 7s and a moderate decline occurred in Interborough 5s. Higher prices were made by Wilson & Co. 7½s, some of the public utility issues and the Cuba Cane Sugar 8s, while Ajax Rubber 6s encountered realizing sales.

ACTIVITY IN LOW-PRICED OILS ON CURB MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The feature on the Curb Exchange today was Sterling Products, Inc., which was dealt in for the first time. The stocks started at 40 and later advanced to 41 before profit-taking developed.

Acme Packing was again in demand and rose to a new high record for the present movement, and there was good buying of the Hudson & Manhattan issues. Swift International and British-American Tobacco were strong. Some of the recent leaders, including Libby, McNeil & Libby and Eastman Kodak were slightly lower. Postum Cereal gained more than two points when small buying orders "at the market" were executed at the opening. Offerings were small.

In the oil group there was rather general activity among the low priced issues. Hudson Oil was the leader, advancing to a new high for the present movement. Mexico Oil was active, Kirby Petroleum was steady and a firm tone was shown in Maracaibo and Cities Service issues.

Flaxseed.

DULUTH, Minn., March 25.—Flax seed, $2.50@2.52.

RESPONSE TO NEW CAPITAL ISSUES GOOD IN LONDON

Insistence by Allies That Germany Reform Her Currency and Finances Temporarily Increases Flight From Mark.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, March 25.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review today says:

"Prognostications of a reduction in the Federal Reserve and Bank of England rediscount rates early in April are being used as a lever for further hoisting of investment securities, though the movement necessarily is restrained by the continued stream of new capital issues. The response, however, remains good, and the Nord Railway loan offered by the Rothschilds for £5,000,000 closed within two hours of opening the lists. It is rumored that a Czecho-Slovakian loan will go both to America and England, while other large foreign loans are expected here next week.

Differ Over Russia.

"Political favors also are restraining market activity, these factors including the uncertainty that was felt as to the ratification of the four-Power treaty by your Senate and, in addition, the troubles of India and Ireland and the Genoa conference. Opinions here are sharply divided about Russia. Lloyd George's tactics evidently are to oust the worst form of bolchevism by pushing trade intercourse. Hence the proposed establishment of a great international trading corporation, which Germany obviously is keen about. Apart, however, from the directly interested parties we find your attitude of complete absention from relations with Russia until Bolshevism is defeated to be more intelligible and desirable.

"The trial balloon sent up on the Continent this week about further schemes for mutual cancellation of interallied debts with the result of such a cancellation to be deducted from the German reparations payments, occasions mingled amusement and annoyance in the financial district. Until you, as the chief creditor, are convinced that certain concessions to debtors are desirable in the common interest, it is considered that all such talk on the Continent is useless and mischievous. Time and events are sufficiently revealing the damage occasioned by the present disorganized condition of the exchanges, and ultimately no one will recognize this more clearlyl than America. Meanwhile, the necessity remains for all debtor countries to realize the magnitude of their obligations which realiaztion, indeed, is necessary for their own ultimate solvency.

Flight From the Mark.

"Insistence by the allies that Germany reform her currency and finances is, meanwhile, temporarily increasing the flight from the mark, because the process necessarily will be painful and distressing, and the mark is now touching fresh record depths here.

"Disclosure of the losses of the British trade corporation which have necessitated the writing off of a large part of the company's capital, will emphasize public dislike of all financial and commercial corporations issued under Government aegis.

"Your soldiers' bonus bill is, of course, regarded apprehensively here, but we undertsand that the Senate is unlikely to approve it."

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review today, says:

"Movements in European rates were popularly assumed to be directed by prospects and developments in international politics and German reparations were frequently referred to as moving forces in the foreign exchange situation. This was due to a great extent to the concentration of attention on the renewed weakness in German exchange, marks falling abruptly at times during the week and establishing a new low record when sales were made on Thursday as low as .29½, passing the previous low of .32¾, made on Nov. 27 last. Transactions in marks on this decline were on a high scale, both in this city and London, but pressure came from many other quarters, Argentina being a seller of large blocks, and many offerings were made through banking dealers in many important centers that could not be traced to a direct source. It is more than possible that industrial and commercial affairs may have been of high importance in increasing the supply, especially in this market and London.

"There was much conjecture about the various movements in sterling and the allied continental exchanges during the week, and various influences were effective in causing declines and advances. Argentina took the place of Asia as a seller of sterling at the beginning of the week and was an important feature in disturbing the market for sterling, as it had been in helping the break in German exchange, but other influences counteracted the effect of political developments and of a supply from various world centers. The continued financing in New York for foreign requirements steadily created a demand for remittance of these credits and this demand has been added to by the increased necessity to remit proceeds of sales of imports extending over a wide period of time, which are now assuming urgency because of the changed conditions in exchanges to countries that are making substantial mercantile progress.

"The demand was effective in creating strength in sterling after the first two days of the week and overbalanced offerings and declines in the London market prior to the beginning of business here on several days of the week. Business in French exchange was in increasing volume and indicated improved commerce between France and the United States, although bold flotations in French interests also played a large part in holding francs above the 9-cent level, except for a short interval at the beginning of the week.

"Quiet week-end trading characterized the foreign exchange market Saturday. Changes in rates on the whole were but slight. Sterling was a quarter of a cent better at $4.38¼, while French francs were practically unchanged. Italian lire were slightly above yesterday's closing and there was a continuation of the quiet improvement in the German mark which started Thursday. The Scandinavian exchanges showed a firmer tone, while the Far Eastern currencies were inactive."

Following are Saturday's closing quotations:

PRESSURE ON MAY WHEAT DURING WEEK

Comment on Ocean Supplies and Visible Also Factor in Range of Prices.

Approach of the time for the winding up of May contracts was considered as having had much to do with bringing about pressure to sell wheat, especially the May delivery, during the past week. Comment on supplies on ocean passage tended also to have a depressing effect on values, and so, too, did report that Argentine wheat could be obtained in Europe cheaper than shipments from the United States or Canada. With the domestic visible supply larger than at the corresponding time last year, and with finances disturbed by a new low record for German exchanges, rallies in wheat prices were mostly of a transient sort. Some less favorable crop reports, however, from parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, together with reported presence of the green bug pest in Texas and elsewhere Southwest led to some change of sentiment as the week drew to a close.

Corn and oats went down with wheat.

Provisions were affected chiefly by lower quotations on hogs.

May wheat closed 2c lower with more distant futures also down at the week-end session on the Merchants' Exchange. Corn futures likewise finished with losses. Report of export business and covering by shorts proved insufficient to offset selling.

In the cash grain market wheat was dull. Light sales were made at unchanged prices. Hard was lower to sell.

Cash corn was ½c to 1½c lower and the market dragged. Cash oats were in fair demand. The market was steady to ½c lower.

May wheat showed substantial reaction in the forepart of the day after opening at $1.28⅜. July wheat began at $1.14⅛. May corn 57⅝c and July corn 60⅝@¾c. All futures were down. Liverpool closed ½c lower.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 479 cars of wheat, compared with 651 a week ago and 643 last year, Minneapolis today receiving 50 cars. Duluth 37 and Winnipeg 392.

Primary receipts of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 532,000 bu., compared with 823,000 a week ago and 1,314,000 last year. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 675,000 bu, compared with 979,000 a week ago and 1,-117,000 last year. Oats receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 404,000 bu., compared with 497,000 a week ago and 760,000 last year.

Primary shipments of wheat were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 498,000 bu., compared with 452,-000 a week ago and 954,000 last year. Corn shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 431,000 bu., compared with 1,000,000 a week ago and 785,000 last year. Oats shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 438,000 bu, compared with 739,000 a week ago and 884,000 last year.

Clearances today were 220,000 bu of wheat, 212,000 bu of corn, 203,000 bu of oats, 1000 bbls. of flour, 225,000 bu of wheat and flour.

Local wheat receipts Saturday, which were 86,400, compared with 126,000 a week ago and 134,400 last year, included 50 cars local and 22 through. Corn receipts, which were 41,600, compared with 68,900 a week ago and 156,000 last year, included 25 cars local and 7 through. Oats receipts, which were 78,000, compared with 28,000 a week ago and 13,600 last year, included 23 cars local and 16 through. Hay receipts were 305 tons local and 91 tons through.

MAY WHEAT DEPRESSED IN TRADE ON CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, March 25.—A broad market, with wheat prices fluctuating rapidly and the close near the low point, marked the short Saturday session on the Chicago Board of Trade. Wheat closed with net losses of 1⅛c to 2c, corn was off 1c to 1⅜c, oats finished ¼c to ½c lower, lard from 12½c to 15c higher and ribs 3c to 3½c up.

In the wheat pit bears reputed to be Eastern attacked the May option at the start and were helped by some local traders. There was some excellent support for July when these tactics brought the later month to around $1.17 and the first and subsequent declines were checked. The May received support at around $1.31 and the local shorts generally scurried to cover when this developed. The source of the buying was obscure, but it evidently had its limits, for when local longs tried to unload towards the close they found no takers and a decided slump marked the final 30 minutes.

Corn was weak from the start and the May went into new low ground for the present movement. Exporters bought corn at Omaha, but domestic industrial demand seemed shut off.

Oats merely fluttered up or down in the wake of corn.

Provisions were considerably higher early, but realizing sales checked the advance. Higher yards prices for live hogs and reported improved conditions in the Liverpool provisions market were chief news factors.

NO GREAT CHANGES IN LIVESTOCK LAST WEEK

Hogs Regain Early Decline—Beef Steers Steady to Possibly 25c Lower.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last wk.	Prev. wk.	Year ago.
Cattle and calves	15,483	18,782	12,450
Hogs	63,026	61,975	50,713
Sheep	4,891	4,151	4,197
Totals	83,400	84,890	67,360

Closing prices for livestock at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week were not greatly changed from those of a week ago. Hogs regained the early decline; sheep and lambs were steady; beef steers were steady to possibly 25c lower, and butcher cattle averaged steady to 25c higher. Receipts were moderate in cattle and hogs, light in sheep and lambs. Quality of cattle was medium to plain, with a moderate sprinkling of well-finished steers and yearlings.

The cattle market opened materially higher Monday, but the advance was checked the following day and a downward reaction occurred in the trade Wednesday. The close was slow and barely steady. Demand was narrow for beef steers late in the week, and while lightweights closed about steady with a week ago, many of the heavier kinds showed a slight decline, all of Monday's improvement being wiped out. The top price for cattle was $8.35 per cwt., paid for a two-car lot of yearling steers averaging 978 lbs. High mark for matured beeves was $8.25, and the bulk of all killing beeves ranged from $6.75 to $7.75. Butcher yearlings finished steady to possibly 25c higher. Quality was slightly improved over the previous week. Numerous lots of lightweight steers and heifers registered up to $8@8.25 and the bulk of all varied from $6 to $7.65. Butcher cows advanced 15c to 25c, with most improvement appearing on the better kinds. The majority of sales were included in a spread of $4.25 to $6. Canner cows at $2.50 to $3 and cutters at $3 to $3.50 were unchanged. There was no material change reflected in bulls. Beef classes cleared largely from $4.50 to $5.25; bolognas, $4 to $4.50, and sausage types $3 to $3.50. Stocker and feeder steers, in sympathy with the slow demand for killing grades, again declined 25c, more in spots. Best lots cleared around $7@7.25, followed by fair sorts at $6 to $7, and plainer kinds down to $5. There was no essential change in the market for stock cows, heifers or bulls. Veal calves broke $1 in the week's trade, late top scoring at $8.75 and good lights varying from $8 to $8.50. Extremely light calves, 100 lbs. and under, were almost unsalable and sold as low as $3.50@4. Heavy southern corner yearlings closed around $2.75 and lights brought $3.

Hogs Decline, React.

Hog prices dipped to the lowest level in over a month during the week, but rallied at the close and finished on a fully steady basis. The low point was reached on Wednesday, when the top stood at $10.35, remaining at that figure until the closing session, when a 15 to 20c advance sent prices up to $10.55, comparing with a $10.50 top at the close of the preceding week. In the face of continued light receipts, trading was backward with a slow, weak undertone, indicating a generally indifferent demand. Receipts for the period were 63,026, comparing with 61,957 a week previous and 50,713 a year ago. The top for the week was $10.75, paid Monday, comparing with $10.90 paid a week previous. Bulk of the week's supply sold in a range of $10.10@10.65, against $10@10.75 the preceding week. Quotations: Good to choice, 160 to 230 pound hogs, $10.40@10.55, medium weights 240 to 260 pounds, $10.25@10.35 and heavies 275 pounds and up from $10@10.25. Pigs 130 to 150 pounds were quotable from $10@10.35, 100 to 125 pound pigs, $9.25@9.75, and pewees and southern pigs, $6.50@8. Good rough sows sold from $8.50@8.60 and stags $6.50@6.75, mostly.

Sheep Receipts Light.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were extremely light, totaling but 4900, with fully two-thirds of the number going direct to packers. Shippers and city butchers furnished the principal outlet for the meager supply. The top on lambs was $15.85, this being within 15c of the season's high mark. This price was paid on Tuesday, after which day the quality ran very plain on the few received. Bulk of the week's small run moved in a spread of $15.50@15.75. A deck of choice light yearling wethers sold during the week at $13.50, establishing a new top for the year. Heavy clipped yearlings sold at $12 and clipped two-year-old wethers at $10.25. Light feeding yearlings were quoted at $11. Medium lambs, of which the late runs largely consisted sold from $14@14.75, and culls from $10@13. Fat sheep were scarce and the market active and strong, good light ewes moving principally at $9.25. Canner sheep, of which there were hardly enough to make a market, sold from $2@3, and choppers and bucks equally scarce from $4@5.

A liberal run of approximately 2500 horses and mules for the week contained too many of the poorer classes and the market for these showed a lower trend. The better grades, on the other hand, ruled about steady. Buyers were on the market in large force and the Eastern territory was especially well represented. Bidding was fairly active on finished wagon horses and good chunks. Weakness in the mule alleys occurred largely on tall, leggy stock and the bad-haired thin offerings. The more attractive kinds moved satisfactorily, clearing to local dealers and out-of-town buyers.

Weekly Butter Review.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 25.—After hanging in a balance almost the entire week, with demand just about equal to the supply and prices holding steady, the butter market broke sharply toward the close of the week ending March 25, due to an accumulation, especially of fancy butter, at the eastern markets.

About the middle of the week New York began to feel the weight of supplies of fancy butter in excess of a ready demand and to this was added some of Philadelphia's surplus. The Boston market at the same time appeared fairly firm on both fresh and storage, and at Chicago stocks of practically all grades were short and barely sufficient to supply the regular trade demands.

One interesting feature of the week's market was the relatively good demand for the lower scores. The shortage of centralized butter mentioned the previous week was relieved to some extent.

New York reports the movement of considerable quantities of Australian and New Zealand butter, part of which was sold to Canadian merchants at prices said to be around 35¼c and 36½c.

COTTON MARKET LOWER CLOSE BARELY STEADY

New Orleans Selling and Report of Easier Basis in East Are Factors.

NEW YORK, March 25.—A low barometer, with rain over the Southwest, furnished a bullish factor in the cotton market at the opening today, when prices were 2 to 4 points net higher, but before the day was out it had been turned into a bearish factor and induced selling under which the market closed barely setady at a net decline of 4 to 7 points. Early support of the market was based on expectations that the rain area would extend over Sunday into the Eastern belt, where it is not needed, and, in fact, would cause further delay to farm preparations. The subsequent change in sentiment was brought about by the arrival of numerous advices claiming that the rain in Western Texas and Oklahoma had proved very beneficial and would improve the prospects of an early crop start. Outside of this influence the market was furnished with but very little news either way. Trade was small and mostly local, the public interest being restricted by prospects for a big coal strike and the New England textile strike.

The curtailment at Fall River for the week was 120,000 pieces and the sales of print cloths a similar total. There was moderate selling by New Orleans in the last half hour and reports of an easier basis in portions of the Eastern belt.

May contracts declined to 17.67c, July 17.15c and October 16.79c, the dullness of the market being illustrated by the fact that there was about only 10 to 13 points difference betweent he highest and lowest prices all day. May-July trading was done at 52 points difference this morning, against 50 points at the close yesterday, reflecting the demand from spot houses.

5 CONTEMPT FINE IN PICKETING CASE

Defendant's Plea That Court Order Had Not Been Served on Him Rejected.

A fine of $25 for contempt of court today was imposed upon Edward Anderson, a member of the local sheet metal workers' union, on a charge of attacking an employe of the National Enameling and Stamping Co. at Second and Destrehan streets on Feb. 28, while an injunction compelling picketing to be peaceful, was in force.

Testimony taken a week ago showed that although the injunction was issued on Nov. 26, formal notice of it was not given to Anderson until March 2. His attorney argued that without formal notice he could not be in contempt.

"In view of the facts," Federal Judge Faris said: "I do not want to be harsh, though I could impose a fine of $1000 and six months' imprisonment. I am going to give this man a gentle reminder, though I do not want the sum to be considered a precedent."

Anderson's attorney protested the fine vigorously, insisting that he had not been notified of the injunction. Judge Faris called attention to the fact that Anderson was a named defendant in the injunction suit and should have known of its issuance. However, if "you insist," the judge said, "I'll make the fine big enough so you can appeal."

"No, no," the lawyer replied. "I merely was doing my duty to my client. I defer to the court."

BRITAIN SELLING ALL HER GIANT AIRSHIPS

Colonies Fail to Support Imperial Air Fleet Plan and Parliament Refuses Funds.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, March 24.—As the British dominions are unwilling to give financial assistance to the imperial air service, the Government is selling its giant airships and much of the aerodrome paraphernalia.

An effort is being made to find purchasers in America for the huge aircraft with which, it was hoped, a system of fast communication with all parts of the empire could be established. This ambitious scheme had been projected for time, but Parliament refused to grant sufficient funds to carry it out. Consequently the Government at the Imperial conference last July tried to interest Australia, New Zealand, Canada, South Africa and India in the plan.

Only Australia seemed at all disposed to aid in the formation of an imperial air fleet, and even that dominion was somewhat apathetic. After some further consideration, the Government has decided to dispose of the entire equipment.

GIRLS' INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATE

Washington and Lindenwood College Students to Meet.

The first intercollegiate debate in which Washington University girl students have participated, will take place next Friday night, when two teams from that institution and from Lindenwood College, St. Charles, will strive for the verdict on the proposition "that the plans of the national committee for constructive immigration legislation should be adopted immediately as the basis for settling our immigration problems."

The question will be debated at both Washington and Lindenwood on the same evening. The Washington U. team that will go to St. Charles and argue for the affirmative will be composed of Misses Helen Cullen, Margaret Kuehn, Prudence Lyon and Marjorie Gutgsell, the latter as alternate, while those to meet the Lindenwood girls here, taking the negative, will be Misses Evelyn Barth, Margaret Steele, Josephine Brown and Virginia Gorin, the latter alternate.

SEPARATE WAGE AWARD SOUGHT

Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Line Makes Plea to Board.

CHICAGO, March 25.—Asking for individual consideration because of the road's financial condition, W. C. Hurst of Springfield, Ill., general manager of the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad, appeared before the Railroad Labor Board today seeking a separate award in the wage reduction hearing now before the board.

The Chicago Peoria & St. Louis is one of six roads asking such. It has a total mileage of 255 miles and has been in the hands of a receiver for some time. Inability to pay wages authorized for other roads is the basis of the road's plea.

not agreed upon all subjects. Among the supporters of social agencies today there are some who ardently advocate one and vehemently condemn another. A single organization usually represents a group dominant in that organization. The organization lays emphasis where the dominant group wishes it laid. It may do no more, merely letting other things suffer from comparative neglect. Or it may do much more and be actively hostile to proposals, methods, agencies which the dominant group perfectly, sincerely, with the best intentions, does not like. The result will be the same; the decay—perhaps only temporary—of the disapproved proposals, methods, agencies, a gradually growing spirit of resentment and hostility on the part of other elements in the community; and in time a sharp division with hostile forces aligned against each other.

"Our experience with federation and community chests, for five or six years, and part of those war years is not yet sufficient for us to reach conclusions and stop thinking. The federation idea is spreading. It probably will become generally accepted, for the conditions it seeks to remedy are too unsatisfactory. But the form federation shall take, its purposes beyond the raising of money, its methods; these are not yet settled. And if they are [illegible] wrong, if instead of increasing the virility and effectiveness of social work, the loss will fall not alone upon the agencies, which after all are only what their [illegible] states agencies, but upon business and society in general."

NEW PLAYS AND FILMS AND NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN PLAYERS

Leo Ditrichstein and William Gillette Both Play Here This Week

Former Returns in "The Great Lover," and Latter Presents New Crook Melodrama, "The Dream Maker."

THE names of two actors of celebrity will adorn the electric lights of the downtown playhouses this week. Leo Ditrichstein, the theater's most eloquent exponent of the philandering and artistic temperament, comes to the Shubert-Jefferson tonight in the best of all his roles, that of Jean Paurel, an opera singer and Don Juan, in "The Great Lover." William Gillette, who, after several years of retirement, returned to the stage last November at the age of 65, will appear at the American Theater tomorrow night in a new play called "The Dream Maker," adapted by the actor himself from a scenario written by Howard E. Morton, associate editor of Leslie's Weekly.

Ditrichstein has not played "The Great Lover" here since 1916; but this happens to be his second St. Louis visit this season. He apppeared at the Jefferson last fall in "Toto." Gillette's last visit here was signalized by his memorable performance in Sir James M. Barrie's "Dear Brutus." Other plays in which he was distinguished include "The Private Secretary," "Secret Service" and "Sherlock Holmes."

In "The Dream Maker," described as a tense and entertaining melodrama, he has the part of an aged physician whose keen cleverness rescues the daughter of his old sweetheart from a gang of blackmailers, and who makes her believe that the torturing ordeal through which she has passed is nothing but a feverish dream. When the play was put on at the Empire Theater in New York last November, the Post-Dispatch published a review from which the ensuing paragraphs are quoted.

"An Aged Sherlock Holmes."

"THE aged doctor comes riding into the play out of space as if on a broomstick, so uncanny is his quality. It is really a Sherlock Holmes grown old who whimsically and effectively thwarts the crooks who roam through the new piece.

"It is the same William Gillette, though grown older, who plays the part in the same ringing whispers. Time has changed the look of him, but he foils time by making this new character look as gray and bent as possible. However, time has diminished in no degree the actor's charm, skill and distinction of former days."

The first two acts of "The Great Lover" are set in off-stage points of a metropolitan—evidently the Metropolitan—opera house. They furnish an extended picture of the jealousies and follies of grand opera folk—the Wagnerian tenor, the German soprano and her pet poodle, the conductors of rival nationalities, the press agent, the stage manager, the minor singers and chorus people.

Compared to Mansfield.

IN the part of Paurel, a mature French baritone, Ditrichstein has been praised as meriting a comparison between his work and that of Richard Mansfield, in the lighter Mansfield roles. From his good-nature tolerance of pursuing womankind, to the scene of frenzy in which he loses the voice which had earned "$2.73 a note," he is said to portray temperament and emotion with a sure touch.

The play was written by Ditrich-

Girl Playwrights Score With Drama on Voltaire

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.

A ROMANTIC comedy in three acts entitled "Voltaire," by Leila Taylor and Gertrude Purcell, was produced Monday night at the Plymouth Theater. The two young women appeared to be mere girls when they scampered bashfully on the stage at the end of the second act to receive the kind of ovation designed to send young playwrights home to happy dreams.

Disregarding the eventful three score years through which the philosopher-historian-dramatist had passed, as the chief heretic of the time, the authors "cut in" on him at the age of 71, when he lived in exile at Ferney, three miles from the Swiss frontier, with his niece, Mme. Denys, and his grand-niece, Marie Cornelli.

It was here that Voltaire, acted with a great deal of makeup and a certain faithfulness by Arnold Daly, walked and played chess and said witty and profound things in a grand setting to which Robert Edmond Jones had applied fine taste. As a picture it was strikingly subdued, as for that matter was the play itself.

The principal object was to set forth Voltaire's utter hatred for the conventions of the day—the system of state and church in particular—and his desire to be of assistance to the oppressed. So he was shown sheltering the fugitive, Moisnel, who had escaped from the Bastile. Seizing upon the opportunity, he assisted the boy through to Potsdam, sending with him a rather important set of libelous verses to his dear friend, Frederick, the King of Prussia.

Actress Foils Police Agent.

THE arrival at Ferney of Voltaire's enemy, Freron, chief of the secret police of Paris, in search of the prisoner, added complexities to the situation; but, fortunately, the actress, Mlle. Clairon of the Comedie Francaise, who was a beautiful person and knew a thing or two about Freron, had arrived earlier in the day.

Carlotta Monterey had little more opportunity to display the gifts ascribed to her by history than did Voltaire himself. But here again we are unable to check up historical facts against the playwright. They have added in their program that this "makes no pretense to be an historical drama."

In the third act, just in time for the curtain, bells ring in the distance and Voltaire knows the fugitive has escaped. And good fortune heaps up. A messenger arrives from Paris bearing a message from Louis and Du Barry absolving Voltaire from blame in the publication of the offensive "Dictionaire," and setting matters generally at ease.

The play manages to squeeze in a maze of the little sayings and doings that garnished the great writer's hazardous existence. Daly escapes any positive charge of being a heavyweight Voltaire through his wise use of a lounging robe that falls from his shoulders.

Moulan in "Just Because."

FRANK MOULAN, engaged as star for the ensuing season of Municipal Opera in St. Louis, has the principal funny part in a new melody comedy, "Just Because," which opened Wednesday night at the Earl Carroll Theater. It is by Anna Wynne O'Ryan and Helen S. Woodruff, with music by Madelyn Sheppard. Here is a delicious work, one with character, and with every indication of lending itself to the select group of pets of its species now extant.

Moulan, spry and diverting as ever, plays the part of Widower Cummings, who has nine pining daughters. On the other side of the fence is Claude Wellington, young, handsome, disappointed in love, and at present conducting a school for orphans. Mignonette, the sweetest daughter, sets her heart on the handsome Wellington, disguises herself as one of his orphans, and wins him. He discovers the ruse towards the end, but then it's too late.

Whoever designed the solitary setting did a handsome landscape. There is intoxicating music—for instance, "Just Because" and "Daisy, Tell Me True," sung by Jane Richardson. Her "Dolly" song, too, is amusing and novel. Queenie Smith's dancing is one of the delights. Comedy develops now and then, sometimes rare, mostly content to be mild and wholesome. Others in the excellent cast are Nellie Graham-Dent, Charles Trowbridge, Harry Hotchkiss, Olin Howland and Jean Merode.

It is quite sad to contemplate the real reason, as explained by Trowbridge, for the title "Just Because." It was just because the girl who earlier in his life had broken his heart always answered, when he asked why she wouldn't marry him: "Just because!"

"The Hindu" Is Exciting.

THE trickiest of all of Broadway's trick chambers of melodramatic evil is now on display at the Comedy Theater, where "The Hindu," newest vehicle for Walker Whiteside, opened Tuesday night. The work is by Carl Mason and Gordon Kean, the latter being a pen-name for Whiteside himself.

The palace living room of Prince Tamar, a suave and wicked-eyed gentleman of Somnouth, India, is a marvel of frightfulness. This sinister-den rejoices in sliding walls, a trap-door leading to a bed of quicklime, doped cigarette holders, cabinets that spit red fire when the doors are opened, huge iron bars that seal doors and

New Grand Central—Betty Compson in "Ladies Must Live."

Liberty—All-star cast in "Beyond the Rainbow."

West End Lyric and Empress—Florence Lawrence in 'The Unfoldment."

Delmar and Criterion—Irene Castle in "French Heels."

"The Conquering Power," a Rex Ingram production with Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry in the leading roles is the week's leading feature at the Missouri Theater. Valentino and Miss Terra were the leading principals in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Their present offering is a photoplay version of Balzac's famous novel, "Eugenie Grandet." The scene is laid in a French town where the miserly old Grandet hoards his gold and lives in poverty with his daughter, Eugenie. A nephew, Charles, a young boulevardier from Paris, is thrown on the uncle's bounty, but he receives such scant welcome that he ships for Martinique, taking with him the memory of Eugenie's love.

In the Ingram production Balzac is brought up to date. The hero rides in a 1921 model automobile and uses a fountain pen, things that the great French novelist died too soon to see. On the bill also is the second installment of "The Mistress of the World."

"Ladies Must Live," the last production of the late George Loane Tucker is the week's headliner at the New Grand Central. The cast includes Betty Compson, Beatrice Joy and Mahlon Hamilton.

"Ladies Must Live" is a sort of "gold digger" story which takes its theme from certain types of women who are trained to marry wealth and try to accomplish this at any cost. There are four intertwining narratives leading to a climax in which an old scrubwoman gives society leaders her views on life.

The Liberty's principal offering for the week is "Beyond The Rainbow," a most ambitious effort directed by William Christy Cabanne and boasting a remarkable cast, including Harry Morey, Lillian Dove, Virginia Lee, Diana Allen, James Harrison, Macey Harlan, Rose Coghlan, William Tooker, Helen Ware, George Fawcett, Marguerite Courtot, Edmund Breese, Walter Miller, Clara Bow and Huntley Gordon.

The story turns about a wall street magnate and his pretty stenographer and the mysterious shooting of the magnate when the lights are suddenly turned out in a ballroom. The millionaire, an army officer, the stenographer, a fake Count and an ex-convict are enmeshed in a tangle of mystery.

Florence Lawrence, the original movie queen, is making her "comeback" this week at the West End Lyric and Empress theaters in "The Unfoldment," described as "a drama of the mircle of love." It is her first screen appearance in nine years. The picture is said to have been financed with St. Louis capital.

The principal attraction at the Delmar and Criterion is Irene Castle in 'French Heels."

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

MOVIE heroes and comedians take no risk of being cut by diving through windows or glass roofs in the movies, because the windows are not glass and the sashes are not wood. The "glass" is really either a celluloid composition, or clear molasses candy. The window sash is some composition like papier mache.

It is said on good authority that Charlie got $800,000 from his picture "The Kid."

A rocking stage is built on high rockers and is used to portray the interior of a ship at sea.

Mary MacLaren was born in Pittsburg about 22 years ago, weighs 124 pounds, is 5 feet 4 inches tall; has golden hair and blue eyes. Was a chorus girl. Has appeared in many screen successes, including "Shoes," "Idle," "The Model's Confession" and "Bonnie Lassie."

Colleen Moore was born in Port Huron, Mich., in 1900.

The "Mutt" and "Jeff" of the screen is what their friends are calling Lois Wilson and May McAvoy, who are inseparable pals. The reason is because Lois is tall and May is short. But that's as far as the resemblance goes, because both Miss Wilson and Miss McAvoy are beautiful.

More than 190,000 feet of film were shot for "Earthbound," but only about 6000 feet were used.

Dolores Cassinelli has been called "Cameo Girl" of the screen.

Ann Forrest's real name is Ann Kroman. She is a native of Denmark.

Rita Jolivet in private life is Countess de Cippeco. She lives in Milan, Italy.

Mary Pickford has decided to revive "Tess of the Storm Country," in which she starred seven years ago. She will give it a new production.

Although the basketball team from the battleship "Mississippi" defeated Larry Semon's team on one of the Vitagraph Hollywood stages, the comedy king feels that he has no apologies to offer. At the end of the first half the score was a tie, but in the second half the navy boys forged to the front because of the superb condition resultant from constant athletic training.

Consult your conscience! Your secret is common gossip.

A young girl sends that note, at a Fifth Avenue ball, to——a millionaire who loves the ladies.

—a barber passing as a count.
—a club man, a timid tippler.
—an ex-convict in a trusted post.
—a lovely typist posing as an heiress.

Bedlam broke loose. Lovers quarreled.

Impostors fled. Wives fought. The millionaire was shot. The unraveling of the crime and the romance of the lovers make an enthralling film masterpiece.

MISS SUSAN RYAN IS TO HEAD COMMUNITY SCHOOL

The Community School, St. Louis' pioneer organization devoted to "Progressive Education," is to be in charge of Miss Susan Ryan at the close of the present term. Miss Barnum, who is now principal, will leave in June to continue her work in the East.

Miss Ryan, for many years connected with the public school system in St. Louis, is a head assistant in the Wyman School of Observation, as well as a member of the staff of the extension department of the Harris Teachers' College. Prior to her work at the Wyman School, she was head assistant to Miss Woody at the Hamilton School, where methods of progressive education were first sponsored by the St. Louis School Board.

The Community School's teaching methods are based upon the recently developed science of child psychology.

ENCOUNTERS BULLET PROOF BEAR

LEWISBURGH, Pa. — Samuel Crone, a Shamokin butcher, encountered a bear that weighed about 400 pounds, dropped the animal with a bullet from his rifle, but was startled to see the bear rise and, howling with pain, race toward him on all fours.

Two more shots were fired and struck the tough hide of the animal, inflicting painful wounds, but each time the bear refused to stay down, and by the time it was ten feet in front of Crone the latter's weapon jammed. Desperate, the hunter decided to battle with the stock of his rifle as a club and stood his ground as the animal rose on its hind legs as if to rush him. Suddenly the bear changed its mind and ran limping into the wood

She Wept Her Way To Film Fame

IT was such a battle as Movieland had never seen before — a battle of tears. And Remember Steddon won. Under the lashing raillery and cutting invective of the famous director, her soul writhed and spilled out of her eyes. That moment a great actress came into being. Thus are sometimes made the stars that twinkle in the filmy firmament.

Yet Remember Steddon, a few short months before, had been just a country girl in a mid-west town — a girl who had never even seen a moving picture.

Beautiful, passionate, eager, she found herself at last in Hollywood where the films come from, and her soul opened like a flower in the sunshine of morning.

What befell her of good and bad constitutes the truest picture of life as it is actually lived in the world of motion pictures that has ever been disclosed to an eagerly interested public. Her story as published in THE RED BOOK MAGAZINE is unquestionably the greatest novel ever written by Rupert Hughes—himself a master of the films. It is being discussed everywhere. Are you reading it?

Read in the Same Issue:

The tremendous story of a woman's soul growth —	By Edith Wharton
The moving, dramatic story of a girl's victory over circumstances —	By George Gibbs

A powerful and significant tale of a great city fire chief —	By O. F. Lewis
An editorial with a lift to it for these swiftly moving times —	By Bruce Barton
A story of the far islands of the magical South Seas —	By Beatrice Grimshaw
A whimsical story of a young man's conquest of a town —	By Meredith Nicholson

Dogs Are Taken to School.

NILES, Mich.—Since the local newspaper printed an account of Jack, a wonderful dog, accompanying a little Western girl to school where he listened attentively to recitations and became educated, many boys and girls about town have been taking their dogs to school. But the conduct of the local dogs became so boisterous that Supt. Haisley summoned the police, who captured a score of canine pupils and carted them off to jail.

The Doctor's Helpful Ally Is the Accurate Prescription

The doctor will tell you that medicine in itself does not cure. But the right prescription, accurately compounded in the exact proportions the doctor finds necessary after studying your personal needs, will help nature straighten things out.

That's the "cure." Putting nature to work normally.

So our part is to furnish the ally to help the doctor win. And we watch each step carefully.

stein himself, in collaboration with Frederick and Fanny Hatton. In the company are Frances Underwood, Raphaello Ottiano, Clara Mackin, Josephine Hammer, Mary Duncan, Albert Brown, William Ricciardi, Lee Millar, Orlando Daly and numerous others.

Lionel Barrymore and Irene Fenwick, in Henri Bernstein's great play, "The Claw," are promised for next week at the Shubert-Jefferson. At the American, next Sunday night, will be presented George M. Cohan's celebrated comedy, "The Tavern," with Harry Mestayer. During April the American is to introduce Billie Burke in "Intimate Strangers," by Booth Tarkington, and Elsie Janis, with her "gang."

Juvenile Film Stars.

JANE AND KATHERINE LEE, movie stars at ages of 9 and 12, will head the Orpheum bill this week in a sketch called "The New Director," which is said to present many of the situations in which the juvenile actresses were filmed in screen comedies. They will be assisted by William Phinney. Miss Aileen Stanley returns with her popular song characterizations. Others on the program include Eddie Buzzell in "A Man of Affairs"; Moss and Frye, comedians; Felix Patty and Tarzan, an educated ape; Ed Pressler and Blanche Klaiss, in songs and dances; Dooley and Storey, and the Michon brothers, equilibrists.

The Rialto's announcement is as follows: Frank Dobson and a girl and music show, called "The Sirens"; Dave Kramer and Jack Boyle; Harry and Emma Sharrock in "Behind the Grand Stand"; Bowers, Walters and Crocker, "the three rubes"; Cecil Gray and Bert and Florence Mayo, aerialists.

"The Country Store," a comedy act, with Harry B. Watson, will remain at the Columbia all week. Other turns, until the change of bill on Thursday, will be those of Frish, Rector and Toolin, in songs and comedy; Roth and Slater, in "The Wrong Neighborhood," also a comedy; the Monroe brothers, and the Taketa troupe, Japanese performers. The film feature is "Steelheart," with William Duncan and Edith Johnson. During the latter part of the week will appear Lester, a ventriloquist; Ford and Packard, comedians; Joyner and Foster, and Sawyer and Eddie. The film will be "Pardon My Nerve," with Buck Jones.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

her home in New York City, following a few weeks of work and play in Florida and Cuba. All of the exterior scenes for her next picture, "Island Wives," were filmed in Florida.

Just about the time that William Duncan, Vitagraph's Western star, figured he would require a long location trip to secure water scenes, the flood-gates of heaven broke loose in Southern California, and Mr. Duncan had a number of raging torrents from which to choose his Western atmosphere in "Man Hunters," which he is now producing.

In "The Man From Downing Street," his forthcoming production, Earle Williams opens the picture as a secret service agent from the famous street in which England governs her colonial possessions. As the story unfolds, Williams appears in the picturesque garb of an East Indian rajah.

In reality the angel in a vision scene does not leave the ground. By a manipulation of a camera device, the lens is slowly elevated, independent of the film or rest of the camera, but keeping within the area of the picture. The photographing is done as the lens is raised. This procedure is one of the two exposures needed to take the scene.

Ethel Clayton plays the piano, Monte Blue is an expert on the guitar, Herbert Rawlinson is a ukulele fiend, while Betty Compson and Eva Novak play the violin.

The first educational subject to be put in films for the use of schools is geography. Publishers of school books are planning to film text books which will be paralleled with films of the same subjects for visual instruction. School children will learn their lessons from the screen in a much more interesting and absorbing way. After geography will come history and literature in the films which will make us all want to go to school again.

Mlle. Cavalieri appeared as a star in three films all of which were most unusual, "The Temptress," "The Two Brides," and "Mad Love."

Tom Meighan was playing the chief role in that popular drama, "The College Widow," when he met Miss Frances Ring, who was also a member of that company. She is now Mrs. Meighan.

George Walsh is married to Seena Owen and they have a daughter, Patricia.

The violin is used most in helping film actors achieve emotional acting. Tosti's "Good-by" and "Hearts and Flowers" are the melodies which are most effective. Miss Ruth Dickey is the violinist who makes Tom Meighan, Wallace Reid and Conrad Nagel weep. Max Fisher is another "atmospheric" violinist. Without scenery it is often difficult for the players to get in the spirit of a picture in a studio and it has been proved that music from a violin is of the greatest help.

SAN CARLO CYCLE BEGINS TOMORROW WITH 'TROVATORE'

Eight Performances of Seven Operas Will Be Given at Odeon and Moolah Temple.

ITALIAN VERSION OF "LOHENGRIN"

Anna Fitziu, Tamaki Miura, Josephine Lucchesi and Bianca Saroya in Cast of New Stars.

The only grand opera to be heard here this season will be purveyed by the San Carlo troupe, which begins tomorrow night at the Odeon an engagement of eight performances, with a repertory of seven different standard operas. The list is as follows:

Monday evening, Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

Tuesday evening, Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

Wednesday evening, Wagner's "Lohengrin," in Italian.

Thursday afternoon, Bizet's "Carmen."

Thursday evening, Verdi's "Rigoletto."

Friday evening, Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci."

Saturday matinee, "Madame Butterfly."

Saturday night, "Lohengrin" (at Moolah Temple).

The San Carlo company, of which Fortune Gallo is impresario, was familiar here through annual visits in former years, but has not sung in St. Louis for several seasons. It is distinguished for its profitable career throughout the country, operating without guarantee, on its own resources, at popular prices.

A roster of principals new to this city is announced. Josephine Lucchesi, a young coloratura singer, will be heard as Gilda in "Rigoletto." Anna Fitziu, formerly of the Chicago Opera Company, will sing the role of Elsa at both performances of "Lohengrin." Mme. Tamaki Miura, Japanese prima donna, is cast in the title role of "Madame Butterfly," which she has sung here previously with unrivaled realism with the Boston Opera Company.

A newcomer is Bianca Saroya, dramatic soprano, who will be heard in "Il Trovatore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana." Nina Frascani, mezzo-soprano, is expected to sing in "Carmen." Gaetano Tommasino has succeeded Manuel Salazar as the company's dramatic tenor, and principal baritone roles will be intrusted to Gaetano Viviano, former macaroni maker of this city. Sofia Charlebois will take the parts of Nedda and Micaela.

Other members of the troupe, including several singers well known here, are Romeo Boscacci, Giuseppe Agostini, Joseph Royer, Mario Valle, Pietro di Biasi, Natale Cervi, Nicolo d'Amico, Joseph Tudisco, Antonio Canova, Anita Klinova, Frances Morosini and Alice Homer. Ernesto Knoch will conduct all the performances, and it is announced that both orchestra and chorus will be augmented for the St. Louis engagement.

Pilgrim Congregational Concert.

Mlle. Mollie Hourigan, New York pianist, will play several numbers at a concert to be given Tuesday night at Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union and Kensington avenues. Others who will take part, under the direction of Dr. J. J. Kessler, are Miss Olga Hambuechen, Mrs. Helen Traubel Carpenter, Vernor Henshie, Edward Holscher and Oliver Smith.

GAIETY AGAIN REIGNS IN STRICKEN MOSCOW

Curtailment of Dreaded Cheka Power Lifts Clouds From Spirits of Russians.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 1.—Curtailment of the powers of the dreaded Cheka has loosened Russia's tongue and is restoring a measure of its old life. No longer greatly fearing the ire of the inquisition, most of Moscow's residents, though still somewhat chary of talking politics in public places, have little hesitation now in expressing what they think of things in general.

They smile more often, give more "parties," are beginning again to extend old time Russian hospitality to strangers without fear that the presence of an unknown guest in their quarters will bring an armed Cheka agent there to investigate.

Pallid young men, of the old class of aristocrats, who survived the world war, perhaps two or three campaigns of the civil war, and who spent time in prisons are returning to their old habits of enjoyment. Some of them look like ghosts returned to a land that is a graveyard of their former wealth, but if they are ghosts, they are merry ones, and dance gaily on their own tombstones.

Conditions have changed and they must spend a part of their hours in working. They have few or no servants and must do their own washing and cooking. The Princess who once ordered from Paris half a dozen gowns at a time, herself mends that one of 1914 vintage which she managed to save. But she wears it gaily, and, since the Cheka menace seems one only to remember and even joke about, she dances in it all night.

The "ghosts" are happy to escape the grave. The nightmare years seem behind them. They are reveling in freedom. They had four years of army rations, two years of prison soup, a year or so of nothing much at all, and now they have champagne and caviar, even if it takes the last of the rubles they earn as clerks, mechanics, chauffeurs, or any other job open for a Prince, Baron or Count.

A bottle of vodka may represent the price they got for the last trinket their aristocratic old grandmother managed to save. But the Cheka is not at the door tonight. Tomorrow may go hang.

Piano Recital at Wednesday Club.

Cornelius Maffie, a pupil of Ottmar Moll, will give a recital Thursday night at the Wednesday Club auditorium, presenting Beethoven's Sonata No. 23, Op. 57; the Schubert-Liszt "Des Soirees de Vienne;" Chopin's Polonaise-Fantasy, Op. 61, and the fifth and twelfth etudes; MacDowell's "To a Water Lily" and "March Wind;" Arensky's Etude in F sharp Major and the Paganini-Liszt "La Campanella."

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

windows at the turn of a switch, and a pet snake, Lucifer by name. Into this exhilarating spot falls a deluded, kidnaped English girl. It is here that "The Hindu" is acted, with Whiteside as the villainous Tamar.

In India revolution is at white heat, being embroiled by a mysterious white "master mind." Clarice Cartwright had been deceived by an English official, and taken to Tamar's palace for no good purpose. Soon afterward a sacred moonstone is stolen from a neighboring temple. The search for the missing gem is quite important, but no more so than the fact that the Prince is losing his heart to the English girl. In the last act, to the blaring of an Indian string quartet, the kidnaper-Englishman is revealed as the "master mind" of the revolution, and Prince Tamar as a masked operative of Scotland Yard. Revolvers flash and voices are low and menacing. The last five minutes are surprising to some.

Whiteside acts the Prince gracefully, with not a little suggestion of the villain Prince of George Arliss. Miss Sydney Shields is Miss Cartwright. There is no more carefully mounted foreign setting hereabouts, and the costuming and makeup of the various characters are well done.

Gossip of Plays and Personalities Along the Rialto.

COMMENT is being made on the number of old-time stars who have "come back" and are now appearing on Broadway. William H. Thompson, recognized by many as the dean of the American stage, has the part of Gen. Malakoff in "The Czarina," with Doris Keane. Maude Granger, a member of the famous San Francisco stock company managed by Lawrence Barrett and John McCullough in the 'seventies, is playing in "The First Year." Effie Ellsler has the part of Miss Van Gorder in "The Bat," at the Morosco. Other veterans seen in current plays are Eugenie Blair, George Fawcett and Harry Corson Clarke.

Rehearsals are on for a play with only three characters, "My Lady's Lips," by Edward Locke. The cast consists of Martha Hedman, William H. Powell and Gilda Leary. * * * A German production of "Sally" opened in Berlin Thursday night with Sophia Henkel as star. The play is running in New York, London, Paris and Melbourne, besides four companies touring in the British Isles.

George M. Cohan has leased the Hudson for next season, at a rental said to be $50,000, besides a guarantee of $50,000 in profits. * * Gregory Kelly and Ruth Gordon are to be starred in a touring company of "The First Year." * * Louis Bouwmeester, a distinguished Dutch actor, is coming to New York in the autumn to play Shakspeare. In London he played in Dutch, while his company acted in English.

Shows That Close.

LAST week's departures were "Madame Pierre," "Bavu," "The White Peacock" and "Up in the Clouds." "Anna Christie" closed tonight. * * Harry Mestayer and James Rennie are to head touring companies of "The Tavern" and "The Meanest Man in the World," respectively. * * With 150 performances, "Good Morning, Dearie," at the Globe, has been seen by 212,269 persons. Of these, 16,669 were standees.

Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr are to be reunited in a new Potash and Perlmutter play. It deals with the automobile business and is called "The Schenckem Six." * * Georgie O'Ramey, the comedienne, has signed a contract to appear for five years under the management of Arthur Hammerstein.

CACHES HIS MOONSHINE IN BED

WARREN, Pa.—When a man refuses to admit a chambermaid to his room and insists he'll make up his own bed and tidy up the room himself, it's bound to cause talk.

That was how R. V. Hearst, guest at a local hotel, got in bad. The chambermaid, irate at this implied reflection on her ability, notified the City Marshal. The City Marshal went to the hotel during Hearst's absence and searched his room. The reason for Hearst's seclusion was made plain when 10 bottles of "moonshine" were found hidden in the springs of the bed.

Then a search was instituted for the missing Hearst. He finally was found in a small closet under the hotel stairway. He was covered with a sheet and trying his best to look like soiled linen.

'Loyalties' a Keen New Drama by Galsworthy

LONDON, March 25.

JOHN GALSWORTHY'S new play, "Loyalties," at St. Martin's Theater, is a straightforward drama of incidents rather than "ideas." There are enough "loyalties" in the story to make the title no misnomer. But evidently the work was not written for their sake; they rise naturally out of the play.

"Loyalty No. 1" is esprit de corps, the loyalty of his comrades to a soldier and gentleman. Capt. Ronald Dancy, D. S. O., and Ferdinand de Levis, a Jew, are fellow guests in a country house. De Levis is robbed, and accuses the Captain. Loyalty No. 1 brings the men of his caste, his host and Gen. Canynge, to his side; they cannot even suspect a gentleman and soldier of theft. They warn De Levis that, as there is no evidence, he must not make his accusation public, or they will see that he is socially ostracised.

Here, however, they encounter Loyalty No. 2, which is the Jew's loyalty to his race, his pride in it, his defiant scorn of the Anti-Semitism which in "society" oppresses him. He does repeat his charge in public, but this time in a London club. The Captain would treat it with contempt. But both parties are now subjected to another potent influence, Loyalty No. 3, or loyalty to the club. This decrees that the men must fight out the question in the courts, for either one is a thief or the other a libeler, and the club must know which of them deserves to be expelled.

The Captain Is Guilty.

SO the affair is taken to court, but while the trial is proceeding evidence of the Captain's certain guilt is placed in the hands of his solicitor. Captain and lawyer are old friends; Mrs. Dancy is a sweet little thing; altogether the situation is very painful for the lawyer.

But he must not betray the honor of his profession (Loyalty No. 4); he must withdraw from the case himself, and, in the perfect confidence which should exist between solicitor and counsel (Loyalty No. 5) he must also tell everything to the counsel, so that he, too, may withdraw. The Captain's old schoolfellow and comrade in the trenches cannot understand this professional loyalty; he thinks that the proper thing (shall we say Loyalty No. 6?) is to stick to your friend, right or wrong. Anyhow, the Captain is a ruined man, and, when the police knock at the door, puts a bullet through his heart.

What strikes one about the play as a whole is its absolute truth to life. Even the Captain's theft, in the circumstances and given his character, seems quite natural. The old lawyer, the General, the country house host, the club committee, are the very thing. Altogether, it is a wonderfully exciting, dramatic story, and it is acted with easy competence by a cast including Ernest Milton, Eric Maturin, Dawson Milward, J. H. Roberts, Miss Meggie Albanesi and Miss Cathleen Nesbitt.

THE first production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" ever given in England occurred the other night at the Old Vic. The event had all the qualities of a great occasion. Before the curtain rose upon this "unproducible" play by this "unpopular" dramatist, every seat and every inch of legitimate standing room was full. And so long as men and women will stand for more than four hours to hear a great work performed—will stand, moreover, spellbound, with none of that whispering and shuffling that so often is the disgrace of more luxurious audiences—so long as it is possible for poetic drama to sweep its hearers from breathless silence into a great tumult of cheering, there need be no despair for the theater.

Grieg's music, which had been adapted and was directed by Charles Corri, is now of concern only in its relation to the action on the stage. And the more familiar one is with both the play's text and with the music in its independent renderings, the more remarkable must appear the mutual strengthening of dramatist and composer when their work is given together. There was, perhaps, no period in last night's performance when this unity was more conspicuous than in the death of Ase, and its effect was increased by the fact that Mr. Russell Thorndike and Miss Florence Buckton, with the stage to themselves, reached in this scene the height of their attainment.

Peer Gynt has returned to his mother's bedside. As she in his childhood had told him amazing tales, so he now, unaware of death's approach, drives her in their magic sledge, his seat the bedrail, his steed a chair. As Ibsen wrote it, the scene is a vast imaginative movement, an astonishing compound of the tender, the ironic and the fantastic. The depth of its possible failure gave to its success last night the beauty of spiritual peril and escape, and we passed from it to other things with a sense that, if all else should suddenly weaken and fail, we had witnessed a great scene that would live in the memory.

AND the other things, whether they preceded or followed this climax, were for the most part in accord with it. The appearance of the boar brought laughter that jarred, and the dance of Anitra (Miss Althea Glasby) and the scene which immediately followed it somehow dropped from the imaginative level that was maintained, even in other scenes as deliberately brutal, throughout the rest of the play.

The acting was consistently good, and it was very seldom that one felt that the laughter, which again and again was won by the play's irony, had been forced by exaggeration. But the fact most remarkable is that the greater the author's poetic and imaginative demand, the greater was the response both of the actors and the audience. It is a fact happily recorded.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SINGER'S GARB COPIES ATTIRE OF JENNY LIND

FRIEDA HEMPEL.

FRIEDA HEMPEL GIVES 'JENNY LIND RECITAL'

Will Dress Like Swedish Nightingale and Sing Her Songs Saturday at Odeon.

One of the most sensational musical events in the history of this country was the concert at which that redoubtable showman, P. T. Barnum, introduced Jenny Lind to the American public. This occurred at Castle Garden, New York, on the evening of Sept. 11, 1850.

Some shadow of that eventful evening will be provided in the "Jenny Lind" recital which Mme. Frieda Hempel will present Saturday night at the Odeon. The modern coloratura soprano and former Metropolitan star will be garbed exactly as the Swedish nightingale was on the night of her premiere, and will sing several of the numbers given on that occasion.

One of these will be the scena and cavatina, "Casta diva," from Bellini's "Norma." Another will be a Norwegian herdsman's air, generally called "The Echo Song." A third will be a prize national anthem, "Greeting to America," which Bayard Taylor, the translator of "Faust," wrote especially for Mlle. Lind's American debut, and for which Sir Julius Benedict composed the music.

Jenny Lind's Program.

Jenny Lind, on this occasion, also appeared in a duet from Rossini's "Il Turco in Italia," with Giovanni Belletti, a famous baritone of the day; and likewise in a trio for soprano and two flutes, from Meyerbeer's opera, "The Camp of Silesia." Mme. Hempel will attempt neither of these numbers, nor will there be any effort to duplicate Barnum's "grand orchestra of 60 members, conducted under the direction of M. Benedict."

But Mme. Hempel is to offer several selections not on the Jenny Lind program. One of these is the bravura aria, "Carnival of Venice," from Benedict's opera, "The Brides of Venice," with flute obligato by Louis P. Fritze. There will also be Schubert's "Ave Maria" and "The Trout;" Schumann's "The Nut Three," Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," a "Bird Song," which Taubert composed for Jenny Lind; and "Home, Sweet Home," which the Swedish singer often gave at her recitals.

Coenraad V. Bos will serve as accompanist, and will also play Chopin's "Romance" and Waltz in G-flat. Fritze will have two solo numbers—Boehm's "Andante Pastoral" and a Minuet of Beethoven.

To Talk on Financial Situation.

Dr. W. F. Gebhart, vice president of the First National Bank, will speak on "The Present Financial Situation," Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. at Harburger Hall, under the auspices of the Miriam Study Circle. It will be open to the public.

HEARING ON FUND FOR CITY NURSES ASKED FOR Tuberculosis Society Would Place Arguments Before Municipal Board of Estimates.

The Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis has asked the Municipal Board of Estimates and Apportionment to give its representatives a hearing this week on the subject of a large appropriation for the Municipal Nurses Corps, in the effort to increase the city's public health work along this line.

The Tuberculosis Society will act as official spokesman for all the welfare agencies of the city, and many organizations, indirectly interested in public health. The society has been organizing this campaign for some time, and feeling that it would be a hardship upon the Board of Estimates and Apportionment for that body to hear a big delegation, with individual representatives from all the interested organizations, suggested that its Institutional Efficiency Committee be empowered to speak for all the organizations. All fell in with this idea, and will act accordingly. Prior to a hearing the General Committee will meet and instruct the small Special Committee as to the reasons each agency has for desiring increased scope in the municipal nurses' work in St. Louis. Mrs. M. A. Goldstein is chairman of the committee.

Statistics on Work.

Statistics showing the way in which the municipal nurses and the various agencies co-operate in home care of the sick and in health education work in the families under the care of these agencies will be presented. Figures as to the number of cases in each organization handled by the municipal nurses also will be given for the consideration of the Board of Estimates and Apportionment. Specific instances in which the absence of a municipal nurse would have been a public calamity will be cited.

In working up its case, Mrs. Goldstein's committee has obtained some interesting data. From the records of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Provident Association, the Board of Children's Guardians, the Tuberculosis Society, and many other organizations belonging to the Community Council, it is found that at least 50 per cent of the cases handled require the co-operation of the municipal nurses, both in the care of the sick in the home and in clinical work and home education in health matters.

Aid of Nurses Valuable.

Father Butler of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and Charles M. Hubbard of the Provident Association have stated that a large part of the success of their work among families depends upon the municipal nurses, and Miss Emma C. Puschner of the Board of Children's Guardians asserts that constructive work among the children under the board's care depends very largely on the co-operation of the municipal nurses.

The Tuberculosis Society's statement is that the 70 per cent of active cases of tuberculosis in St. Louis which are without institutional care—and in most cases are of a character where institutional care is impossible—would be without proper care entirely if it were not for the municipal nurses.

LENTEN NOONDAY SERVICES

Bishop Longley to Be Speaker at Christ Church This Week.

The Rt. Rev. Harry S. Longley, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Iowa, will be the speaker this week at the noonday Lenten services of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets. The Rev. H. C. St. Clair of Ferguson will be the chaplain, and there will be music every noon by organists and choirs of the various Episcopal churches of the city.

Bishop Longley was one of the noonday speakers last year and attracted much attention by his fearless remarks on timely subjects. When he was graduated from the General Theological Seminary and ordained priest, he was made curate at St. Paul's Church, Troy, N. Y., where he had grown up in the parish school and served as choir boy.

OUCH! LAME BACK. RUB LUMBAGO OR BACKACHE AWAY

Kidneys cause backache? No! Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica, or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil. Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago pain.

Rub old, honest St. Jacobs Oil whenever you have sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains, as it is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

$7500 BUDGET SOUGHT FOR VETERANS' CLUB

Money to Be Used in Conducting Institution at 3737 West Pine Boulevard.

A campaign to raise $7500 for the year's budget to support the work of the clubhouse for Disabled American Veterans of the World War, 3737 West Pine boulevard, has been opened and the committee in charge consists of Mrs. N. A. McMillan, Mrs. John H. Holliday Jr., Mrs. John Vimont, Mrs. George T. Allen, Miss Sarah Tower, Miss Nell Willis, Stewart McDonald, L. Ray Carter and Thomas L. Martin.

About $22,000 to purchase and equip the clubhouse was raised last June when a tag day was held with hundreds of women in club, civic and former war relief agencies cooperating.

Some Rooms Furnished.

Some of the rooms in the clubhouse have been furnished by organizations, including the Red Triangle Club, Jefferson Chapter of the D. A. R., Confederate Dames of the U. D. C., Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, Colonial Dames, Daughters of 1812, St. Louis Chapter, D. A. R., Cornelia Greene Chapter, D. A. R., while the hospital room was equipped by the American Red Cross.

The club's rooms and facilities are free and open to all disabled veterans, whether members of the organization or not, and many calls are received every day for help. Nearly every day disabled men arrive in the city looking for work and often they are entirely without funds. Free board and lodging are furnished them and last month 1109 free meals were served at the club.

One of the most important services rendered by the club is helping men secure enrollment in hospitals or vocational training schools, or in making out their papers for Government claims. Every case that applies to the club is carefully investigated to determine that appeals for aid are from deserving men.

Entertainments Given.

Entertainments are given at the clubhouse for disabled veterans in the hospitials, and it is the only organization in the city which has a membership exclusively of wounded and disabled war veterans. The club is nonsectarian and has no political affiliation.

The Disabled Veterans' Club is indorsed by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Salvation Army, the Jewish Welfare Board and the American Red Cross. Contributions of any amount will be welcomed and checks should be sent to Mrs. John H. Holliday, 3737 West Pine boulevard.

Woman Proves Successful Trapper.

GRAND PASS, Ore.—Though she is but five feet in height, Mrs. Freida Miller of Wolf Creek is a successful trapper. She spent the winter with her mother and passed the time by tending to a line of 23 traps. Mrs. Miller recently came to Grants Pass to collect bounties on bobcats, as it was her intention to continue her hunting long enough to trap a sufficient number of bobcats to make a fur coat.

Soprano to Sing at Organ Recital.

Mrs. Helen Traubel Carpenter, soprano, who was soloist at a "Pop" concert of the Symphony Orchestra this season, will sing tonight at a free organ recital to be given by Paul Friess at St. John's Episcopal Church, 3666 Arsenal street.

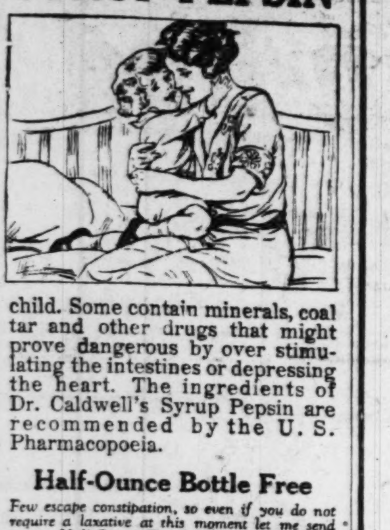
GIVE A BABY SYRUP PEPSIN



Constipation, biliousness and the annoying ills will quickly disappear

A MOTHER is always anxious to give the safest and best medicine to a constipated baby, but is puzzled which to select. Let her decide by the ingredients on the package.

Every bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the formula printed plainly on the outside of the carton under the portrait of Dr. Caldwell, who wrote the prescription in 1892. You will find that it is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It will not gripe the baby, and it is free from narcotics. A bottle sufficient to last a family several months can be had at any drug store, and the cost is only about a cent a dose.

While no one, young or old, need take a drastic purgative like salts or calomel, be especially careful what you give a child. Some contain minerals, coal tar and other drugs that might prove dangerous by over stimulating the intestines or depressing the heart. The ingredients of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are recommended by the U. S. Pharmacopoeia.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-Ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

TUBERCULOSIS ON ALARMING INCREASE IN ALBANIA

Death Rate Mounting Daily, With Drugs, Hospitals and Doctors Exceedingly Scarce.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TIRANA, Albania, March 4.—Tuberculosis, malaria and influenza are increasing alarmingly in Albania. The death rate is mounting daily. Whole town and villages are affected. There is little medicine to be had. There are only a dozen doctors to minister to several hundred thousand persons. The Italians and the members of the American Red Cross are assisting the local authorities in fighting the epidemic.

There are neither hospitals nor nurses in Albania. Those who practice medicine are principally pharmacists and druggists with little or no medical training. When the Mohammedan members of the community fall ill, little effort is made at treatment. "It is the will of Allah," says the fatalistic Moslem, and he calmly awaits the end.

Normally the Albanians are a healthy, hardy race, but the country, especially the coast towns and the valleys, is rank with malaria and infectious diseases. The damp, cold winter, poorly constructed houses and bad food have given tuberculosis a firm foothold throughout the country. Diseases incident to malnutrition, filth, neglect and bad water are everywhere prevalent.

Much of all this is the result of 10 years of continuous war. The Albanians were poor in 1913. They have grown poorer with each passing year. Long privation, lack of nourishment, medicine and care have brought them to a point of great misery and impoverishment.

PRINCESS ATTACKED WEDDING CAKE WITH LASCELLES' SWORD

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 9.—Princess Mary borrowed Viscount Lascelles' sword to cut the huge wedding cake which was served at her wedding breakfast. When the party had assembled in the dining room at Buckingham Palace, King George invited the Princess to lead the attack on the formidable 500-pound confection.

Viscount Lascelles acted as her escort and as they approached the huge cake, he handed her his sword. Prince Henry, who was close behind his sister, offered to get a hatchet, but Princess Mary laughingly declined.

The Duke of York evoked a laugh by suggesting that a machine gun might settle the thing more expeditiously than either sword or hatchet.

The Daily News correspondent, who thus describes the fun at the wedding breakfast, failed to state what success the Princess had with the sword. He says that when the Queen Mother, Alexandra, arrived at Buckingham Palace after the wedding ceremony, Princess Mary made an impetuous dash at her and the two embraced affectionately.

The Duke of York remarked that Queen Alexandra was the first to kiss the bride, but Queen Mary smilingly refuted it, saying that she had kissed the Princess when the register was being signed in the chapel of Edward the Confessor.

RACHMANINOFF TO GIVE RUSSIAN RELIEF CONCERT

Pianist Engages Carnegie Hall and New York Symphony Orchestra for April 2.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Russian composer and pianist, Serget Rachmaninoff, has hired Carnegie Hall and engaged the New York Symphony Orchestra with Walter Damrosch to conduct it April 2 at a Russian benefit concert under the auspices of the American Relief Administration, of which Herbert Hoover is chief. Rachmaninoff will be piano soloist; he will pay all the expenses himself, and the receipts of the concert, without any deduction whatsoever, will be used to relieve distress among the professors, artists, composers and men of letters in Russia.

Rachmaninoff explained yesterday at his home, 33 Riverside Drive, that he is constantly receiving pleas for help from his friends and that he has sent them aid until now the volume of need has grown too great for him.

He explained why his friends do not leave Russia. "They cannot," he said. "When I left in 1918 I was the last to whom the soviet government allowed a passport. Now emigration is forbidden. It is true that there are special organizations which arrange escapes from Russia, but the cost is prohibitive and too often they are not successful. The only one who has come out in that way, that I know of, is Alexander Siloti, the pianist."

"They write to me, and even that costs 10,000 rubles for postage." He showed an envelope covered with 10 stamps of 1000 rubles each. "Once that would have meant $5000," he said. "That is a letter from the Conservatory of Music at Moscow, asking if we could possibly send a small quantity of music paper.

"In the letters recently, in all of them, I have found expression of belief that the soviet regime cannot last much longer. The Red army has not been well fed and the soviet hold on authority is weakening."

Rachmaninoff has had his home in New York during the last four years, and his wife and two children remain here while he is on recital tour. America is his second home, he said. Yes, he admitted it is a great shock to be uprooted from one country and transplanted in another. Would it influence his music? Would American impressions enter into it? He smiled—or rather his face became less grave and less masklike. "But it's always the same," he said. "One says—what one has to say."

THE Royal automatic
Storage Gas Water Heater

The Royal Automatic and Marvel Non-Automatic are the only gas water heaters in the world which spread water into a thin, flowing sheet so that it can be heated with a small amount of gas. They do this by means of the B-M Water Spreader—the most ingenious element ever devised for heating water. This patented device is found exclusively in the Royal and Marvel and is not to be confused with open discs used in other heaters. Besides giving superior hot water service, Bastian-Morley heaters cost less to buy, to install and to operate. See one in actual operation at:

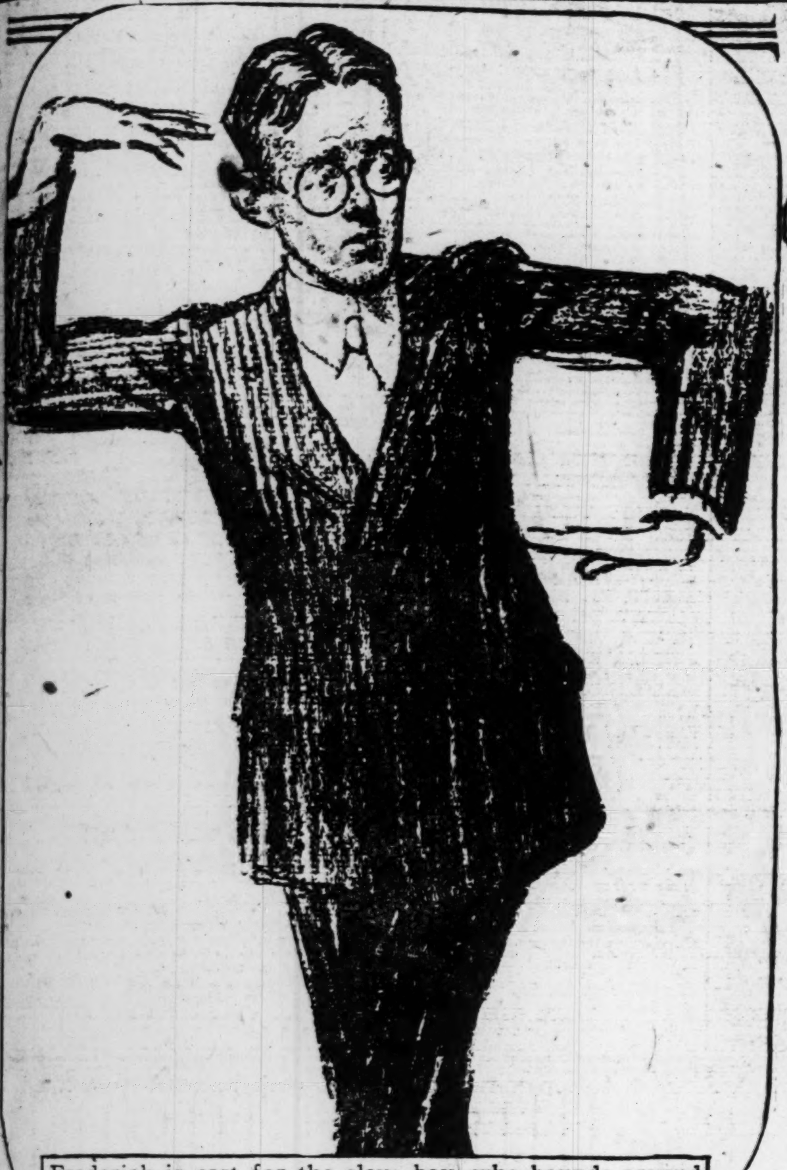
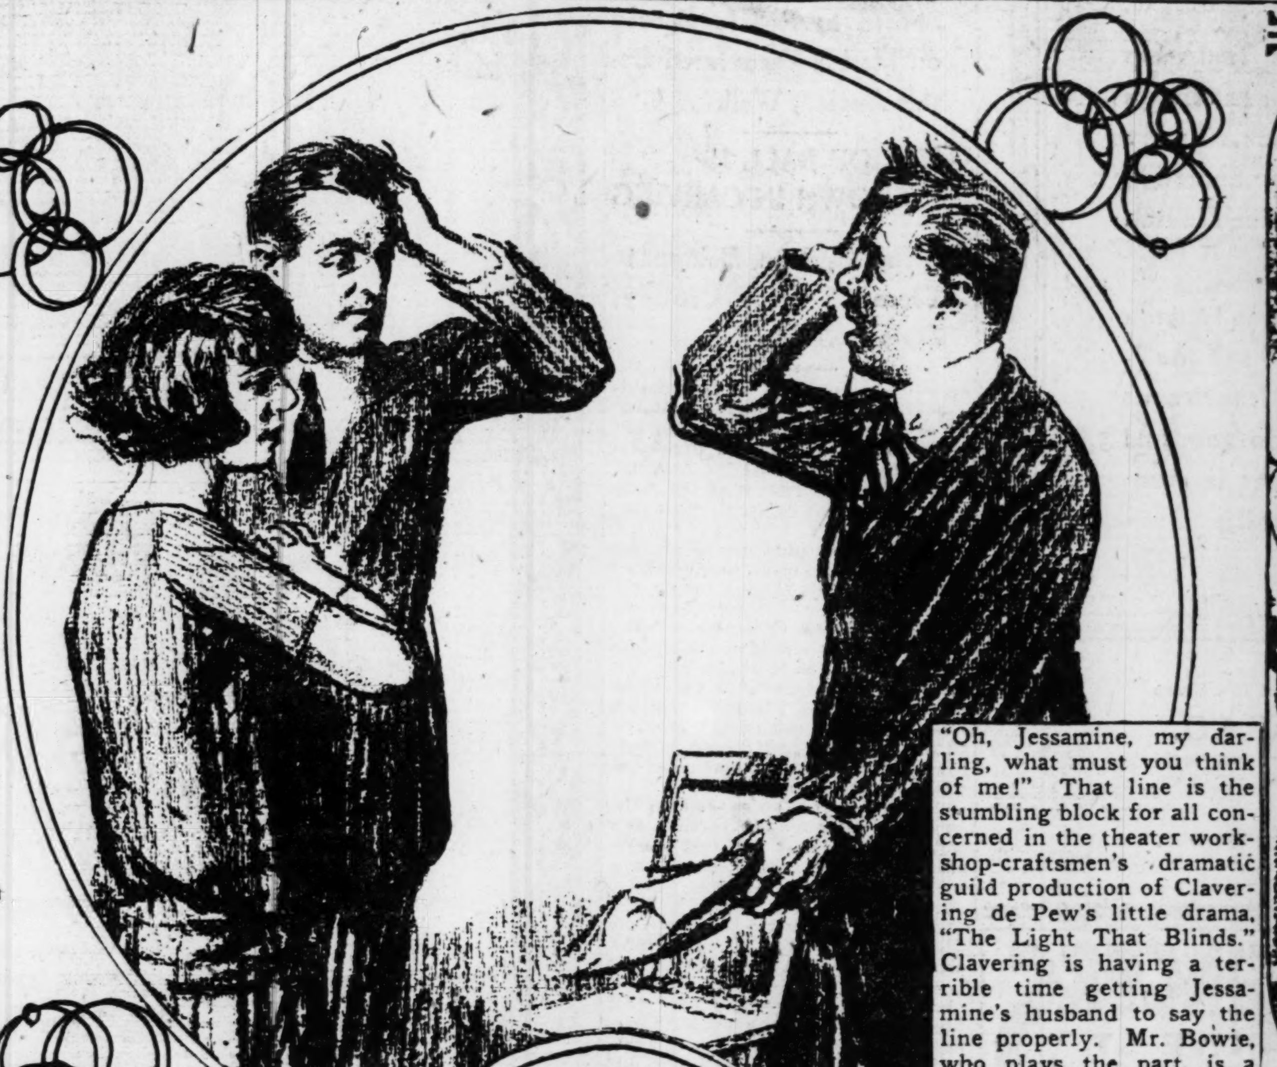
OUR LITTLE GROUP OF AMATEURS

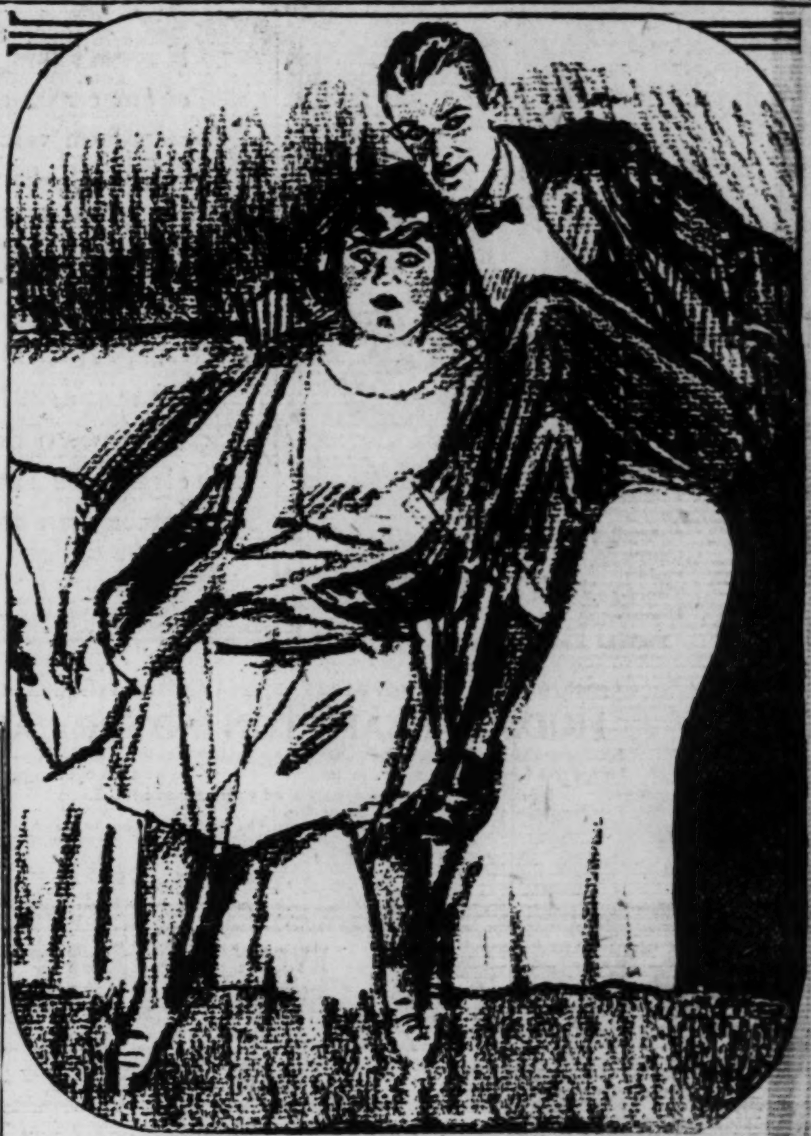
BY W. E. HILL



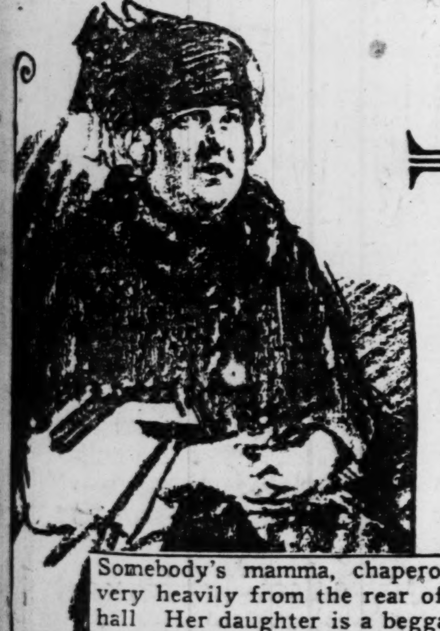
Frederick is cast for the slave boy, who bounds around without much on, bearing a lute, or a bowl of nectar, or a telegram from the Syrian Princess, as the case may be, in an Oriental playlet that is supposed to be a lot better than anything Dunsany ever wrote. Frederick looks funny now, but wait 'till the dress rehearsal and then you'll see. He's hardly going to wear anything at all, and maybe he'll be all gilded!



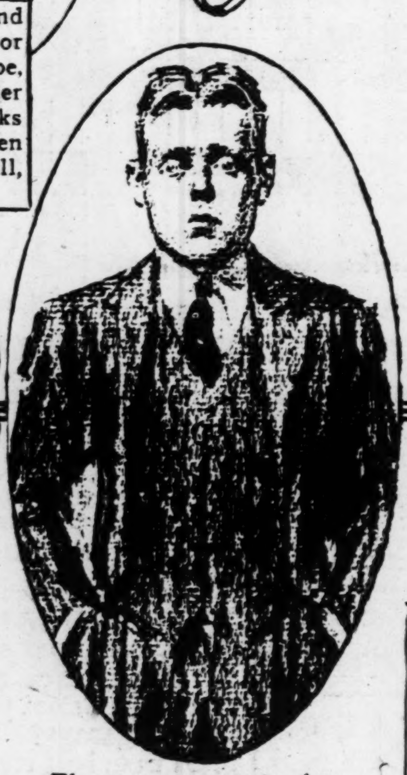
"Oh, Jessamine, my darling, what must you think of me!" That line is the stumbling block for all concerned in the theater workshop-craftsmen's dramatic guild production of Clavering de Pew's little drama, "The Light That Blinds." Clavering is having a terrible time getting Jessamine's husband to say the line properly. Mr. Bowie, who plays the part, is a very efficient bond salesman in the daytime and ought to be intelligent enough not to inhale after every second word!



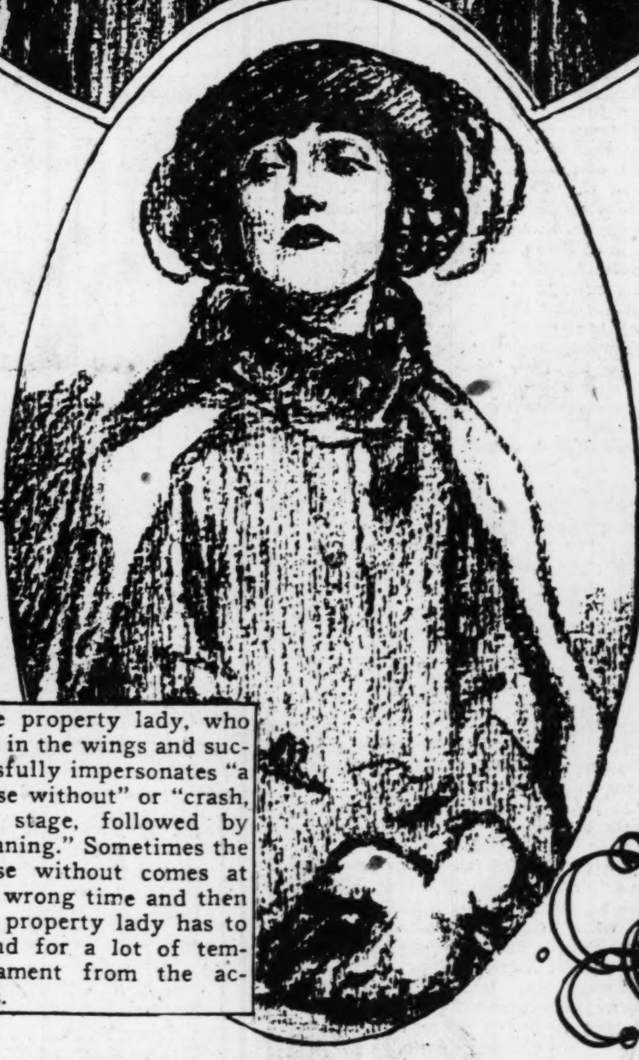
Everybody in the audience will say, no doubt, "They don't look as though they were acting at all." Naturalness—that's what Edna and Harold are striving for. Just see how different this love scene is from the average stage affair!



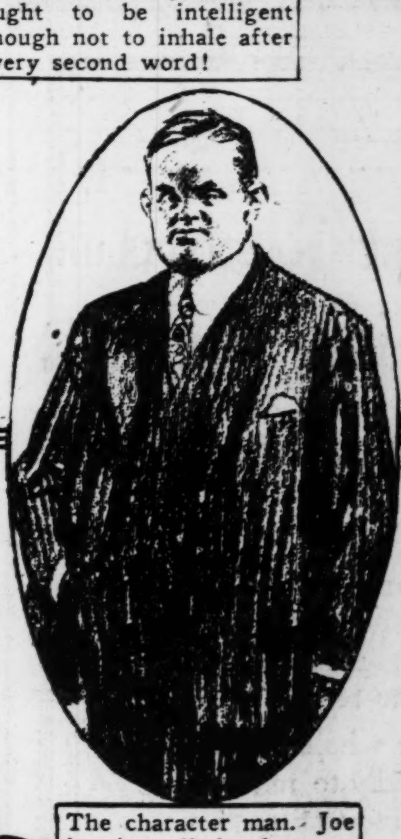
Somebody's mamma, chaperoning very heavily from the rear of the hall Her daughter is a beggar in the Dunsany play, and mamma can't see why they should have cast Marjorie for such a common part! For Marjorie simply can't even simulate commonness



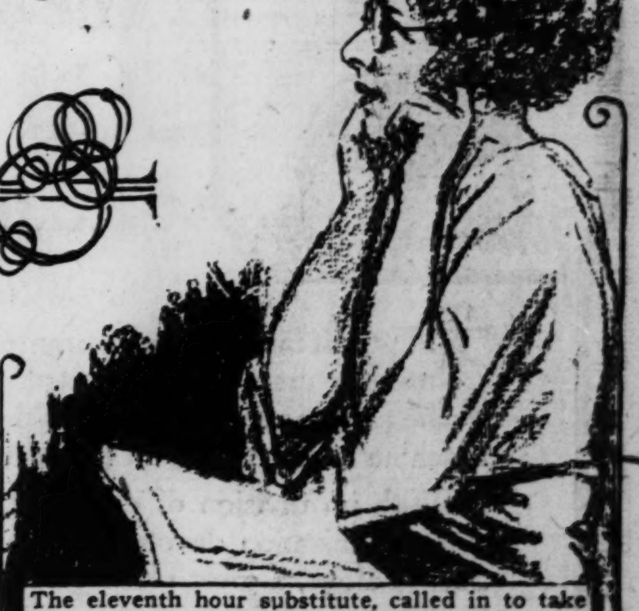
The prompter, having entirely lost track of the lines, goes out for a smoke.



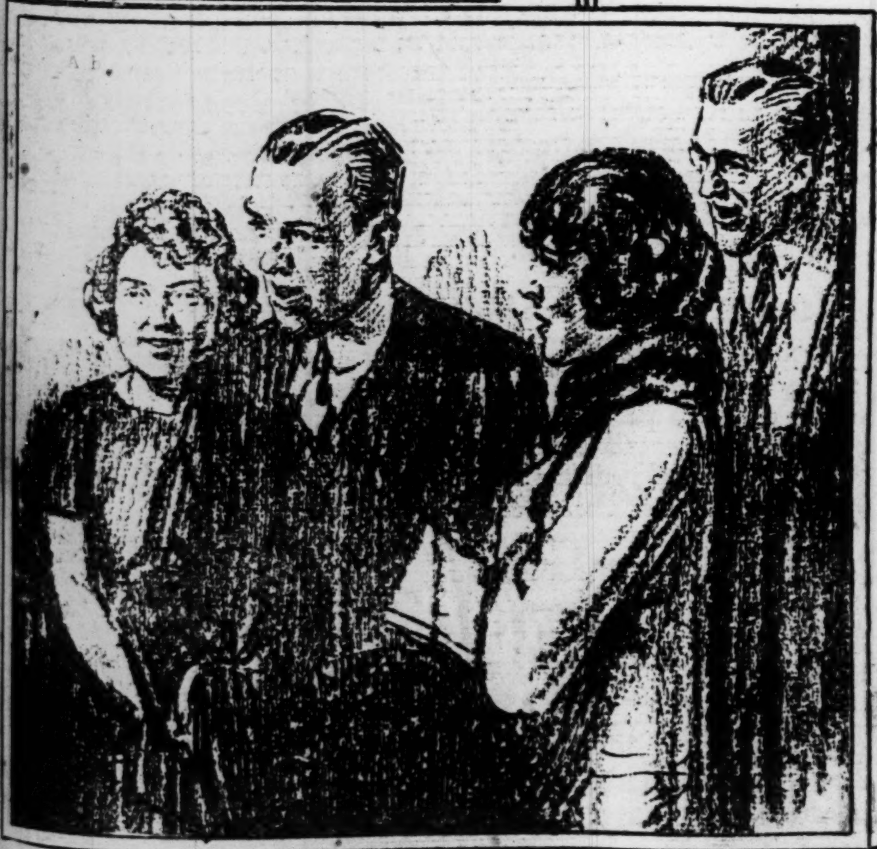
The property lady, who sits in the wings and successfully impersonates "a noise without" or "crash, off stage, followed by moaning." Sometimes the noise without comes at the wrong time and then the property lady has to stand for a lot of temperament from the actors.



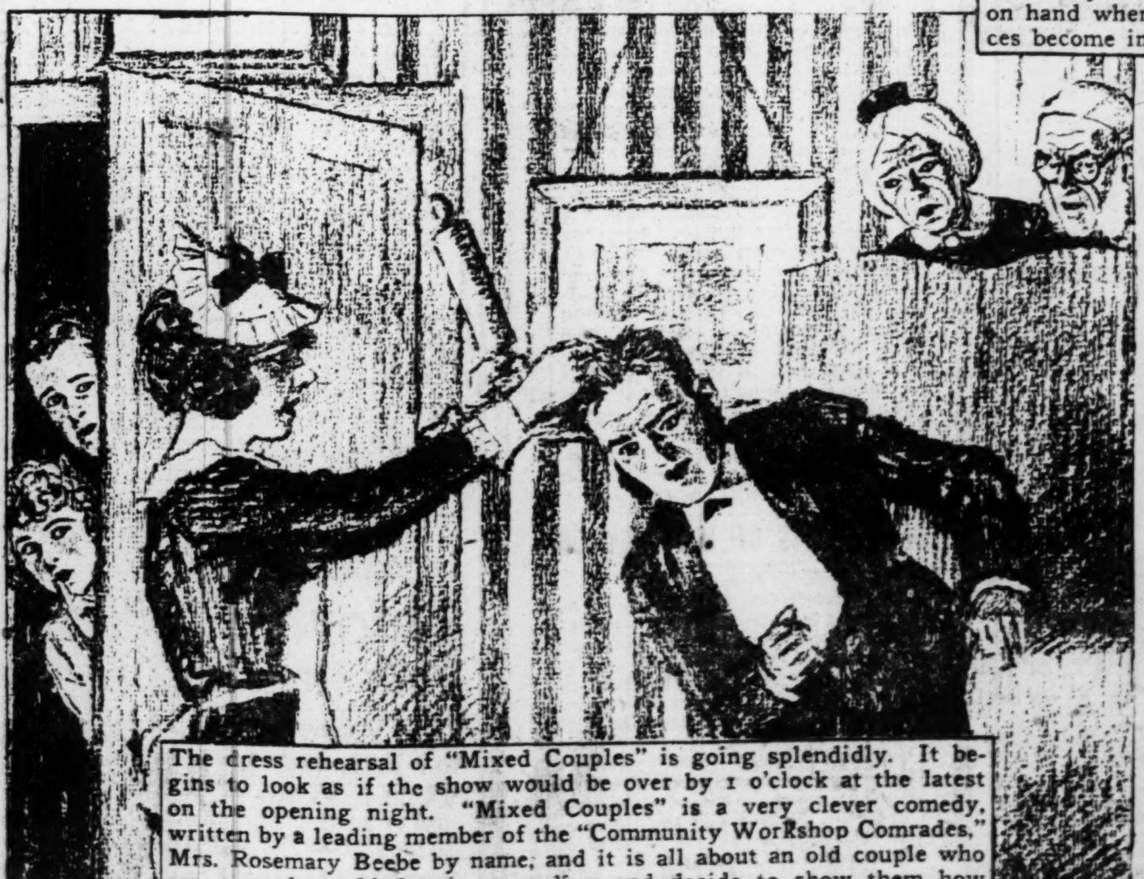
The character man. Joe is given little character bits whenever there are any, for Joe, though not a very good actor, is a splendid bookkeeper and extremely handy to have on hand when the finances become involved.



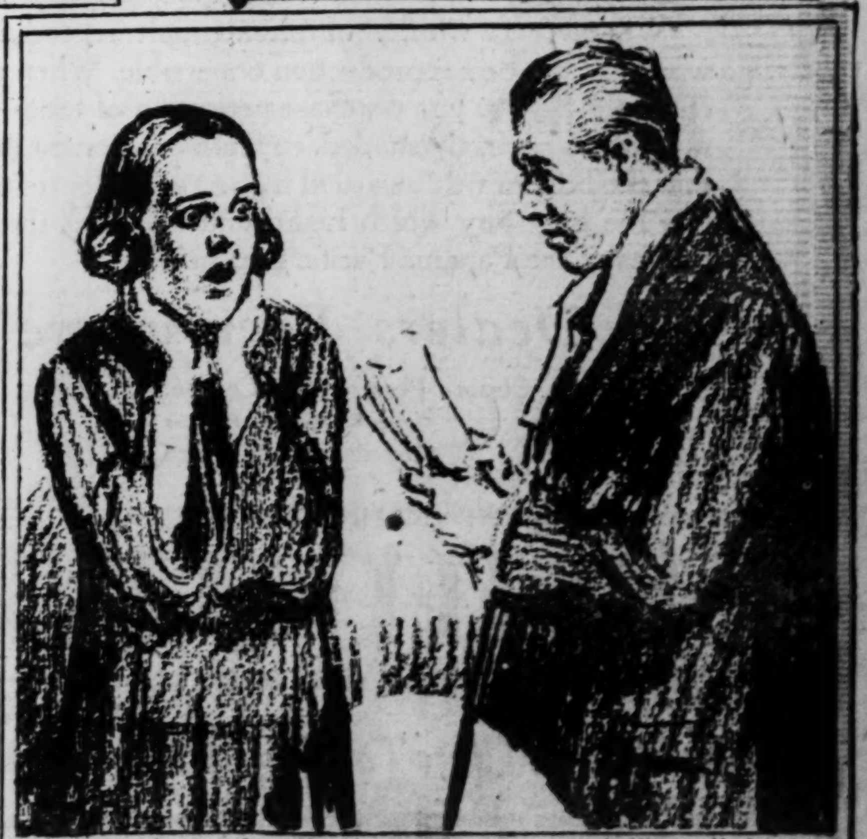
The eleventh hour substitute, called in to take the leading lady's place when that young lady went under with tonsilitis. You will find the lady substitute in the wings at the dress rehearsal saying whole passages to herself over and over and over. And when they give the public performance she will skip half an act or so, thereby endearing herself to the entire cast.



Scene behind the scenes, showing the howling, growling mob clamoring at the gates of the Emperor's palace.



The dress rehearsal of "Mixed Couples" is going splendidly. It begins to look as if the show would be over by 1 o'clock at the latest on the opening night. "Mixed Couples" is a very clever comedy, written by a leading member of the "Community Workshop Comrades," Mrs. Rosemary Beebe by name, and it is all about an old couple who see a newly-wedded pair quarreling and decide to show them how foolish it is to quarrel by staging a fight of their own. Enter the maid and the butler. Old and trusted family servitors that they are, they decide to show the old couple how foolish it is to quarrel. Whereupon they do a make-believe quarrel. Well, it all turns out that the young couple were only rehearsing a movie scenario and weren't quarreling at all. Curtain.



Harriet has a really big part in a one-act thriller called "Hydrophobia." In it she goes mad, bites her husband, her lover, two doctors, a trained nurse, her husband's mistress and a charwoman. They all go mad, too. Harriet is being heard in her part by a bashful swain who hadn't bargained for quite so much realism behind scenes.

The Best Record is Better on a Sonora

THE most famous motor cars are not produced by the tire manufacturers, the greatest of player-pianos are not all made by the producers of rolls. Nor is the "Highest Class Talking Machine in the World" a product of the record industry.

With no division of effort, with the whole force of a great organization devoted single-mindedly to making the Sonora alone, a great phonograph was inevitable.

This policy has made Sonora so high an achievement in phonograph construction that it plays perfectly ALL MAKES of records and was the first phonograph to do so. Actual comparisons demonstrate that records give BETTER results when played on the Sonora.

Whatever is worthy of phonograph reproduction, is worthy of the best reproduction obtainable. When you purchase the Sonora you purchase perfection of tone—tone so mellow, so perfectly shaded, so warmly resonant and pure that the Sonora was awarded highest score for tone quality "by the only jury which heard and tested all the phonographs at the Panama-Pacific Exposition."

IMPORTANT WORK OF GRECIAN ART FOUND IN ATHENS

Daily Life of Young Men Shown in Reliefs Carved on Marble Discovered Beside Ancient Wall.

GAME OF BALL IS SHOWN IN CARVING

Carving Said to Belong to Close of Sixth Century; Style Is Attic.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

MANCHESTER, England, March 25.—"A discovery of first-class importance for the study of Greek art has just been made in Athens," writes the corespondent af the Manchester Guardian at the Grecian capital.

"The western side of the ancient city wall can be traced running down the hill of Philopappos, past the Pnyx, and down by the modern observatory to the Cerameikos. The foundations are visible on the surface for the greater part of the way, but from the Observatory to the Cerameikos and the Piraeus road the wall is, for the most part, built over. In a small yard just behind a modern hat factory a large portion of the wall emerges.

"The owner of the ground, in the course of clearing the earth a few days ago from near the wall, uncovered a block of marble which was built into the lower courses. On removing the block it proved to be a rectangular statue base, with reliefs carved on three of the sides and a socket cut in the upper face for the insertion of a statue. It measures about a yard square and two feet high. Except for one slightly damaged corner the reliefs are in absolutely perfect condition, and the background in two out of three of the reliefs is still colored a brilliant red.

At a Game of Ball.

"The subject of all three reliefs is taken from the daily life of the young men of Athens, and the style is that of the end of the sixth century B. C. The relief on the left side represents two teams of young men playing at a game of ball. Each team is of three, and the two teams are seen facing each other. The three youths on the left have just received the ball and are advancing as though to throw it. The other three are stepping back preparatory to catching the ball again. The elegance and delicacy of the composition are quite unparalleled in archaic sculpture.

"The second relief on the front face shows two youths wrestling with their arms locked around each other's shoulders. Behind each stands a friend, the one on the left encouraging his wrestler, the other on the right holding a measuring pole as though to see that fair play is done.

"The third relief on the right side shows four figures. Two youths are seated in chairs facing each other. One, on the left, holds a dog which is straining on a leash to reach at a cat or lynx which the other youth is holding, also on a leash. Behind each of the seated youths stands another, looking on at the game.

"All the figures are cut in extremely low relief, but with a delicacy that is seldom found in archaic Greek art except in the works of the Attic school. The careful treatment of the muscles and the amazing variety of attitude and composition mark this sculpture as one of the most perfect examples of archaic art in existence. It is certainly the most important work of art found in Greece for many years.

Style Clearly Attic.

"In style it is clearly Attic, and the marble in which it is cut is Pentelic. It belongs to the close of the sixth century, and is more closely related than any other contemporary sculpture to the vase-painting of this period. The fact that it was found built into the city wall suggests that it was one of the monuments which, as Thucydides tells us, were used by Themistocles in building the walls of Athens in 478 B. C., when, owing to the speed with which the walls had to be built, every sort and kind of old monument was used as building material. The place in the wall where it was found seems to have been the Piraic gate, through which the road went to Piraeus.

"It is refreshing to find that monuments of the first order of artistic merit are still to be found in Athens. It is possible that more sculptures may be found similarly built up in this part of the wall."

NAVY CLASS OF 1881 REUNION

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Plans are being completed for the next reunion of the famous Naval Academy class of 1881, which is to be held at Tokio, Japan, in May. Included in the class graduates are Secretary Weeks, Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, superintendent of the Naval Academy; Major-General George Barnett, former commandant of the Marine Corps; Brigadier-General Henry C. Haines of the Marine Corps; Senator O. E. Weller of Maryland, and Admiral Uria of the Japanese navy.

Admiral Uria attended the reunion in Washington last summer and then invited the classmen to meet in Tokio this year. A special invitation to attend the reunion was extended to Secretary Denby on the ground that having married the sister of a member he is a "brother-in-law member of the class." The American members will make the trip to Japan on the naval transport Henderson, sailing from San Francisco. Stops will be made at Hawaii, the Philippines and China.

PILES CURED WITHOUT OPERATION By Dr. Henrich's Method TO STAY CURED

No Cutting, No Pain, No Chloroform, No Hospital, No Danger, No Loss of Time.
Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

Indorses The Henrich Method.

R. 1. Belleville, Ill., May 16, 1912.

Dr. W. P. Henrich.

Dear Sir: When I called on you for Treatment last January at your office I was suffering with Internal Piles, which had unfitted me for business and made life more or less a burden. I felt that I was in such a condition that something radical had to be done, and instead of wasting any more time with patent medicines and regular physicians, decided that I would submit to the Treatment of a good Rectal Specialist, which I understood you to be. I dreaded the Treatment more than I can say, and was most agreeably disappointed, finding it very mild and so effective that I improved from the very start.

Thanks to your skill and careful attention I am today a well man without a trace of my former troubles. Your work for suffering humanity has proved a blessing to hundreds and I most gratefully indorse your method. No knife is used and the cure is perfect and permanent.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. CLARK.

Cured 14 Years Ago—Still Cured.

Mascoutah, Ill., Sept. [illegible]

W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D.

Dear Doctor:—

On June 15, 1908, I consulted you in regard to a very bad case of Piles with which I had trouble for 22 years, having great pains at times and also bleeding spells.

I went to your office, you examined my case and said you could positively Cure Me without the knife or chloroform. I am pleased to say that I was Permanently Cured in three weeks without loss from my work, and I have had no trouble since.

I cannot say enough for your Treatment, so I advise all Sufferers from Piles not to put off treatment from day to day as I did, but go at once to Dr. Henrich and Be Cured for Life. You surely will not regret the day you take this Wonderful Treatment. Very truly yours,
JOHN MUELLER JR.

What I have done for hundreds of others I can do for you, because "The Henrich Cure is Safe and Sure." So call this week or write today.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and other disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer cause irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

If Ruptured Try This Free

Anyone ruptured, man, woman or child, should call at our office at once for free trial of the Rice Method, including the wonderful Lymphol Stimulating Application. Just put it on the rupture and the muscles begin to tighten; they begin to bind together so the opening closes naturally and the need of a support or truss is done away with. Don't neglect to call or send for this free trial. Even if your rupture doesn't bother, what is the use of wearing trusses all your life? Why suffer this nuisance? Why run the risk of gangrene and such dangers from a small and innocent little rupture, the kind that has thrown thousands on the operating table? A host of men and women are daily running such risk just because their ruptures do not hurt nor prevent them from getting around. Follow the example of the thousands who have accepted our great free trial offer and later reported solid and lasting cures. It is certainly a wonderful thing and has aided in the cure of ruptures that were as big as a man's two fists. Try and call today before serious trouble comes. Office hours: 9 to 12 a. m., 1 to 6 p. m., and Monday and Wednesday evenings, 7 to 9. Sundays, 10 to 1. If you cannot call at once, phone Olive 2397 or Central 1561, or write, and a free demonstrating trial and book of valuable information about rupture will be mailed you without charge. William S. Rice, Inc., Calumet Bldg., Room 218, 114 North Seventh St., St. Louis, Mo.

HOW TO DRESS WELL ON MODERATE INCOME

Lectures on Subject to Be Given by Woman Designer at Better Homes Institute.

How to dress well on a moderate income, with actual cost prices of the various details of costumes for every occasion and demonstrations on living models of how the same money may make a woman look well dressed and poorly dressed, will be the subject of one of four talks on women's dress to be delivered in the Better Homes Institute series at the Odeon next week. Miss Evelyn M. Hansen, known nationally as a designer of women's clothes and a member of the staff of the Chicago Art Institute, will be the speaker. Miss Hansen will answer the many vexing questions as to what constitutes being "well dressed," and will give some advice on the general subject of women's apparel to her audience.

Four of the 12 talks in the Better Homes series will be by Miss Hansen, it is announced. The first of these will take place Monday evening, April 3, and the subject will be color in the art of dress. The following day she will discuss "line" in dress, showing how straight lines transform a stout woman into a seemingly slender one, and describing the effect of broad hats on the apparent size of the figure. Wednesday afternoon her subject will be how to dress well on a moderate income, and on Wednesday evening in her last talk she will speak to business women on the general topic, "The Well-Dressed Business Woman."

Purposes of Institute.

The Better Homes Institute of the Chicago Art Institute will be brought to St. Louis next week for the observance of a Better Homes Week here under the auspices of the St. Louis Retail Furniture Dealers' Association. Ross Crane, head of the Better Homes Institute, will be the principal figure in the program, and will have as his assistants Miss Hansen and F. A. Cushing Smith, landscape architect. The purpose of the celebration, it is announced, is to further the movement for better homes, more artistic planning and decorations in and outside the homes, the own-your-own-home idea, and the general improvement of the appearance of the middle-class American homes. St. Louis is in the midst of an interesting demonstration of this movement and is going far, according to local interior decorators, in the right direction in the way of designing and furnishing the homes of its citizens, and the visit of the Better Homes Institute at this time is believed to be especially opportune.

The talks of the Better Homes Institute program will assist homemakers in all the steps of the process of making their homes—selecting the lot, planning the house, building it, decorating and furnishing it, planting the grounds and even sowing the vegetables in the kitchen garden, if there is one. Some of these talks will also deal directly with the rented home or the apartment, and will give advice on how to make the most of small spaces both as to comfort and appearance, and how to overcome conditions which normally would offend the eye of the artistic home builders.

Lectures to Be Illustrated.

Ross Crane, who will be the chief speaker in the series, will open the Institute course at the Odeon Monday evening, April 3, with a general talk on interior decorating, using a portable room with actual furniture and draperies selected from the various St. Louis stores which carry such articles. In his second talk, on Tuesday evening, Crane will discuss "Art versus Aunt Matilda," giving a demonstration of how the horrible country "parlors" of a decade or two ago can be rendered really beautiful and immeasurably more comfortable by a different arrangement of practically the same articles of furniture, after this furniture has been somewhat simplified or changed, and how by using neutral tones for the walls and floor coverings the garish look is eliminated.

One of Crane's talks will deal entirely with the moderate in cost.

F. A. Cushing Smith will consider only the exterior of the home in his talks which will open Tuesday evening with a demonstration of designing and planting a 50-foot lot.

Program in Detail.

The series will close Thursday night with a question-box talk by all three speakers, in which questions received during the week will be answered fully and demonstrations given. Following is the program in detail:

MONDAY, April 3.

8 p. m.—Interior decoration, using portable room, actual furniture and draperies, Ross Crane.

9 p. m.—Demonstration in "Art of Dress"—"Color," Evelyn D. Hansen.

TUESDAY, April 4.

WEDNESDAY, April 5.

WEEK OF IBSEN DRAMA AT ARTISTS' GUILD IN APRIL

Norwegian Players, Mme. Borgy Hammer and Rolf Fjell, to Appear in Three Plays.

Mme. Borgy Hammer and Rolf Fjell, co-stars in Ibsen drama, will open a week's engagement at the Little Theater of the Artists' Guild, 810 North Union boulevard, on April 3. They will repeat "The Master Builder" and "Ghosts," which they produced at their initial St. Louis appearance at the Guild Theater in January. In addition, they will play "Rosmersholm," which has not been seen here since it was played by Mrs. Fiske several years ago.

Both Mme. Hammer and Fjell were connected with national theaters in Norway before coming to America. The plays are given in English, and there are several American players in the company, which is under the direction of Laurence Clarke. "The Master Builder" will be given on Monday and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoon. "Ghosts" will be given on Wednesday and Friday evenings, April 5 and 7, and "Rosmersholm" on April 4 and 8, and the Thursday matinee, April 6.

CHURCHILL ENDS SLAVERY OF CHILDREN IN HONG KONG

"Mutsai" System Abolished After Investigation Shows Action Had Been Delayed Since 1882.

(Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World from the Manchester Guardian.)
(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, March 24. — Mr. Churchill in abolishing the "Mutsai" system in Hongkong has done away with what was nothing more than thinly camouflaged slavery of children. Now all the defenses behind which the bureaucrats have resisted have been swept aside.

The history of this agitation furnished a good example of the extreme difficulty of getting anything done by correspondence with the lesser Lords of the bureaucratic machine. In the archives of his office Churchill found a blue book of 1882, setting forth all the facts of the "Mutsai" and including full instructions to the Governor of Hongkong to hold an inquiry. No inquiry was held and the whole thing was pigeon holed for 40 years.

Chief credit for the present action is due to Commander Hazlewood and his wife. One day the commander, who had an appointment at the naval station in Hongkong, heard an ill-used adopted child crying in a Chinese house. He and his wife investigated and did their best to stir the authorities to action. His reward for this was to be placed on retired pay.

CLEVELAND'S PUBLIC RECEPTION HALL TO BE OPENED APRIL 15

$6,300,000 Auditorium Equipped With Mammoth Pipe Organ and Will Seat More Than 13,500.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., March 25. — A public reception will mark the opening of Cleveland's $6,300,000 public auditorium, which Mayor Fred Kohler has set for April 15. The first private attraction in the new auditorium will be the American Building Exposition, from April 22 to May 2, inclusive.

An organ of 10,000 concealed pipes and 150 direct stops will be installed. It will be three stories high, 100 feet wide and 32 feet deep. The largest of the pipes will be 32 feet high. The console will be mounted on an elevator that it may be lowered below the auditorium floor when necessary. The echo organ will be 300 feet from the console.

The hall will seat 13,500 in its main auditorium and will afford 75,000 square feet of floor space suitable for tournaments and exhibitions, including aeronautic displays. There also is provision for committee rooms, shower baths, rest and dressing rooms, and a barber shop. Spacious stairways and ramps or inclined passageways have been designed to give ready passage from floor to floor and to permit the building to be emptied in a few minutes.

The building is designed in the Italian Renaissance style and is of steel construction. The exterior is faced with granite and limestone, the interior with marble, tile and decorative plaster.

"UNTOUCHABLES" GET OUT OF STREET FOR HIGH CASTE INDIANS

Niece of Tagore Lost Caste by Combing Hair of Cleaning Woman's Daughter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Miss Gertrude Emerson, who arrived here this week by the White Star liner Homeric after 22 months of traveling in the East as a member of the staff of the Magazine of Asia, said that the masses, the 50,000,000 "untouchables," or persons in India so lowly that they have to get out of the street when a high caste Indian comes along, worship Mohandas Gandhi as a saint.

"There is no doubt," she said, "that Gandhi, in turning from religous to political leadership has made several mistakes, but he has done a vast good for his people, and will be cherished by the as a patriotic figure after he is dead. He told me he expected to be imprisoned long before this—but in the end his arrest was timed to come the day after the publication of the statemen of the Moslem Indians' views, which was intended to allay resentment among his followers."

Asked about the political status of women in the Orient, Miss Emerson laughingly replied: "They haven't any. The so-called woman movement in the East simply does not exist. But woman is by no means downtrodden in the strongly centralized family system of China and India; she has a powerful influence through her home. If she's got brains she can direct affairs that way. In India I met a niece of the poet Rabindanath Tagore, who belongs to the Progressive group. She had entirely lost caste among her friends, Brahmin caste, because she had combed the hair of the daughter of the cleaning woman one day.

"She confessed that after doing it she had scrubbed her hands for an hour, feeling that she would not wash off the stain. This gives an idea of the gulf there is between American and Indian ideals."

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

BANQUET WILL OPEN Y. W. C. A. CAMPAIGN

Women Will Launch Effort to Secure $120,000 for Organization With Meeting Tomorrow Night.

Everything is in readiness for the launching of the $120,000 Y. W. C. A. campaign, which is to be officially opened at a banquet in the Pierce Building at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night. About 500 team workers, committee members and friends of the association are expected at the opening banquet.

Melville L. Wilkinson and others will speak. One of the "Y" club girls will also speak, telling briefly "What the St. Louis Y. W. C. A. Means to Me." Mrs. James W. Lee, campaign chairman, will preside.

The banquet program will be centered around the urgency of the need of keeping the Y. W. C. A. doors wide open, and will stress the fact that $120,000 is a small amount for such a large and generous city as St. Louis to give to this cause. Campaign luncheons will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week and the first three days of next week. Lionberger Davis and Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of the St. John's Methodist Church, have been announced as the speakers for the Wednesday luncheon, and Warren Flynn, president of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Dr. John W. McIvor of the Second Presbyterian Church will speak on Thursday.

International Institute Teams.

One of the special features of the opening banquet will be the presence of campaign teams from the International Institute of the Y. W. C. A. The institute team, which is being headed by Miss Olivia Brueggemann and Miss Josephine Fritsch, comprises units of nationality teams of foreign-born workers, including those of Italian, Czech, Polish and Greek nationalities. Members of these nationality units will solicit contributions from the foreign born amongst whom the International Institute of the Y. W. C. A. works.

Nineteen nationalities are reached by the institute at 2346 South Broadway, among its varied activities being the locating and helping of recent arrivals from Ellis Island, interpreting for women in municipal clinics, securing reliable medical and legal services, advising in family difficulties and recruiting English classes and group meetings. The institute co-operated with 27 other agencies last year, receiving 246 requests for service from them and referring 215 cases for assistance.

Appeals From Pulpits.

In connection with the campaign, the Y. W. C. A. appeal is being presented from all the Protestant pulpits of the city today, and campaign literature is to be distributed in the pews. The campaign has the hearty support of the clergy, the St. Louis Ministerial Alliance having passed resolutions setting aside the day as Association Sunday, and indorsing the campaign project. Dr. Donald C. McLeod, president of the Alliance, has issued a letter of indorsement.

An organization of about 450 team workers has been built up in the interests of the campaign, including 150 members of Y. W. C. A. girls' teams under the chairmanship of Miss Bertha Muehlenbrock.

There will be 30 women's teams headed up under two general divisions, Madame Charles Humann and Mrs. Robert L. Hedges being majors of Divisions A and B respectively. Each team is to have 10 workers, making 300 St. Louis women who have been enlisted for active campaign work in the interests of the girls of the city. Solicitation will begin Tuesday morning and will continue for 10 days.

Objects of Campaign.

The $120,000 which is being asked is needed to clear away current indebtedness and provide for 1922 work. Owing to the fact that there has been no campaign exclusively for maintenance since 1917, the funds secured in the 1920 campaign going for housing projects, the organization faces a deficit and cannot continue to maintain its program of activities without generous support from the people of the city. The Y. W. C. A. is not entirely self-supporting, as its policy is to put its service within the reach of every girl, no matter what her means.

The campaign appeal is to be based squarely upon the record of the St. Louis Y. W. C. A. in meeting the needs of the girls and women of the city, it is stated. Statistics report housing, recreational activities, employment bureau work and religious, industrial and girls' work departments are being made public on campaign literature.

NEGRO HEALTH WEEK IN MISSOURI FROM APRIL 2 TO 9

Negro Health Week for the purpose of stimulating interest in health measures among the negroes, will be held throughout Missouri April 2 to 9. It is a part of the National Health Week, held at this time, instituted by the late Booker T. Washington of Tuskegee Institute.

The negro death rate in Missouri is approximately 6 2-3 per cent, or nearly as high as the birth rate. Of the 2674 negro deaths in Missouri last year, 788 were from tuberculosis. There is at present no place in Missouri where negro patients in the first stages of tuberculosis can receive treatment.

Congestion of the negroes in the larger cities, and poor housing conditions, are blamed for the high death rate. Ninety-four of the 114 counties in Missouri show a decrease in negro population. Most of these negroes have drifted to the larger cities.

There's a Big Difference in SEEDS

Next to the pleasure in working and planting in the cool, moist earth, is the joy of the harvest—the time when the seeds keep their promise.

But blood will tell—invariably, in garden seeds. You should plant pure-bred seeds if you want the best crops. Rich soil is not enough. Rain and sunshine, fertilizers, all your work—these can help you only when quality and productiveness have been bred into the seeds.

Reason points to planting Ferry's Seeds. You will like the "pure-bred" ideal. It means that Ferry's Seeds are from plants whose parents met rigid garden tests for sturdiness, size, color, flavor and ability to reproduce abundantly and true to name. It means that hundreds of thousands of plants were discarded in the patient search for these most perfect parent plants.

Size or color is not enough; you want delicious flavor, crispness, melting tenderness. You get them every time when you select Ferry's pure-bred Seeds.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.

Ferry's Seeds are sold "at the store around the corner." Price, 10 cents per paper—the least expensive item on your garden list.

ITALIAN BRONZES ON DISPLAY AT ART MUSEUM

Five Remarkably Fine Specimens Date Back to the Renaissance Period.

Five remarkably fine Italian bronzes of the Renaissance period are on exhibit at the City Art Museum today. They are on temporary loan while being considered as possible acquisitions, in accordance with the policy of the museum to form a representative collection of the decorative arts of significant periods. Two of the bronzes, a figure of Hercules and a representation of Christ Crucified, are purely sculptural in conception. The other three pieces, a candlestick, a door knocker and a bell, are frankly utilitarian objects which have been made beautiful by the inventive fancy and refined taste of the Renaissance craftsmen who fashioned them.

The statuette of Hercules, which was made about 1630 by an artist of the Florentine school, is a beautiful and typical example of the art of the mature Renaissance, based upon and inspired by the classic ideal, but not slavishly imitating antique models. The legendary Greek hero is represented standing by a tree stump, holding in his right hand two of the apples of Hesperedes and in his left hand the renowned club. Around his loins is draped the skin of the Nemaean lion. The modeling of the torso follows the antique closely, as the whole current of Renaissance plastic art was inspired by the numerous examples of Greek and Roman sculpture which were being excavated from the soil of Italy.

Beautiful Finish of Patina.

The piece has, however, a degree of freedom—a feeling of individuality—which was lacking in the abstract, impersonal beauty of Greek art. A remarkable feature of this little statuette is its beautiful finish or patina, which is of a depth and richness seldom encountered. This unusual patina seems to be due in a large measure to the application of some sort of semitransparent varnish or lacquer, as was the custom of the period, which in the present instance greatly enhances the natural richness of the bronze.

The statuette was formerly in the famous collection of M. Chabriere-Arles of Paris and Lyons, from which the museum has in the past acquired several important examples of arms, armor and furniture.

The figure of "Christ Crucified" is of a slightly earlier period, having been fashioned about 1603 by an unknown Florentine sculptor who was a close follower of the style of Giovanni di Bologna. The modeling shows all the delicacy and precision which characterize the works of this great master, and the patina is of a peculiar color, said to have been produced by a lacquer of which Giovanni was the discoverer.

Of the three decorative bronzes the door knocker shows most markedly the rich exuberance and inventive fancy of the craftsman of the late Renaissance, who saw in every utilitarian object a field for the exercise of his faculty for ornamentation. The inventiveness and whimsical designs of bronzes of this type are a continual source of inspiration to modern workers.

Description of Knocker.

The knocker is composed of two dolphins gracefully curved as volutes and placed vis-a-vis in the form of a loop suspended by their tails, which are hinged upon the head of a bearded faun. Attached to this head is the original iron bolt by which the knocker was fastened to the door. The knocker itself is formed of the grotesque mask of a bearded satyr with protruding tongue, supported by the ears which the dolphins on either side hold in their mouths.

The exuberant fancy displayed in the modeling of the robust faces, the graceful sweep of line and balance of the composition, and the rich, greenish-tinted patina, all combine to make this piece an unusually fine example of the so-called decorative arts. It is said to date from the second half of the sixteenth century and to be by a member of the Lombardy school. This bronze also belonged to M. Chabriere-Arles and is illustrated in the catalogue of his collection.

The bronze candlestick is of Venetian workmanship in the style of the school of Alessandro Vittoria, and was made in the last half of the sixteenth century. Its conventional decoration is of a more sober and restrained type, showing the influence of the architect rather than the more imaginative hand of the sculptor. It was a part of the extensive collection of Renaissance bronzes formed by the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and is described in the catalogue of his collection by Dr. William Bode. The circular base is decorated with a lower band of egg and dart pattern and a wider band of palmettes. The stem is vase-shaped and is enriched with garlands in relief suspended from shields bearing coats of arms, probably of the family for whom the piece was cast. There is no sconce, the candlestick belonging to a period before the introduction of this device.

Bell Probably Made in Florence.

The bell is of the small hand type and was probably made in Florence about the middle of the sixteenth century. It is decorated in relief with a repeated pattern of sea monsters supporting a placque with an inscription. Above is a frieze of garlands and ox skulls. The handle is a restoration. In this, as in the other bronzes discussed, the artist has striven, not so much for accuracy and delicacy of finish, as for character and feeling. It is this quality of displaying something of the individuality of the artist which distinguishes the better examples Renaissance bronzes from the dry and mechanical productions of inferior periods.

Other special attractions at the museum today are an exhibit of bronze sculptures of animals by Albert Laessle of Philadelphia and a collection of antique velvets, brocades and needlework, lent by the Hayden company of New York.

Grandma used Sage Tea to Darken Hair

GRANDMOTHER kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

THINGS AMERICAN ARE PRAISED BY COUNTESS

Women Neither Rude Nor Rough and Men Are Charming, Says MMme. Musaerlli.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 25.—"American shops are the most wonderful in the world, and American women are the most smartly dressed," said the comtesse de Vannes, who is here with her stepfather, P. Tennyson-Cole, in an interview at the Vanderbilt Hotel. Coming as it does from a French Countess this is, indeed, a compliment.

The Countess, who is tall and blond and less than 30, is most cosmopolitan; her mother was an Englishwoman and she herself married an Italian whom she met in Cairo, but he was killed a few months after the wedding while fighting in the Italian army. The last five years she has passed in traveling in India with her stepfather, who is well known in Europe as a portrait painter, having painted portraits of the late King Edward, King George and other sovereigns. During most of his stay in India with his daughter he was engaged in making portraits of the native Princes and rulers. He expects to do a number of portraits in this country.

"So Kind to Luggage."

"I had feared to find Americans rude and rough," said the Countess, who speaks English with scarcely a trace of accent, "but I have had a delightful surprise; even the immigration officers were charming. They were so kind, and my poor luggage, so mauled and abused in England and France, was treated here with the utmost deference and respect. I enjoy so much the freedom here for women and they seem not in the least harmed by it. And the men, they are charming; far more fascinating than those I have met on the Continent or among the foreign colonies in Cairo and India.

"I am an ardent feminist," continued the Countess, "for I find, especially in Europe, many disadvantages under which women must struggle. You know I am really an Italian citizen, Mme. Ettore Musarelli, because of my marriage to M. Musarelli, and his death makes no difference, whereas if I had been divorced from my husband I would have regained by French citizenship. My husband was director of the Banco de Roma in Trieste and it was less than a year after our wedding that he died as a result of injuries suffered during the war when he served with the Italian Aviation Corps.

Her Views on India.

"We were in India during the war and there were no signs of the hardships of the great struggle there and none of the suffering that the European countries endured. The women in India are distressingly backward, and in Cairo, too, we saw few who were not still wearing the 'achmash' or veil, the symbol of their practical slavery.

"In Egypt there were frequent disturbances among the students, who used the slogans, 'down with England' and 'Egypt for the Egyptians.' England, it seems to me, wants to keep too many countries under her control, but whether a political change in Egypt just now would be for the better I cannot say.

"In Cairo, just as in the larger cities of India," the Countess explained, "the foreigners all live in their own colonies and do not see much of the natives. All the frictions between the home countries are reflected in the bickerings between the various foreign colonies, which makes social life most difficult. Often the feeling between these exiles runs much higher than it does even in the countries themselvs.

"Coming through France and in Paris, now, one sees few if any signs of the war. There are no beggars and everybody is busily at work. But in London beggars are everywhere, there seems to be so much unemployment and strikes are frequent. I do not know how France manages to handle her unemployment problems so well."

HUNGER-STRICKEN REFUGEES THRONG STREETS OF SALONIKI

Charity of America Plays Large Part in Care of Many Thousands of Children.

SALONIKI, March 25. — Saloniki with its 100,000 population and its 99 minarets, gives shelter to more refugees than any other city in the world. Crowded within its narrow and shattered walls are 40,000 Greek and Macedonian refugees, 20,000 exiles from Russia, and an uncounted number of fugitives from Armenia, the Caucasus and other oppressed countries.

Most of them have a pitiful existence. A crust of black bred and a cup of watery soup daily is all that keeps them from the grave.

The Greek Government has not the means to care properly for this great host of indigents. All its money is consumed by the army in Asia Minor. The charity of America plays a large part in the care of the children, of whom there are many thousands. The American Red Cross is trying to aid the little ones.

The heart of Saloniki was destroyed by fire in 1917 and most of the city still is a mass of crumbling walls and rubbish heaps. The water and sewage systems were almost wholly destroyed. There are no hotels left. Only the well-to-do have homes. The rest of the population live in huts, tents and in the streets. Nearly a dozen mosques have been turned into shelters for the homeless. Two thousand persons eat, sleep and have their being in a single mosque.

This is the busiest mart in the East. It is also the richest. Nowhere in Europe is wealth at once so opulent or poverty so utterly wretched. The visitor has to fight almost for a place on the street. He battles for a foothold on the only street car line, he storms the restaurant for food, and he has to appeal to the Governor-General for a room.

PACKARD REPORTS INCREASED SALES

"If we may judge from our own figures," says Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Co., "the automobile industry is entering upon one of the most active selling seasons enjoyed in recent years.

"Our twin-six and truck market, strengthened no doubt by the price revisions lately announced, is responding splendidly, and the single-six is displaying an activity equally notable. A considerable increase in our factory force has been made necessary by this turn in business.

"So bright is the outlook for a healthy spring demand that we are creating a reserve of finished cars against which we can draw in case of a possible shortage."

JORDAN ANNOUNCES ANOTHER PRICE CUT

Predicts Business This Year Will Not Be Sufficient to Sustain Present Price Levels.

A series of striking facts revealed by a country wide survey brought the Jordan Motor Co. to the decision to make another big price reduction in Jordan cars on April 1, says president Edward S. Jordan.

The business situation revealed by this survey will enlighten many business men, according to Jordan. The volume of business in 1922 will not be sufficient to keep all plants and all industries going at a capacity sufficient to sustain present price levels.

The wide disparity between prices of different commodities, particularly the spread between producer's and consumer's prices, is yet too great. Business will not be available for all sellers until this condition is changed.

In the meantime the only way to get more than your share of the business is to take it away from the other fellow who has not yet adjusted himself to the new conditions.

If you ask me how to do this I will say that it is through consistent leg work and intensive sales effort.

Farm crops with the recent increases, are now on the 1913 level. Retail clothing is 113 per cent above farm crops. Labor in the metal trades is 118 per cent above, and in the textile industry 110 per cent above. In the building trades labor is 90 per cent above, and the cost of living generally is variously estimated from 58 to 74 per cent above.

Four fundamental factors must change materially before there will be enough business for everybody to keep his plant going without loss.

The national tax bill must be greatly reduced. This means a reduction in the cost of running the Government. Railroad rates on certain commodities will have to be reduced. Wage scales are still as far out of line as prices themselves. Rents will have to come down.

The survey indicates that when these four factors are further readjusted there will be a gradual improvement.

In the automobile industry prices on some makes of cars are now below cost. This cannot continue. A rising tendency in certain lines is inevitable after the first of April.

The reductions on the Jordan ranges from $300 to $400 on the various models. This amounts to a reduction of 37 per cent, or $1055 in 12 months' time, and brings the Jordan car back to pre-war prices, as the Jordan was selling for $1795 on the day that war was declared.

LINCOLN ANNOUNCES NEW SALES POLICY

Formal announcement of the Lincoln Motor Co.'s new sales policy has just been issued by W. C. Leland, vice president and general manager.

This policy is the outgrowth of the Leland-Ford affiliation wherein Henry and and Edsel Ford in association with Henry M. and Wilfred C. Leland, founders of the Lincoln Motor Co., took over the assets of that company Feb. 4 for $8,000,000. While there will be certain co-operative activities of the Ford and Lincoln companies, the manufacturing organizations and the executive personnels will remain entirely separate and distinct, with the Lelands as the active heads of the Lincoln company.

The sales policy contemplates that the Ford dealers throughout the country will supplement the already well established organization of Lincoln distributors. The latter force is being enlarged as rapidly as conditions will permit and will include in all some 75 to 80 direct Lincoln distributors.

In St. Louis the McNiece-Hill Motor Co. will continue as authorized Lincoln distributors with the co-operation of the Ford dealers in the sale of Lincoln cars.

The servicing of Lincoln cars will rest with the regular Lincoln distributor. Ford dealers doing business outside of the territory covered by Lincoln distributors will also be authorized to sell Lincoln cars. Taking the two sales forces in conjunction they provide an outlet of tremendous magnitude covering practically every community in the country.

DELIVERIES OF STAR CAR SET FOR JUNE 1

Production of the Star car, Durants' new $348 creation, in quantities, is scheduled to begin June 1, according to H. W. Spalding, president of the Spalding Motor Co., Inc., distributors of Durant cars.

Spalding, who recently returned from a visit to the Durant factory at Lansing, Mich., stated that M. B. Leahy, formerly Eastern sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., who has been appointed general salesmanager for all Durant companies, had assured him that the Star car would be distributed throughout the United States by Durant dealers.

The new car is equipped with a four-cylinder Red Seal Continental motor, $3\frac{1}{8}$x4x inches; Timken rear axle, Timken bearings, front and rear; Spicer universal joints; selective sliding gear transmission, three speeds forward and reverse; single plate disc clutch; half-elliptic springs, underslung; Stewart vacuum gasoline feed, with supply tank at rear; electric lighting by standard generator, with storage battery; streamline body and one-man top.

The prices of the various models, f. o. b. factory, are as follows: Chassis, $285; touring (regular), $348; touring (self-starter and demountable rims), $443; runabout (regular), $319; runabout (self-starter and demountable rims), $414; coupe (self-starter and demountable rims), $580; sedan (self-starter and demountable hims), $645.

Hupmobile Finely Built

It is almost impossible to wear out the Hupmobile. The first Hupmobiles, built 12 and 13 years ago, are in use today, all over the world.

Owners, and those who buy in the used car markets, would tell you its depreciation is slower and smaller; that its price as a used car is proportionately higher.

Back of its longer life and rare economy, is, of course, the way the Hupmobile is built.

The fact is that many of its important parts are identical, in material and in manufacturing costs, with the same parts in the cars of the highest price; and Hupmobile shop practices are exceptionally fine and close.

The Buick Drag-Link is Forged From One Piece of Metal

The Buick Drag-Link consists of a single unit steel bar, instead of the usual bar with two welded end sections. This construction positively eliminates any points of weakness along the entire length of the bar and is another evidence of the care with which Buick cars are built throughout.

TRAVEL DECALOGUE FOR TOURISTS

In the hope of establishing greater co-ordination between free travel information agencies, municipalities and Chambers of Commerce throughout the United States, the Tourist Bureau of the Denver Civic and Commercial Association has suggested the following as the 10 commandments of travel:

1. An exchange of scenic, industrial and agricultural literature through tourist information racks means greater returns in travel sales for all communities.

2. The automobile camp is another clearing house for the local distribution of tourist dollars to business interests.

3. Don't worry about the tourist "crop"; it has no failures and should be given equal consideration with other harvests.

4. Consult your hotel and restaurant men as to how they can improve their service; it may be good now, but try to make it better.

5. A tourist's sense of appreciation is as keen riding in a flivver as in a railroad observation car, so clean up and paint your town.

6. Dedicate an All-States avenue in the camp grounds and show civic appreciation of their presence in an All-States day celebration for tourists in the height of the season.

7. Appoint committees to greet tourists and to hand them literature pertaining to your district and regarding side trips.

8. Encourage an exchange of camp fire tales of adventure and see that tourists are supplied with church and amusement directories.

9. Promote a standardization of camp facilities and regulate services rendered.

10. Remember that the tourist of today is the citizen of tomorrow.

PASSENGER AVERAGE LESS THAN 2 PER CAR

A comprehensive inquiry as to the average number of passengers carried in an automobile shows some interesting facts. The country-wide average is one and seven-tenths. Personal observations at six cities show that even on Sunday, when the number of passengers carried per car might naturally be supposed to be the largest, the average is less than four. On week days, the average corresponds very closely with the average for the country—less than two per car.

This is only another indication of the reason for the steadily increasing popularity of the small car. Aside from the most important considerations of low first cost, low maintenance and ease of repair because of standardization of parts, the car that holds the smallest number of people is of the greatest use the greatest part of the time. And since small cars, low in price, but completely equipped with the comforts and conveniences that the modern motorist requires, have been put on the market, their success has been growing every year.

Conspicuous examples of the policy of important manufacturers in discontinuing the manufacture of the large car and concentrating on the production of smaller and cheaper cars are sufficiently numerous to indicate that the automobile factories are keeping a close eye on the trend of the times.

CAR AND TRUCK MAKERS RECOMMEND SAFETY TAG

Motor car and motor truck manufacturers of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce have recommended that with each new car put on the market a safety tag be provided setting forth some fundamental traffic precautions to encourage safe driving. A sample form of recommended suggestions follows:

These cautions may save a life:

1. Always remember you are an engineer, fully responsible.
2. Inspect your brakes at least once a month.
3. Never pass to the left of a street car.
4. Never pass a street car when it is stopping for passengers.
5. Always signal with hand when slowing down, turning or stopping.
6. Sound horn three times when backing.
7. Observe the traffic rules carefully; they are made for your safety.

FRANKLIN-4 FACTORY TO BE AT SYRACUSE

H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile Co., today announced that the plant in which the new Franklin Four will be manufactured will be located in Syracuse, N. Y. Efforts had been made to persuade the Franklin company to purchase available factories in 15 other cities.

Mr. Franklin announced that eventually the company will produce 100 four-cylinder cars a day to sell in the $1000 class. Running at full time, the proposed plant will employ about 5000 men. The new machine will be placed on the market April 1 next year.

MORSE APPOINTED MANAGER OF APROPOS

Matthew F. Morse has been appointed business manager of Apropos, the magazine published by the Automobile Club of Missouri, succeeding C. M. Young, who resigned because of illness.

Morse had been manager of the club's emergency road service. He joined the club in 1911, when its membership was fewer than 500. It now has 22,000 members.

NASH ENTERS SPRING SEASON OVERSOLD

With a complete line of 12 new models and with prices reduced, the Nash Motors Co. enters the spring season with orders for March shipment 67 per cent in excess of shipping orders the same month a year ago. Factory records show that in March, last year, 2081 Nash cars were ordered out by dealers and distributors throughout the country, while this year's orders for March shipment total 3486 cars.

STATE ASSOCIATION PLANNED BY DEALERS

At a meeting of the Automobile Dealers' Association of St. Louis at the Marquette Hotel, Tuesday night, it was decided to join with the Automobile Club in organizing a special train for the Indianapolis automobile races, May 30.

The association strongly indorsed the 35-cent school tax and the movement of the Kiwanis Club for a St. Louis Memorial day. The association also joined in raising a fund to assist in the advertising of the City of St. Louis. A movement was started to bring about the formation of a State Automobile Dealers' Association. It is probable that the initial meeting for organization purposes will be held before May 1. The committee in charge of this is Harry Newman of the Harry Newman, Inc.; George Schroeder of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., and F. G. McDonald of the Southwest Nash Motor Co. The Kuhs-Buick Co. was elected to membership in the association.

The annual meeting of the association will be held Monday, April 10, at which officers to serve the ensuing year will be elected.

CREAM SEPARATOR USED IN MOTOR MANUFACTURE

The cream separator, heretofore confined to the placid routine of farm-life has been adopted by the automobile industry and put to work amid the hum and roar of factory machinery. This is true at least in the big factories of the Nash Motors Co., where thousands of dollars are saved each year in the motor test department by the reclamation of oil through cream separators.

Oil for reclamation is placed in a large reservoir; from there it is piped into two 150-gallon tanks which stand on a platform just above a special centrifugal cream separator. In the overhead tanks the oil is heated by steam to a proper temperature after which it is allowed to settle for a period of eight hours. The fluid is then run through the cream separator, the centrifugal action of which removes practically all remaining foreign matter.

Light ends, water and other foreign substance, by means of this process, are practically eliminated from the lubricant, with the result that the reclaimed oil is very high in quality.

INDIVIDUAL METER FOR EACH TIRE PERFECTED

The Aero Manufacturing Co. of Chicago have perfected the Aero air meter—an instrument for use on all cars, that permits a motorist to tell at a glance at all times just what the pressure is in each of his tires. This instrument is an individual meter for each tire. It is permanently screwed onto the valve stem and stays there as long as the tire is in use. On its face is a small indicator that tells the pound air pressure in the tire. When air is needed it is pumped through the meter, which has a nonleakable valve in the end of it. A walk around the car, a glance at each wheel and the car owner knows exactly what his pressure is in each tire.

The makers claim that these devices will insure at least double the tire mileage and dispense entirely with the unpleasant and inconvenient job of testing.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE REPORTS LARGE SALES

The factories of C. H. Wills & Co., Marysville, Mich., manufacturers of the Wills Sainte Claire motor car, are bending every effort to keep up with the flood of orders.

January business was 50 per cent over the November and December average; February was 50 per cent over January; the first 21 days of March showed an increase of 60 per cent over February, and April orders already booked give a definite increase in business of 100 per cent over March. The Wills Saint Claire cars are distributed in St. Louis by the McNiece-Hill Motor Car Co.

"REPAIR IT NOW" MOVEMENT ON FOOT

For years automobile repair men and accessory dealers have seen business slow down during the winter and early spring months. But this year a concerted movement is taking place to induce motorists to "Repair it now."

Motorists, too, are seeing that the policy of neglecting their cars through the winter months and postponing needed repairs is a shortsighted one.

All over the country repair men and accessory dealers are telling their customers to "Repair it now," while they can get prompt, thorough service—while the shops are able to handle the work the way it should be handled.

KEEP OIL OFF CONCRETE ROADS

Oiling a concrete road or any properly surfaced highway is not only a nuisance to the public, but is a lamentable waste of a natural resource, says A. E. Spielberg of the Franklin Automobile Co., who claims that the oiling system, a hold-over from the experimental days, is no longer necessary and should be abandoned.

MINNESOTA CONTINUES TO IMPROVE ROADS

Minnesota good roads work during 1921 spread lasting benefits on 3393 miles of main highways and patrol and maintenance service on 6855 miles of the 7000-mile system of State trunk highways—all exclusive of betterments on the secondary or so-called farmer roads.

Paving built last year measured 109 miles, compared with 112 laid in previous years combined, and 765 miles of grading and 497 miles of gravel-surfacing were added to the respective 1499 and 1371 mile total listed as graded and graveled when the State took over the trunk routes for improvement and perpetual upkeep. In addition, State maintenance forces reshaped 1337 miles and resurfaced 885 miles on the trunk system.

The Minnesota Highway Department last year planned and supervised projects representing an outlay of $19,321,238.60, of which amount $12,556,821.79 was used on the State trunk highways.

Seated at the wheel of a big motor truck, and followed by a fleet of automobiles, the Rev. E. J. Prescott, a Unitarian pastor of North Andover, Mass., goes out every Sunday morning and gathers his Sunday school pupils within a radius of seven miles.

Too Much Gas—Couldn't Work

Had to Quit Many Jobs Account Pain in Side

"After taking the second dose of Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) the pain in my side has gone. The heavy feeling (gas) in my bowels is entirely gone and I go to bed and get a good night's sleep now. Can do almost any kind of work now." (Signed) J. C. Tuttle.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physicain.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on acount of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

INDIANAPOLIS TO HAVE DRAMATIC COMPANY

Mayor Lew Shank, Himself Former Vaudeville Star, to Make Experiment.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 25.—A unique theatrical experiment will be given a trial during the coming summer when the city of Indianapolis, through the recreation department of its Board of Park Commissioners, will launch its own professional dramatic repertory company to play five nights of each week in the city's parks, presenting standard plays free to the public.

The idea originated with Lew Shank, Mayor of Indianapolis, himself a former vaudeville star. After a lapse of eight years, during a portion of which time he toured the vaudeville circuits as a monologist, he has again taken the Mayor's chair.

"East Lynne" Gives Idea.

His inspiration to have a dramatic repertory company composed wholly of professionals came after he had witnessed the performance of a tent dramatic company in a small town in Indiana late last summer. The bill was "East Lynne" and the Mayor was so impressed with the enthusiastic way in which the audience followed the trials and tribulations of poor Lady Isabel that it occurred to him when the proposition of recreation features came up for consideration that a similar company would be a good thing in the Indianapolis parks.

His plan was approved by the Board of Park Commissioners, and it was decided rather than have the show under a tent, which would necessarily limit the size of the audience, to build enclosed stages in five of the city's largest parks, permitting the audience to sit out in the open. The stages are now in course of construction and will be ready for the company to open its season the first week in June.

These stages will be complete in every detail and fully equipped for the presentation of entire scenic productions from fly loft to switchboard with all the latest devices for effective stage lighting and comfortable dressing rooms for the members of the company.

The organization, which will be known as the Indianapolis Municipal Players, will be directed by Mr. and Mrs. G. Carleton Guy, professionals of many years' experience. They have already taken up their duties as assistants in the department of recreation.

The Indianapolis Municipal Players will consist of a permanent organization of 10. "Extras" will be drawn upon as required in casting the various plays. Though no restrictions will be imposed, it is planned to present throughout the summer the successful plays of such Indiana authors as Booth Tarkington, George Ade, Meredith Nicholson and others.

A sprinkling of old-time favorites such as Sol Smith Russell's "A Poor Relation," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Human Hearts," "At Piney Ridge," "Blue Jeans" and "Charlie's Aunt" will be in the company's repertoire.

Week for Hoosier Plays.

One week of the season will be devoted to the production of a play by some unknown Hoosier author, the lucky playwright to be determined through a contest which will be open to any and everybody living within the boundaries of Indiana.

A new production will be staged each week and performances will be given every night in the week except Saturday and Sunday, the company moving on to another park every day. The scenery, properties and effects will be transported by city trucks in charge of a special crew of trained stage mechanics. In this way it is estimated that at least 100,000 persons will have an opportunity to witness each new bill.

The company's season will consist of 12 weeks, and it is estimated that the venture will cost the city about $25,000, aside from the cost of the construction of the stages.

IRELAND AND THE MAKING OF BRITAIN, by Benedict Fitzpatrick. Brings together for the first time, from obscure Gaelic and Latin documents, the records of Ireland's glorious part in keeping art and learning alive in Europe after the break up of the Roman Empire.

CORRECT AUCTION, by E. V. Shepard. The author is a recognized authority on bridge; he reveals what crack players really do and bares the fallacies of many current customs. Rules for bidding, leading and playing all hands are definitely and clearly given.

OLIVER CROMWELL, by John Drinkwater. The story of Oliver Cromwell's rise from small farmer and village leader to Lord High Protector of Great Britain is presented in this play. "Oliver Cromwell" is equally as well done as the author's other two plays, "Abraham Lincoln" and "Mary Stuart."

IN THE PRISON CAMPS OF GERMANY, by Conrad Hoffman. The story is told by an American who, from August, 1915, to June, 1919, devoted his whole time to the welfare of the British, French and Americans in German prison camps.

FOUR PLAYS FOR DANCERS, by William Butler Yeats. Contents: At the Hawk's Well, The Only Jealousy of Emer, The Dreaming of the Bones, Calvary. Contains critical notes, illustrations and suggested musical settings which will be of great help to the producer.

The Remarkable New JORDAN at Astounding New Price

(Another $300 to $400 Reduction)

A big demand created by public recognition of real value. A purchasing power based upon financial stability. Capacity production ahead of the spring selling season. These have made possible another startling price reduction on the fascinating new Jordan. Quality improved—of course—for that is the Jordan policy.

QUICK public appreciation of real value is an amazing thing. Yet most natural.

Its instant expression is almost magic. Quality at a price always brings immediate demand.

That has again been proved by the record-breaking sales of this fascinating new Jordan.

Jordan reached capacity production in January, February and March—months ahead of the spring selling season.

Overheads have gone down — new prices are possible.

Purchasing power, due to strong financial position made it possible to buy at the lowest point of the recent low market.

Jordan quality at Jordan prices has established the future standard of motor car value.

Jordan knows that we are happily going back to the old fashioned, sincere way of doing business.

The American people have reached the point where they demand that every piece of merchandise be a better piece of merchandise, with a fairer price ticket on it.

And that is the essence of the Jordan policy.

Consider the astounding price of $1795 on a car of Jordan quality.

Compare every detail of the Jordan with any car selling within $1000 of its price. Demand Jordan value. Look for these features. Note these points of quality:

—Exclusive new motor
—Silhouette bodies ahead of the times
—Light weight and perfect road balance
—National economy average 24.1 miles per gallon
—Tire mileage 18,000 to 20,000 miles
—Owners boast of low repair cost
—High second-hand valuation
—Non-rattling lubricated spring shackles —Spring leaves all Chrome Vanadium steel
—All instruments under glass

GLOBE-WERNICKE ACQUIRES BUILDING HERE FOR QUARTERS

A. C. Yeiser of Cincinnati Acquires Six-Story Structure at Fourth and Locust Streets, Northeast Corner, at Price of $160,000.

PURCHASE IS MADE FROM LUCAS HEIRS

St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank Purchases Property to Be Vacated by Cincinnati Concern, as Part of Site for New Home.

By Berry Moore.

The closing feature of the week in realty circles was the purchase by H. C. Yeiser, president of the Globe-Wernicke Company, of Cincinnati, of the 6-story building and site at the northeast corner of Fourth and Locust streets from the Lucas Realty Co., holding corporation, composed of Lucas heirs, for $160,000. The site has a frontage on Fourth street of 76 feet by a depth on Locust of 124 feet.

The building is to be occupied by the Globe-Wernicke Company, whose present St. Louis building and site at 406 and 408 North Broadway, held by the Athlone Realty Company, a holding corporation of the John J. O'Fallon estate, had on Friday been purchased in order to extend the Broadway frontage of the building to be erected at the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust street for the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank. The price, $250,000, includes the bonus paid for the Globe-Wernicke Company's lease.

Both transactions were brought about by the Mercantile Trust Co. through C. H. McMillan, vice president, in conjunction with Charles P. O'Fallon, representing the O'Fallon estate. Thomas G. Rutledge represented the O'Fallon and Lucas estates in this connection as attorney. Yeiser lives in Cincinnati and came to St. Louis to inspect the Fourth street building and to execute the contract of purchase.

"I have been coming to St. Louis for many years," said Yeiser, "and I believe the city has a great future as a manufacturing, industrial and distributing center. I have faith in St. Louis and faith in our own business here. When an opportunity was presented to me to acquire a location nicely suited to our requirements I was glad to buy it for a permanent home and to become more identified with St. Louis as property owner and taxpayer. Considerable money is to be expended in fitting and equipping the Fourth street building, both as to present and future requirements."

E. C. Philips, local manager of the Globe-Wernicke company, stated that the concern would occupy a part of the building within the next 90 days and additoinal space as leases expired.

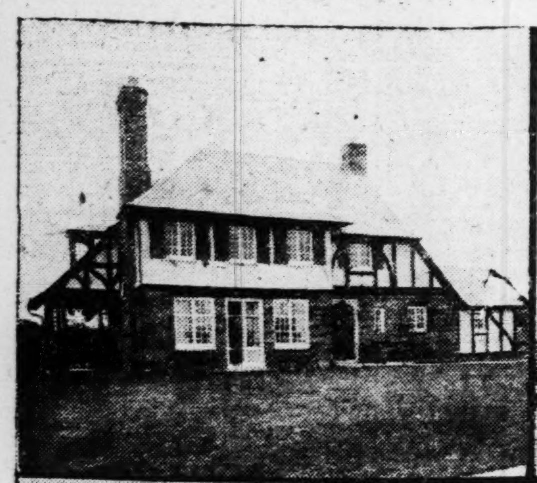
The Fourth street site is opposite the east front of the proposed Federal Reserve Building and diagonally opposite the State National Bank on the ground floor of the Security Building, and is a landmark in the financial district. It had been owned by the Lucas family since its original transfer by the United States, and formed a part of the original Lucas grant, which embraced the larger part of the present business district. The lot at 406 and 408 North Broadway, now occupied by the Globe-Wernicke company and purchased by the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank, is 51 by 127 feet. It adjoins the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust street, which was acquired a year ago, together with the northwest corner of Fourth and Locust streets, formerly the site of the building of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., as a site for the proposed building of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank.

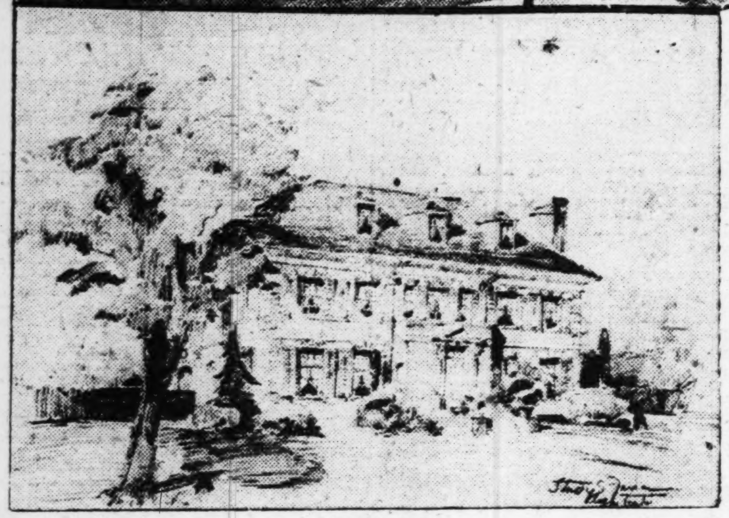
The corner previously acquired had a frontage of only 65 feet on Broadway, which, owing to a greater frontage on Fourth street, necessitated an irregular-shaped building that did not adapt itself to satisfactory architectural plans. The enlarged site has 116 feet on Broadway by a depth extending through to Fourth street of 269 feet.

David C. Biggs, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, said: "Our board voted to buy the O'Fallon property. The purchase of that plat of land enables us to erect a more practical and satisfactory building. By obtaining this greater ground area we shall be able to reduce the building from 8 to 5 stories, which is considered a more appropriate height for a banking house and will reduce greatly the cost of construction. Our object is to have a building that will amply meet our present and future requirements and be of such dignified and pleasing architecture as will be creditable to St. Louis and to the Federal Reserve System, but all extravagance is to be avoided."

The architects of the building are Mauran, Russell & Crowell. Plans are being drawn, but work will not begin until the order is given by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington.

PROPERTIES THAT CHANGED HANDS IN LAST WEEK





SALES of residences were a notable feature of the week, those of West End houses predominating. Residential construction in the West End is also a feature.

Raymond Maritz of the firm of Maritz & Young, architects, has just completed and occupied a house in Maryland Terrace, which is attracting unusual attention. It is shown in the upper left-hand corner.

This residence in the Norman style of architecture, characteristic of Normandy in France, is situated on 100 foot lot by a depth of 220 feet, with the first story in tapestry brick and the second story in one-half timber and stucco with variegated slate roof. The building is arranged with a large living room, huge stone fireplace, timbered ceilings and rough cast plaster wall. An arcade separates the living room and sunroom. The dining room is carried out in gray paneling, with cork tile floor in dining room and kitchen.

Within a short time the planting and landscaping, which is being done will be completed, making this beautiful and picturesque residence, even more attractive.

F. W. Flynn, through the Hewson Realty Co., has purchased 24 Aberdeen place, in Hillcrest, from F. W. Sonnemann. The house, which was built about two years ago, has 10 rooms, and is modern in every detail. Mr. and Mrs. Flynn will take possession in about 30 days. The Hewson Realty Co. represented Sonnemann, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. represented the purchaser. The price paid was approximately $25,000. The house is shown in the upper right-hand corner.

The new residence of W. J. Jenkins, president of the Consolidated Coal Co. is at 6250 Westminster place. It is designed in the colonial style of architecture and is a close study of the house of the secretary to William Penn, built in 1720 in Philadelphia. It is shown in the lower picture.

This residence was designed by Study & Farrar, architects, who have carried out in every detail all the old colonial traditions, both in the exterior and interior, including the stairs, fireplaces, paneling in all rooms, etc. The house contains a large entrance hall, living room, dining room, breakfast room, sunroom, kitchen, etc., on the first floor, with four bedrooms, bath and sleeping porch on the second floor. A unique feature of this house is the "all-tile" kitchen; walls and ceiling are covered with tile of a soft, gray color. The residence will be one of the exceptional examples of colonial architecture in the city.

MISSOURI CAR CO. BUYS SITE FOR PLANT IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Concern Will Build Shop Which Eventually Will Offer Employment for 500 Workers—Tract on McCausland Av. Between 22d and 24th Streets.

The Missouri Car Co. of St. Louis recently bought, through the Clark Realty Co. of East St. Louis, a 10-acre tract extending from Twenty-second street to Twenty-fourth street on McCausland avenue, East St. Louis. The company will manufacture their patented nonrollicking street car trucks and all-steel electric railway cars and trucks for high-speed interurban and city street railway service. Bus and commercial auto bodies also will be made to specification.

The company decided on this location after visiting many parts of this and adjoining states because of its shipping facilities and the comparatively short distance from the base of supplies. Steel sheets and structural shapes of various weights and sections will be used by the company, also steel and malleable castings.

It is the intention of the company to build a large fireproof building, which will be used as an erecting and paint shop. Approximately 200 skilled workmen will be employed and the number will be increased to about 500.

The company is incorporated under the State laws of Missouri for $500,000, having been incorporated Sept. 9, 1920. The officers of the company are Edward S. Stebbins, president, and Theodore A. Brewster, vice president and chief engineer. Stebbins is a well-known St. Louis business man in industrial circles. Brewster for moret han 20 years has been identified with the largest manufacturers of electric railway cars and trucks in the United States.

The property was formerly owned by Armour interests and is now occupied by the Cotton Oil Co., manufacturers of cottonseed oil, and which will continue in possession of it until June 1, when the Missouri Car Co. will occupy it.

EXCHANGE IS EFFECTED BY FEDERER-ARENDES CO.

The Federer-Arendes Realty Co. has effected an exchange of the building at the southeast corner of Newstead avenue and Olive street for Sam Koplar to Ben G. Brinkman of the Lincoln Housing Association. The building comprises six stores and 25 apartments, all under lease. The site has a frontage of 134 feet on the south side of Olive street and a frontage of 155 feet on the east side of Newstead avenue. The southern part of the building is operated as a family apartment.

Brinkman has given as part payment his home at 3641 Flora boulevard, a 10-room modern residence, and 20 acres of land in St. Louis County, near "White House."

Brinkman has bought the property on Olive street and Newstead avenue for an investment.

LIVING PROPERTY SALES MADE BY WEBSTER GROVES TRUST CO.

Morgan E. Cogeshall, real estate officer of the Webster Groves Trust Co., reports an active week in their district. They have sold the home of W. L. M. Clark at 633 Fairview avenue to Oliver Blackinton, an attorney. Also sold the new 6-room Dutch colonial frame being erected at 110 South Gore avenue, for a client to Dr. A. C. J. M. FRANCISCUS MADE PRUDENTIAL LOAN AGENT HERE

President of Realty Company Appointed to Succeed Late Charles H. Turner as Correspondent for Insurance Company.

UNLIMITED SUPPLY OF CAPITAL ON HAND

Amounts of From $2000 to $8000 Are Available on Residence Property—Added Realty Activity Expected.

James M. Franciscus, president of the Franciscus & Kunz Realty Co., has been made real estate loan correspondent for the Prudential Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J., one of the largest lenders on city real estate and farm lands in the United States.

In the appointment of Franciscus, the Prudential contemplates lending money on residence property in St. Louis, in amounts ranging from $2000 to $8000 on straight loans running from two to five years. An unlimited supply of capital will be available for this purpose at current rates of interest. Loans which may be repaid on the installment plan also will be made by the company on residences. Borrowers will have the option of an amortized loan.

Succeeds C. H. Turner.

While the Prudential always has been a large lender on farm land, it only recently began advancing money on city residence property. It has constituted real estate loan correspondents in 60 cities, among which St. Louis is included. The late Charles H. Turner acted as real estate loan correspondent in St. Louis for the Prudential, but since his death it has had no authorized loan agent in this city. Thus the appointment is regarded as more or less of a tribute to Franciscus.

Franciscus is a director of the American Trust Co., vice president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., vice president of the National Real Estate Board, and served as City Treasurer under Mayor Wells.

Added Activity Expected.

According to statistics, real estate mortgage loans have doubled in the last 10 years, increasing from $1,228,000,000 to $2,468,000,000. In comparison, investments in railroad securities have increased from $1,383,000,000 to $1,793,000,000.

With this supply of capital for real estate loans open to St. Louis borrowers, new opportunities in real estate ventures will be offered, and an expansion of such business is to be expected.

Schools, churches and stores within two blocks. Take Kirkwood-Ferguson line. If driving, go Natural Bridge Road.

This tract is opened this Sunday for the first time, and as soon as improvements are under way the demand for lots in this surpassingly choice location will undoubtedly exceed the supply.

Do not delay. Come out this Sunday and select your lot. The price is low and the terms are easy. Money, too, to build a home. It is an opportunity none should pass.

VIVISECTION

Is the greatest crime of modern times, being somewhat akin to the burning of witches in the middle ages. Not a single discovery has been made through vivisection that has been of the slightest benefit to man, nor saved the life of a single human being. Vivisection is useless, unscientific and the acme of immorality to torture one creature for the imaginary benefit of another. It is ridiculous to talk of "painless" vivisection, since there is no such a thing. Not only is it extremely cruel and painful, but makes the vivisectors is a menace to society. For free literature on the subject, send your name and address to the New York Anti-Vivisection Society, 456 Fourth av., New York City. In the meantime, keep dogs off the streets and drown the surplus puppies.

Tariff on Meats Readjusted.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Tariff rates on meats and other farm products were readjusted today by Senate Finance Committee Republicans with slight increases in many instances. The revision of the duties previously agreed upon tentatively was at the request of leaders of the Republican agricultural tariff bloc. The question of a tariff on vegetable oils was not definitely settled. A rate of 25 per cent ad valorem on hatter plush was agreed upon.

Conkey's

The Original Buttermilk Starting Feed

From 48 hours to 8 weeks old—that's when your chicks must have Conkey's—if you expect them to live and thrive. It is an appetizing combination of pure, sweet grain and concentrated sanitary Buttermilk, scientifically proportioned and combined by a special Conkey process.

SEMI-SOLID BUTTERMILK

Conkey's is different—it is the only Buttermilk Starting Feed made according to the Original and successful Conkey process. We use Semi-Liquid Buttermilk only.

Any feed that is sold for both starting chicks and growing them beyond the first eight weeks is unscientific and unsafe.

Ask your dealer or write us where it can be secured. Always get it in the Original Package. Big Poultry Book Free. (35)

'Devil Anse' in Stone to Gaze Over Feud-Swept Hills

Statue of Anderson Hatfield, Last of Kentucky's Clan Chieftains, Soon Will Be Placed on Mountain Crest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., March 25.—On the crest of a mountain ridge which divides the waters of the Big Sandy and Guyandotte rivers, overlooking the territory where he so long ruled as a feud chieftain, soon will be placed a marble statue of Capt. Anderson Hatfield, the "Devil Anse" of feud fame who died peacefully at his home in Logan County last January at the age of 84.

The statue, which was sculptured by an Italian artist at Cararra, Italy will stand as a sentinel over the mountain ranges where Hatfield gained supremacy when he led his clan through the long-drawn struggle which resulted in the practical extinction of the McCoy family. The figure is mounted on a marble base which bears the simple inscription: "Captain Anderson Hatfield, 1838-1921; Levicy Chafin, his wife, 1842 ——."

"Devil Anse" was the last of the mountain feudal chiefs. Gone are the McCoys, the Hargises, the Jetts and the other noted clan leaders of Eastern Kentucky. The head of the Hatfield clan was dubbed "Devil Anse" by his enemies who sought by terms of opprobrium to accomplish what their bullets could not do. He carried to his grave the appellation, but in later years the term born in the heat of feudal battle became one of affection.

More than 30 years passed between the ending of the feud and the death of Anderson Hatfield and whatever the merits of that bloody struggle may have been "Devil Anse" in his later years was known as an honest, law-abiding citizen beloved by the entire countryside.

ARMS CORPORATION TAX SAID TO BE SETTLED

Government's Claim Against Marlin-Rockwell Concern Reported Adjusted for $800,000.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The Marlin-Rockwell Corporation, charged by the Government with failure to correctly report earnings of the company in connection with income tax, was reported today to have affected a settlement for approximately $800,000. The Government's claim was for several millions of dollars.

Officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau late today declined to affirm or deny that a settlement had been effected and insisted that any information concerning income and excess profits taxes, when in dispute, must come from the individual or corporation concerned.

Charges against the Marlin-Rockwell Corporation, one of the biggest arms manufacturers in the country, have been pending for over a year. Unofficial information obtainable today placed the claim from the Government at about $8,000,000, though it is believed that not more than $5,000,000 was involved.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair declined to discuss the case, as did former Commissioner Daniel W. Roper, who resigned from the Government service to become president of the corporation, but later resigned that office to enter business in Washington.

13 BODIES RECOVERED FROM WRECKED COLORADO MINE

Four Other Men Caught by Explosion Have Not Been Found.

By the Associated Press.

TRINIDAD, Colo., March 25.—The Sopris No. 2 Mine of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., which was wrecked by an explosion of undetermined origin Friday afternoon, has yielded up the bodies of 13 of 17 victims. Rescue crews expressed the hope that all bodies would be located and brought out by morning.

It has been a day of anxiety for the people of the little mining town, many of whom at different times have taken up vigil near the entrance of the mine to await the recovery of more bodies. The slope has been cleared of bodies, and the remaining bodies are thought to be in the rooms where the victims were working when the blast caught them.

The first of the funerals of the disaster victims will be held tomorrow from a local undertaking chapel for Francisco Amateis, Felix Maglia, Antonio Bertetto, Ordelon Serrano and Miguel Candillo. American Legion posts are arranging a military funeral for the three ex-service men among the dead, Pete Deldosso, son of the superintendent, John Deldosso; Pete Savio and Joe Marie.

REORGANIZATION OF NAVAL RESERVE PROVIDED IN BILL

Three Classes Proposed in Measure Drafted by the Navy Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Reorganization of the naval reserve is proposed in a bill drafted by the Navy Department and submitted today by Secretary Denby to Speaker Gillett for introduction in the House with the comment that enactment of the measure "will create a naval reserve organization on sound enduring lines and will provide the vitally important reserves so necessary to supplement the regular navy."

The bill provides for organization of a naval reserve into three classes—one to be the fleet reserve providing men for combatant ships and aviation, the second a merchant marine reserve providing for a war fleet of naval auxiliaries, and a third a volunteer reserve, the personnel of which, as a result of civilian occupations, would be especially fitted for naval service in time of war.

Mrs. Tremaine admitted, however, that her husband recently had become despondent because of his small income.

A READER.—Cover the ham with cold water, and simmer gently just long enough to loosen the skin, so that it can be pulled off. This will probably take from 2 to 3 hours, according to the size of the ham. When skinned, put in a dripping pan in the oven, pour over it a teacup of vinegar and one of hot water, in which dissolve a teaspoonful of English mustard. Bake slowly basting with the liquid for 2 hours. Then cover the ham all over to the depth of 1 inch with coarse brown sugar, press it down firmly, and do not baste again until the sugar has formed a thick crust, which it will soon do in a very slow oven. Let it remain a full hour, after covering with the sugar, until it becomes a rich golden brown. When done, drain from the liquor in the pan and put on a dish to cool. When it is cool, but not cold, press by turning another flat dish on top of the ham placing weight on this dish. The pressing makes it firm so the ham can be easily sliced.

Listen to these prices: A 1919 Velie 6 touring for $550; a Chalmers 6 for $550; a Buick 6 for $525; any one of these cars ought to bring $800, but you know us, we're the boys that move 'em fast and sell 'em cheap. Yahlem Is Drunk

But he is only loaded with used-car bargains; other dealers think we are crazy when we offer cars at such ridiculous prices, but we want to sell 1000 used cars this year and we know what it takes to sell 'em; price, that's all; just think of this: A beautiful Buick 6 coupe, rebuilt and refinished with new tires for $690; can you imagine a 1920 Ford coupe with regular Ford starter for $285? I'll bet there'll be 100 people after that "Ford"; first one gets it today.

YAHLEM leads them all for low prices.

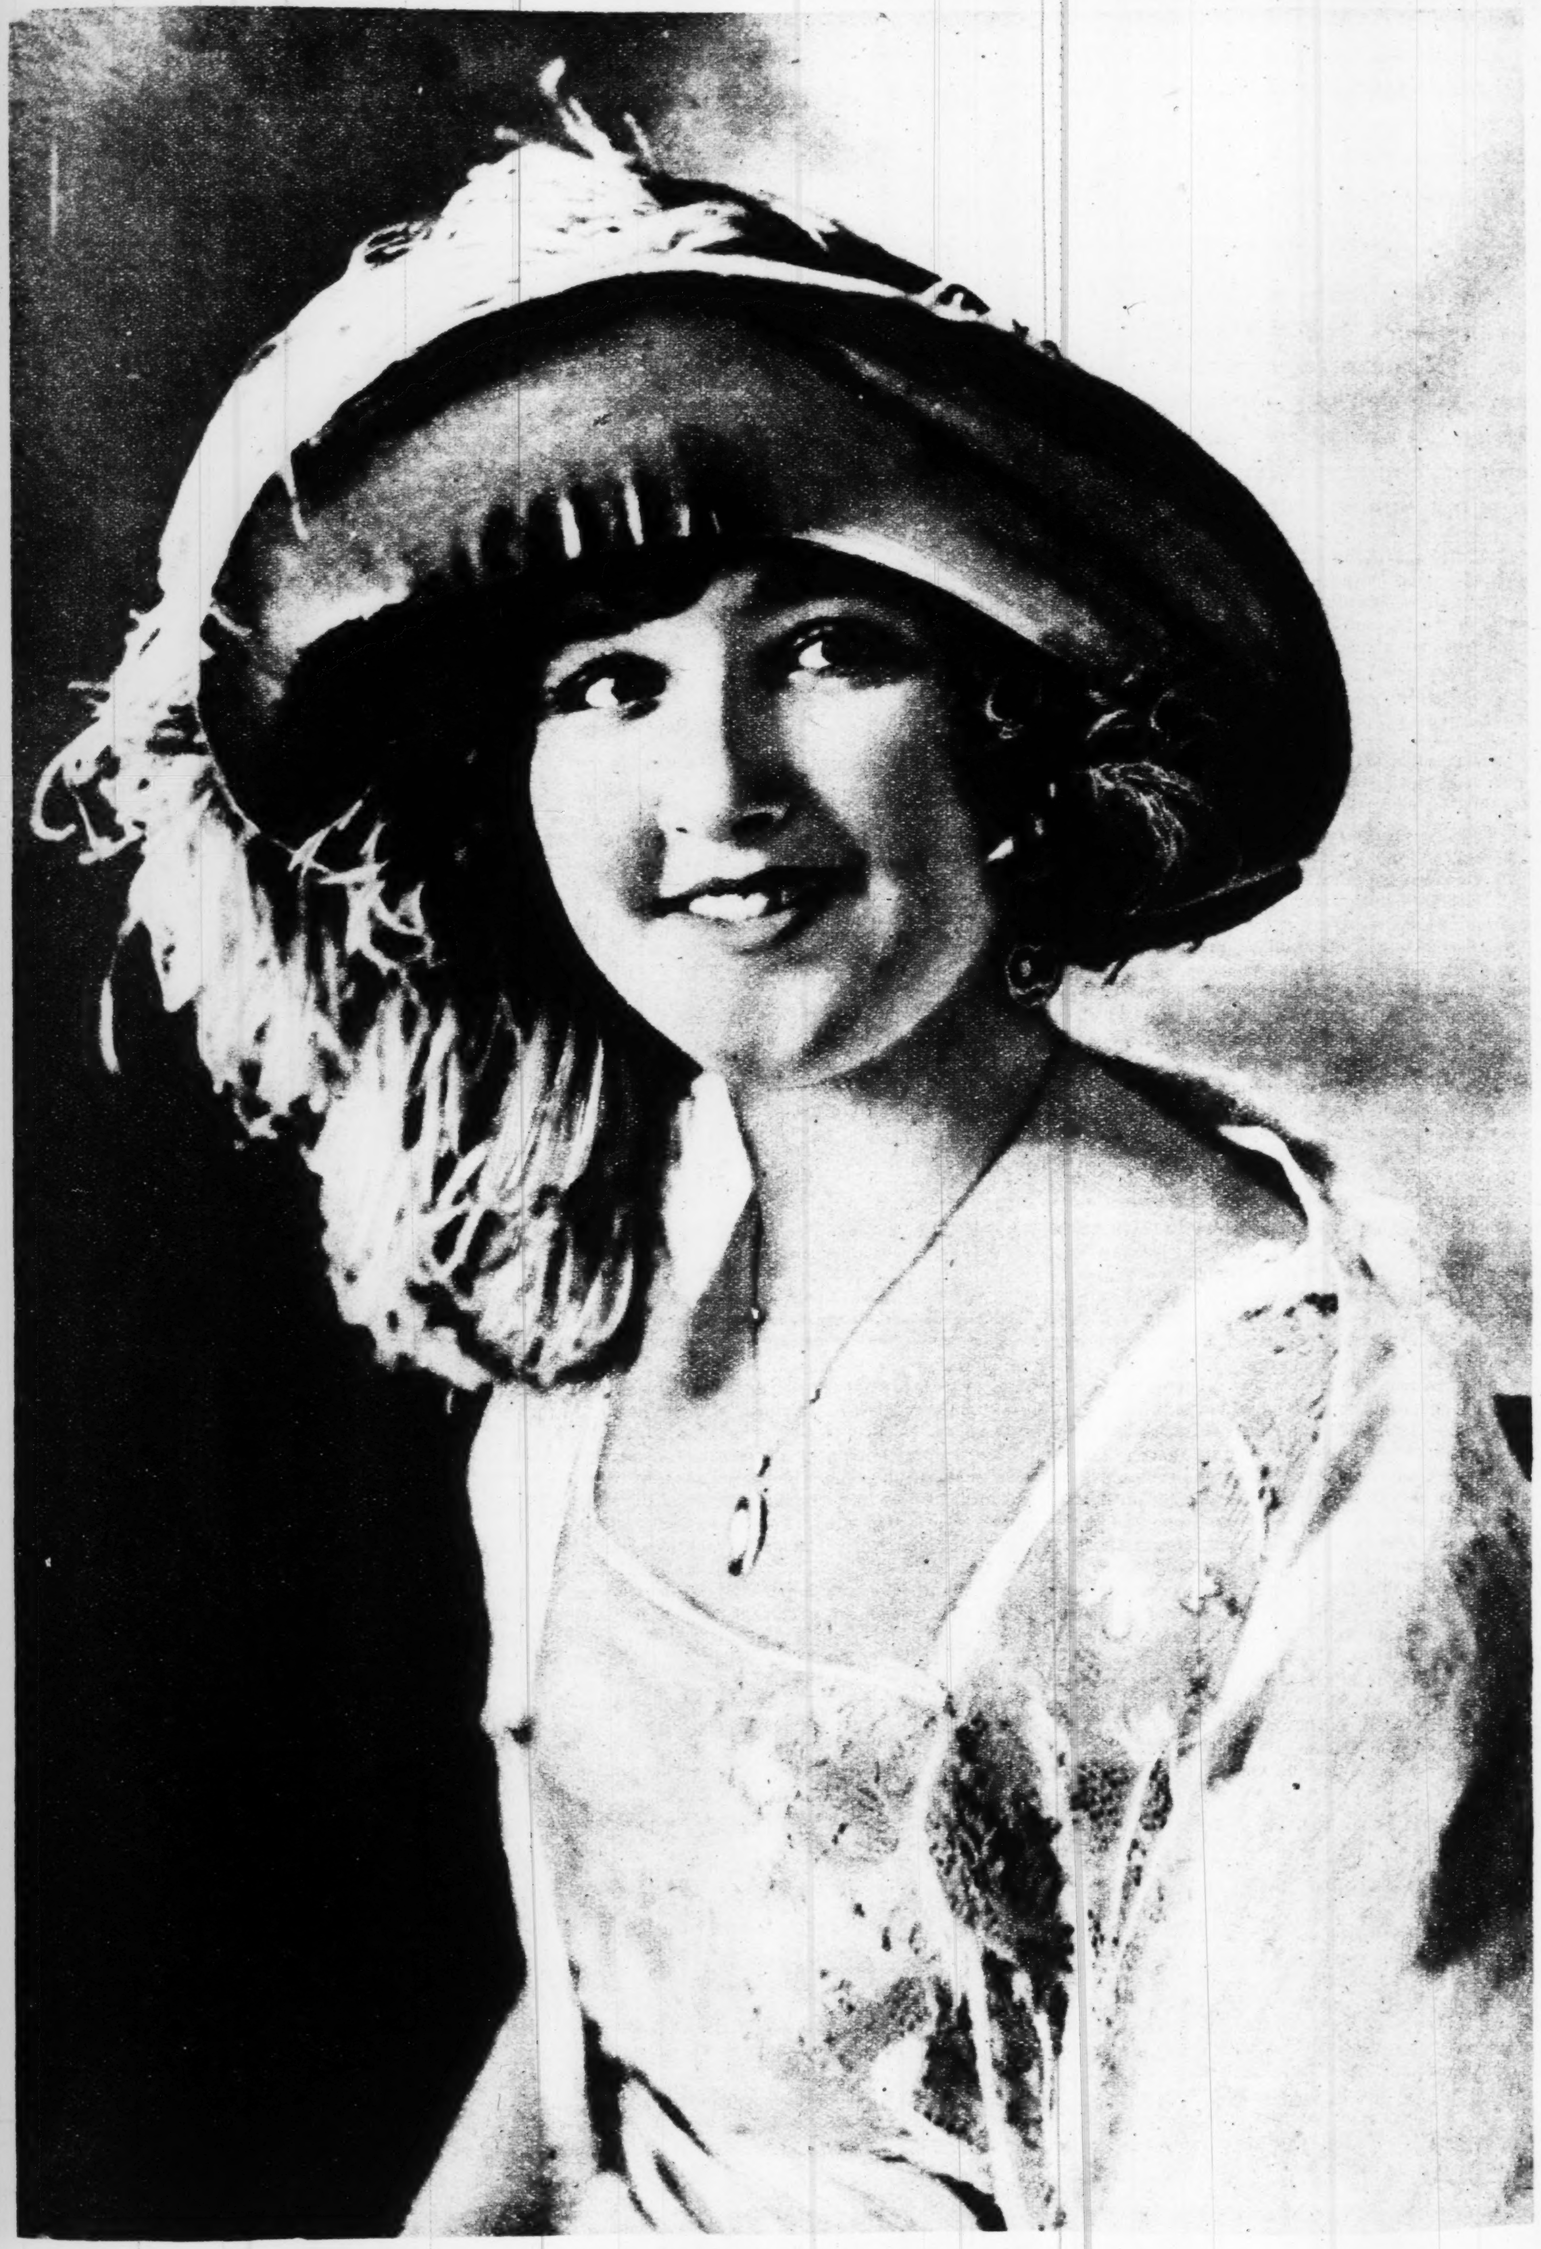
ST. LOUIS, MO., MARCH 26, 1922.



CUBA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL

She is Senorita Raguel Mestre, acclaimed as the prettiest and most popular woman at the great Charity Ball in Havana, the biggest event in the island's social season. Besides being the possessor of naturally charming features, she is an heiress, the daughter of Don Dominguez Mestre, one of the oldest and wealthiest landowners in the community, and she is to be married to Manuel Alvarez, the richest man in Cuba, very well known in Latin-American diplomatic circles.

SO THAT CHILDREN WILL NOT GROW UP TO BE SNOBS

Reaction from flappers and spendthrift sons leads to realization that conduct of children depends on home training—Root of all evil in misdirected education of rich children is snobbery — How St. Louis mothers and fathers teach lesson that character is better than money — Wealthy manufacturer hopes son in college will be as good a man as employe who started as sewing machine operator :: ::

OUT of all of the after-the-war discussion of the flapper, the spendthrift son and the hundred-and-one manifestations of youthful recklessness and daring in flouting the hitherto accepted conventions of dress and deportment—a world-wide discussion—the realization is coming to close observers that even while these strange goings-on are being talked about and exploited they are at the same timd showing signs that their force is almost spent and that they will soon perish from the earth like the butterfly of a day.

Many able thinkers see reform already in full swing because of a growing realization by parents that the conduct of children depends on their training in the home and that the weird manifestations which have brought thunderbolts of wrath about the heads of the jazz-dancing flapper and her dancing partner the world over have been the direct result of the relaxing of wholesome home training methods which, like many good old customs, went into the discard during the frenzied and feverish war period.

At the bottom of the idea which is thus so rapidly crystallizing lies a newly quickened feeling on the part of wealthy parents that, after all, the root of all evil in the misdirection and misconduct of youth is snobbery.

A snob, says the dictionary, is one who regards wealth or position as being superior to character.

There has been a great deal of snobbery in the hectic period following the war. Many indulgent parents who made money so fast it fairly took their breath away were too busy or self-centered to restrain their children from making a snobbish display of the family wealth.

That was all very well for a time, but as soon as the new rich began rubbing elbows with the old rich they ran up against a fact which staggered them. They learned that snobbery isn't fashionable—that "it isn't being done." They found that behind all of the frivolity of what they called "society" there was a powerful force of conservatism which had never for a moment lost sight of the vital principle that morals and manners are made or marred in the home and that children who are reared to regard character as being superior to wealth or position will never go far wrong.

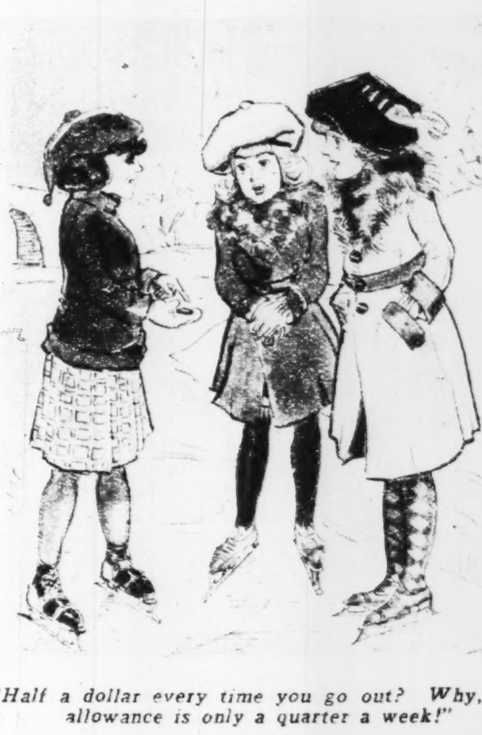
At a gathering of St. Louis women a recent arrival in the ranks of the wealthy rather flauntingly remarked: "My children go where they please and do what they like. Why not? Their father is rich now."

Another guest, a quiet, unostentatious little woman, who sat nearby, could not refrain from retorting: "I would like to see my children attempt to go where they pleased and do what they liked. They know better than to ask for such liberty."

This did not make much of an impression on the first speaker at the time, but it took on tremendous importance later when she learned that the quiet little woman had a fortune much greater than her own. The taint of snobbery in her own nature set the first woman to thinking and to inquiring into the methods of home training used by parents of established wealth and assured social station. She learned many things, with the probable net result that her children probably will be greatly benefited by her knowledge.

A woman visitor, calling on the wife of a very rich man in the West End recently, was surprised when the two little girls of the family came trooping in from school and their mother called to them: "Take off your school dress and put on your old clothes." This sounded queer to the visitor, not a woman of wealth, who had a vague idea that rich folks had so much money they could afford to wear the best of clothing at all times. She was further astounded when the rich mother of the two little girls said: "For everyday wear my little girls have only two dresses each—one for school and one for play. That is all they absolutely need. I do not want them to have the consciousness of wealth. I am in constant dread lest they should learn that their father is rich."

The dread mentioned by this wife of a wealthy man exists in many families in St. Louis and other large cities. It has been made the fundamental of a system of home training. Of course, all the parents who use this system realize that the fact of wealth cannot be concealed from children except in their earlier and formative years. The effort is made to so train the children in that early period that when the time comes for them to grasp the fact of wealth they will have been so trained that character and not wealth will stand first in their regard. In other words, they will not be snobs.



"Half a dollar every time you go out? Why, our allowance is only a quarter a week!"

It was John Locke, in his treatise on education, who said that children should never be permitted to have anything solely for the gratification of their wishes unless there was sound reason to back up the desire.

Most emphatically the exponents of proper training of children in the home at the present time are making it clear that the argument, "father is rich," is not a reasonable cause for granting the whimsical demands of children.

Mrs. Frank C. Rand, wife of the president of the International Shoe Co., is one St. Louis woman of wealth who is trying her best to prevent the ugly head of snobbery from rising to interfere with the careful training of her interesting family of four boys and two girls.

"It is difficult to conceal from children beyond a certain age the fact that the family has means," said Mrs. Rand, "but it is possible to train the children so that they will know the difference between reasonable and unreasonable use of money and to teach them that the mere possession of money does not carry distinction with it, but rather increases the responsibility of the individual whose character is far more important than his possessions.

"This is the greatest lesson that is to be taught to children. They must learn to judge other children not by the wealth of their parents but by their individual evidences of character. As to lavish expenditure of money on children, simply because the money is at hand, I think that is a big mistake. The reasonable needs of all children are about the same. When these reasonable needs are filled any further expenditure is superfluous and injures the character of the child."

Mrs. Rand made it clear that she was willing to express her views to this limited extent not because they were original with her, but she believed they represented the general trend of thought in many families of means, here and elsewhere.

In many homes of wealth and refinement the children who are being reared in accordance with the modern idea of home training have less spending money than the children of many parents of moderate financial standing.

This idea of keeping the expenditures of children down to the mere essentials is being carried out in some of the best preparatory schools in all parts of the country. There are several such schools attended by the sons and daughters of millionaires—even multimillionaires—which specifically state in their prospectuses that during the school term parents will not be permitted to send spending money to the pupils.

Thus it will be seen that the "poor boy" who envies the "rich boy" who is receiving a boarding school education shoots over the mark when he pictures the pupil as having nothing to do but spend his father's money after class hours. When the rich man's son comes home from school for his vacation a silver dollar looks as big as a cartwheel to him if he has been educated along the modern "antisnobbery" lines.

There is a St. Louis youth of 18 who has an allowance from his millionaire father to cover his legitimate expenses while at school. Another youth of about the same age, whose father has much less money, and who, in consequence, spends much more, met the millionaire's son, who said: "I am going down to dad's office to get $3 from him."

"Pretty soft," was the comment of the other. "I'll go down with you and wait outside."

It was a long wait. Finally the rich man's son came out.

"Did you get it?" asked the poor man's boy.

"Yes," was the reply. "I got three dollar bills and three columns of talk on the value of money. That's not all. I've got to pay the money back out of my allowance next Saturday."

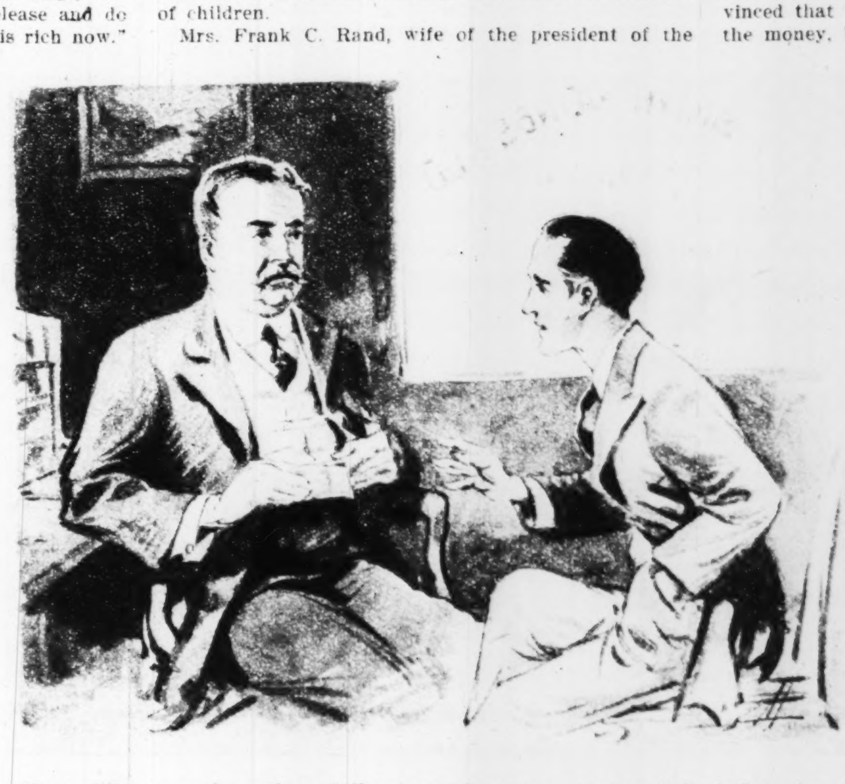
This father was not stingy. He questioned the boy closely as to what he wanted the $3 for. When convinced that there was a legitimate need he advanced the money, but his business sense told him that the demand was one which should properly be charged against the boy's regular allowance. So, he did business with the boy in a businesslike way. After having thus received the money as a loan there was little danger that the rich man's son would go out and snobbishly gloat over the poorer boy.

In this connection it is timely and interesting to recall an incident that went the rounds of the Eastern press this winter as illustrative of the present tendencies in the homes of rich men's children.

It was in Central Park, New York City, when the skating season was at its height. Fifth avenue children were democratically rubbing elbows with East Side children. While pausing for rest two young daughters of a multimillionaire whose name is a power in the financial world got into conversation with the daughter of a family of moderate means. This little girl offered to "treat" the others to candy and displayed a 50-cent piece.

The eyes of the "poor little rich girls" opened wide and one of them exclaimed:

"Mercy! A half-dollar! Does your mamma give you all that money at one time?" (Continued on page 14.)



"Sure, I'll let you have three dollars, son—but you must pay it back Saturday."

Innocent Man's Remarkable Escape From the Gallows

How unfortunate Italian laborer, unjustly accused of murder and twice condemned to be hanged, languished in prison for twelve years of agony, and was finally granted freedom through a lawyer's heroic devotion to the difficult task of seeing justice done :: ::

By PAUL GOTTLIEB.

IN THE last months of 1909 Sabatino de Masi, a lowly South-Italian laborer of Philadelphia, was convicted of murder and sentenced to die by hanging. Early in 1910 he was retried, after an appeal, and again convicted. Once more the extreme sentence was imposed and De Masi taken to the Eastern Penitentiary to await his destruction.

He quaked and faded, forespent with terror. There was nothing strange in this, for men do not face the scaffold with much equanimity, whatever romance may say. But Tino, as his few dejected friends called him, also puzzled and begged and protested. He was full of question and bafflement. There was something here he could not understand. He had killed no one. He had not even dreamed of killing. He had merely worked and sweated and tried to put by a little money. Why must he die?

The prison Warden had heard much in this strain before, but not in quite the same tone and manner. He looked sharply at Tino de Masi and wondered. Still it was not his affair. The courts decided whether a man had done murder; a Warden was there to kill when so commanded.

A killer in the same house, waiting also for his day of death, heard Tino probing and pleading and calling on the saints. He talked with this unhappy Italian and listened to his frantic weeping.

"That Wop never killed them guys," he told the chaplain. "He wouldn't shoot a rabbit."

So the impression got about that Tino might be an innocent man. It was highly unlikely, for are the courts not infallible? Yet there was not the assassin's air about this fellow. It was strange, disquieting. The prison officials did not like it. Hang it all! they knew a murderer when they saw one. So did the bloody wretches in the house of death. Well, what was to be done about it? Thank heaven the date of Tino's execution was some time off. Perhaps something would happen.

A few weeks ago, after the lapse of 12 years, Tino de Masi was released from prison. He had, indeed, not killed anyone, but he had been twice sentenced to die, he had lain long in the shadow of the gibbet and he had spent 12 years in a cell. A lucky fellow, this Tino.

The astonishing thing about all this is not, of course, that the law blundered or that an innocent man was condemned to die. These things happen often. One need have no very great perspective of memory to call back a score of cases, some of them notorious to the highest degree. The marvel is that this friendless Italian escaped, that an arresting doubt was raised in time.

Those who have or profess an undying faith in what is sometimes termed a government by law may find food for doubt in the case of Tino de Masi, and so, to use the current shibboleth, it must be told.

Late one night in September, 1909, an armed holdup man stepped into Quinn's saloon at the corner of Broad and Lycoming streets, in Philadelphia. The bartender and one drinker seemed to offer resistance and were shot dead by the intruder, who fled and was not pursued by the frightened witnesses. The slayer had been masked and no accurate description of him was given. All that the bibbers who were present could offer was that he had been medium-sized and red-headed. On this latter detail there was complete agreement. It is a point to be remembered.

The police arrested one Michael Comporto, a Sicilian, charging that he was one having knowledge of the murders, an accomplice. Comporto denied complicity in the affair, stoutly resisted the third degree and would admit nothing.

The day after the killing there came to police headquarters a complaint from an Italian boarding house. One Sabatino de Masi, a boarder in the place, had disappeared, and with him had gone some of the clothing of another boarder. The police mind, functioning along well-beaten paths, immediately connected these two affairs and set out to seek this De Masi. Two days later came a letter from the man. He had gone to New York and taken a job in Jersey City, where he was living at an address which he freely gave in the letter, asking that his mail be forwarded and promising to return soon to Philadelphia.

Sabatino de Masi, winner of a terrible struggle for freedom.

Two days later De Masi was back in Philadelphia but lodged in jail. He was charged, so he was told, with stealing clothing from his boarding house. In reality he was held as the slayer of the two men in the saloon or as an accomplice in this crime.

De Masi, under the misapprehension that he had nothing to explain but the vanishment of his fellow boarder's clothes, made a statement to the officers. He had been playing poker with this man and several others on the night before his departure (the night of the murders), and the other boarder had come out of the game owing De Masi $40. This money De Masi needed, for he was going to New York the following day to meet his wife, who was arriving on a ship from Italy. The other boarder refused to pay De Masi, and the latter, in immediate need of the money and angry at the other man's dishonesty, had seized the clothing and pawned it. He realized that he had taken the law into his own hands, but he had been forced to do so. He was not a thief. He had simply taken his debtor's property.

This statement was made before De Masi had any hint that his name had been connected with any murder case, please note. Kindly consider also, that any sensible Magistrate would have dismissed the theft charge against the man upon substantiating this story. And it was fully proved a bit later when the man whose clothing had been taken corroborated the prisoner's account.

But the police mind had associated De Masi and Comporto and the double killing in Quinn's saloon, and no doubts were permitted to seep in. Comporto and De Masi were confronted and gave not the slightest sign of recognition. A disinterested observer would probably have said that the men were strangers, but the police saw nothing of the sort. They took Comporto aside into a private room and renewed their inquisition.

"What's the use lying?" the officers spat at their quarry. "De Masi has confessed that you killed those men."

Comporto, it now appears, was incredulous at first and laughed at the officers. They, however, brandished under his nose a typewritten document, assuring him that it was a full signed and sworn statement by De Masi. Comporto could not read. He took the police at their word and flew into a rage. In his fury he made a statement or "confession" to the effect that he had not personally killed the men in Quinn's saloon, but had stood out in the street and acted as lookout for the actual robber who had done the shooting. De Masi, he said, was the slayer.

De Masi was immediately confronted with the admissions of Comporto, but he denied everything absolutely, swore that he had never known Comporto and that he had not been in Quinn's saloon. But all this availed him nothing. He was arraigned and an attorney assigned to defend him, for he had no means. As it chanced, the lawyer nominated by the Court was Charles J. Roney, then a rising criminal practitioner and apparently a man of insight and determination.

The case came to trial after very slight delay and the State presented the confession of Comporto, some supplementary statements from the same man and a mass of apparent corroboration. The fact that De Masi had taken another boarder's clothes and gone to New York the following morning had a decided effect on the jury, for the prosecution translated these facts into a theory of disguise and flight.

De Masi's defense was an elaboration of the statement he made before he knew there was a more serious charge than petty larceny against him. He produced his employer, who testified that De Masi was a good and faithful workman and that he had been at his job the day of the murder from 8 in the morning until 5 in the evening. Four Italians, with whom De Masi had played poker in his boarding house on the night of the killings, came to court and testified that the man had been in their company all evening without a single hiatus and that he could not possibly have been at Quinn's saloon at the time of the shooting.

Lawyer Roney called the jury's special attention to the fact that the slayer had, by all accounts, red hair, whereas De Masi's was black as night.

All this availed him nothing. The jury decided, after brief deliberation, that the Italian witnesses who had established the defendant's alibi were not trustworthy. They probably belonged to some secret society and would freely commit perjury for one another; or so the jurors reasoned. A verdict of guilty was speedily returned and a few days later De Masi heard the doom pronounced upon him.

Attorney Roney immediately moved for a new trial and started an appeal. The retrial was granted on a plea of error shortly afterward and De Masi was again confronted with a jury, which convicted him once more, with as little qualm as shown by the first. And so the second sentence to the noose was pronounced and De Masi was hurried off to prison to wait for his last day.

In the course of these two trials the confessor, Comporto, testified that he had known De Masi a long time and that De Masi had been guilty of other killings—a bit of mendacity that had its effect on the jury. A few years earlier there had been committed a series of unexplained murders at Towanda, Pa. It had been held that these slayings were the work of some Italian vengeance club. Comporto stated to the District Attorney and testified on the stand that De Masi had committed the Towanda crimes. Here, as developed later, the accuser outdid himself and thereby unwillingly saved De Masi's life.

Roney, convinced of the falsity of Comporto's allegations, went to the Governor of the State. He pointed out that there was evidence to show that De Masi was in Italy at the time and had never yet set foot on Western earth. This evidence was not positive. It could only be determined by a trip to Italy, for which there was no money. Roney volunteered to finance this on his own account, and the Governor, arrested by the earnestness of the young counselor, stayed the execution of De Masi long enough to permit this pilgrimage of duty and devotion.

Roney sailed, went to Rome, looked up the archives of the War Office and found that Tino de Masi had been serving

Queerest Breach of Promise Suit -- Ever Tried in Court --

London woman gets judgment for $25,000 against her former husband for failing to remarry her—Witnesses testified that he carried on second courtship after divorcing her for misconduct—She said she returned to his home and remained three months until he married an actress—Rich stockbroker denied testimony—Tried to forgive her but found it impossible—"I couldn't forget the chauffeur," he said ::

A BREACH of promise suit without a precedent in the British courts—a suit in which a woman obtained a judgment for $25,000 damages against her divorced husband for failing to remarry her—has recently been decided in London. The English newspapers agree that it is the first such case ever heard there.

The contending parties were Carl Alfred Bendix, a wealthy London stockbroker, and Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Bendix. Adding to the strangeness of the case is the fact that Bendix obtained the divorce in 1920 on the ground of his wife's misconduct with her chauffeur. There is a daughter, Doreen, 15 years old, who contributed some spirited testimony.

It was alleged by Mrs. Bendix that her husband courted her a second time, and made a proposal of marriage to her as a birthday gift. She accepted, she said, and being assured that the marriage would soon take place, returned to his house. A day or two before the date set for the wedding, he called on the telephone and announced that he did not intend to marry her at all, and a week later was wed instead to an actress. The jury awarded her £5000 damages, despite the fact that her husband was voluntarily allowing her £1100 (normally $5500) a year and paying for the daughter's education.

Bendix denied that he had ever proposed remarriage to his former wife. There was testimony of other witnesses, however, notably by the daughter and Mrs. Bendix's brother, that he had told them he intended to remarry her and this, apparently, decided the jury that there had been a genuine breach of promise.

In tracing the history of the affair, Ernest Charles, counsel for Mrs. Bendix, related that the divorce was made absolute in August, 1920. He admitted that Bendix had been extraordinarily generous toward his erring wife, permitting her to retain custody of their child and providing bountiful support for them. The post-divorce romance began in the following November, he said, when Mrs. Bendix came to London from her home at Eastbourne to discuss the daughter's education.

"They went to his rooms at the Savoy Court Hotel, where they had a pleasant conversation and Mr. Bendix said that he was sorry that all the miserable business had happened about the divorce. A little later—in December—the defendant telephoned to Mrs. Bendix at Eastbourne, and said he would like to see her. He went to the house occupied by the plaintiff. He kissed her and said to Doreen, who was there, 'Would you like me to come back, and all three be happy again?' The child said that she would.

"On Jan. 22 the defendant took his former wife and his daughter by motor car to Tunbridge Wells. On the way back they stopped at Burford Bridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Bendix went for a walk together. In the course of the walk the defendant said: 'You may get a surprise on your birthday.' Her birthday was Feb. 26. On Feb. 5 Mr. Bendix stayed for the week-end at Mrs. Bendix's house at Eastbourne, and also the following week-end, and, sure enough, on Feb. 26, the surprise came. The defendant telephoned to the plaintiff and said: 'This is my surprise for you: Will you marry me?' Mrs. Bendix was overjoyed at the idea that they should come together again. She said: 'Yes, I will marry you. May I tell the kiddie?' He replied: 'Of course you may. I should like to speak to her.' The little girl then took up the receiver and had a conversation with her father, saying how delighted they were that he was coming back to them.

"Later Mr. Bendix went to Mr. Manduell, the plaintiff's brother, who was a solicitor, and said to him: 'I have arranged to marry your sister again.' About the middle of April he said to her: 'Do you think you can fix things up in three days?' She replied: 'Yes.' But nothing came of that, although his visits continued.

"Then," said Mr. Charles, "there was an apparent cooling of affection. Appointments were made and not kept. The woman was disappointed, and he sent a wire: 'Don't worry, old thing. Things will be all right.'

"On June 27, the eve of the wedding day, he definitely postponed it, and there was a little 'hot talk' on the telephone. A few days later he rang up his former wife and said that he was sorry he was rough to her on the telephone. He asked her to come up to London on July 15 to discuss the situation. She went, and he told her that the marriage would take place soon. He added that as they had a house at Pangbourne, why should they not all three go down and live there? She considered it, and agreed, going with her daughter to Weir Pool House, Pangbourne.

The present Mrs. Carl Alfred Bendix, whom Mr. Bendix suddenly married after asking his former wife, whom he had divorced, to remarry him.

"He went down there on Aug. 2, and from then until Sept. 4 they lived together as man and wife, she always believing and trusting that he, as a man of honor, was going to remarry her. On Sept. 4 he left, as he said, to procure a special license. He did not get a license, and on Sept. 19 he suggested that she should take a service flat in London. She did so, and came up to the flat on Sept. 30.

"He saw her there, and she complained bitterly of his putting off the marriage. He made an appointment to go to dinner in September, but he did not keep his appointment. Next day his daughter rang him up on the telephone and he replied: 'I have written your mother that I have finished.'

"Finished he had," said Mr. Charles in conclusion, "for six days after that he married a young woman who was on the stage. That was on Oct. 7. Without a word of warning, like an old shoe, he threw his former wife off, without any notice or excuse, simply telephoning to the daughter that he had finished. He never wrote, because, having broken the engagement off in this brutal way, he married someone else."

Mrs. Bendix's testimony followed very closely the statement of her counsel. She then underwent a severe cross-examination at the hands of Sir Ellis Hume-Williams, her husband's solicitor, and one of the shrewdest trial lawyers in Great Britain. He drew from her a repetition of the charges upon which she was divorced, forced her to admit that misconduct throughout three years was alleged, and that she had not denied it. She was compelled to relate the details of her former husband's generosity toward her.

The next witness was Doreen, a decidedly precocious miss of 15, who made no secret of her sympathy with her mother, and the antipathy which her father's failure to remarry her mother had aroused in her own heart. She recalled the week-end visits to Eastbourne. One day her father asked her if she would like him to return, so all three could be happy together again, and she replied: "Very much." After this, she often saw him kiss her mother.

He told her, she said, that he had asked Mrs. Bendix to remarry him, and she often heard them discussing the question. Then came the installation of herself and her mother in the house at Pangbourne, and the continued postponements of the wedding over her mother's objection. Finally, the witness received a telephone call from her father. He said:

"Have you seen the evening papers?" "I have not."

"Well, I have been married today." "What!"

"Yes, I have been married. Please tell your mother that I have finished. I have written a letter explaining."

Mr. Charles: "What did you say to that?"

"I told him what I thought of him."

Sir Ellis Hume-Williams: "And was what you thought of him that he was a cad and a blackguard, and did you use precisely that language?" (Laughter.)

"I did."

John Manduell corroborated, in important particulars, the testimony of his sister and niece. He said that Bendix had spoken to him of remarrying Mrs. Bendix, and had asked him if he and Mrs. Manduell could arrange to look after Doreen while her parents were absent on the honeymoon.

Bendix on the stand contradicted all this flatly, but he was without corroborating witnesses. He said it was true that he had considered a remarriage, for their daughter's sake, but had not been able to reconcile himself to it. He declared that his daughter had testified falsely.

Replying to further questions, the witness said that his wife once said to him: "We have been married in church once, and I shall always feel that we are married. I will not feel that another ceremony is necessary, if you will buy me a ring." He was asked:

"Was it by your instructions that all the details of this woman's divorce were dragged out of her in the witness box?"

He answered: "It was not by my instructions. I was heartily sorry for her."

"What did you say to your daughter on the telephone when she said to you that you were a cad and a blackguard?" "I told her that she was upset; I told her to leave it, and that I would telephone another time."

The maid at Mrs. Bendix's house in Eastbourne testified to Bendix's visits there. A person of middle age and

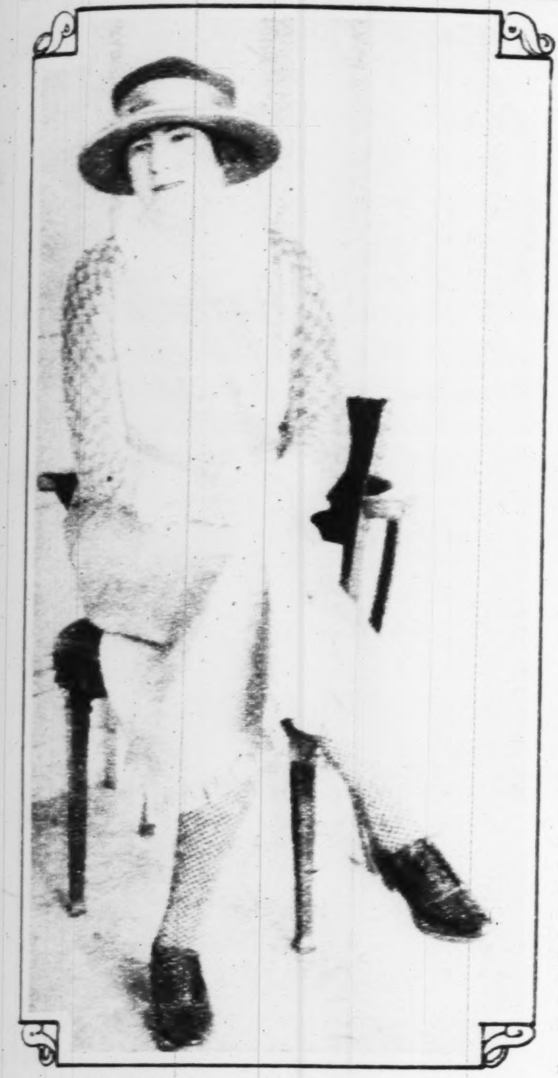
The Flapper Wins

Most Conservative Women's Club in Philadelphia Holds Jury Trial at Which Modern Girl Is Acquitted on All Counts

Prominent society matrons act as models at debate in hotel ballroom to show difference between the flapper of today and the mid-Victorian belle—Ability, charm and dress of the two eras compared — Goloshes better than ermine-trimmed boots and high skirts better than low necks—Frankness of the present age compared with hypocrisy of the crinoline and hoop skirt days



Mrs. L. F. Mulford of Philadelphia, representing the modern girl.

Mrs. Kenneth S. Lueders of Philadelphia, dressed in a bit of old-time Philadelphia.

RESOLVED, That the modern girl has greater ability, more charm and wears a better style of dress than the girl of the mid-Victorian period.

This resolution was adopted recently by the Modern Club, composed of many of the social leaders of Philadelphia. As is widely known, "society" in Philadelphia is the most exclusive and conservative to be found anywhere in the United States.

Flappers versus Victorian belles; short skirts versus hoop skirts, goloshes versus ermine-trimmed carriage boots. The breeziness of 1922 compared with the formal etiquette of 1870; the frankness of the present age, contrasted with the polite hypocrisy of 1880. All of these were weighed, estimated, appraised and assayed in the debate preceding the adoption of the resolution in America's home of ultra conservatism and the golden apple for beauty, charm, delicacy, taste and ability went to the modern girl.

Former belles of the Victorian era, and daughters of those belles, who guard sacredly the family traditions, make up the membership of the Modern Club.

The courtroom where the flapper was placed on trial was the junior ballroom of the Ritz Carlton. The presiding judge was Mrs. Harold de Lancey Downs, president of the Modern Club. The attorney for the defense was Mrs. Abbey Sutherland Brown, head of the ultra-fashionable Ogontz School for Girls in one of Philadelphia's fashionable suburbs. Mrs. James Starr Jr., president of the Colonial Dames of Pennsylvania, was the prosecuting attorney who put the flappers on the rack.

And there was a jury, quite a large one, with the Countess Santa Eulalia as its foreman, and including Mrs. H. L. Prentiss Nichols, former president of the Century Club and a noted Southern belle in Victorian days; Mrs. I. H. O'Hara and Mrs. Reed McIntire.

To save time in discussing the intricacies of the dress of the two periods, six fashionable women were selected to appear as models. In brocade crinoline, tight basques and flowing ribbons there promenaded the aisles and disclosed the charms of the Victorian girl Mrs. Pennington H. Way, Mrs. Kenneth S. Lueders and Mrs. Everitt G. Barnard.

Their modern sisters, who wore the snappiest of flapper costumes, were Mrs. Thomas Lindler, Mrs. Leslie F. Mulford and Mrs. George R. Sullivan.

The "ohs" and "ahs" that escaped from the audience at first appeared about equally divided. Nothing daunted by adverse criticism from the opposing factions, the six women serenely promenaded the aisles until the "grand tour" had been completed. Then they established themselves on the platform back of the principals in the court.

Mrs. Starr fired the first round in the contest of the old order against the new. With bated breath her listeners heard her lead off with the psychological reasons for the sudden burst of virtue that swept across the world with Queen Victoria's ascent to the throne of Great Britain, coming as it did as a sharp reaction against the period of unbridled license.

In those days, said Mrs. Starr, a superior charm held and enveloped the feminine personality. A woman was more of a woman then; there was not the fierce modern competition with the male in the business world. It was much more difficult for women at that time to carve a place for themselves in the world of the fine arts. However, with all the handicaps of the age a number of women did receive artistic recognition. And she mentioned many names that have survived to the present time.

She mentioned also the fact that women of Victoria's day took their home duties seriously, giving thought to the running of their homes, and did much more than the women of today are doing in the way of establishing large and flourishing families.

Mrs. Starr did not look at all Victorian. She wore an up-to-the-second version of prevailing styles, with monkey fur on her frock and a dashing ostrich feather on her hat, a costume in striking contrast to the hoop-skirted and becurled ladies who were supporting visually the Victorian side of the question.

Then came the cue for Mrs. Brown, a handsome woman, modishly dressed, who, however, objects most seriously to one modern sartorial note. To her high-heeled slippers are anathema for general wear. She often appears looking like she was a walking advertisement for the Rue de la Paix, except that she wears low-heeled shoes.

Mrs. Brown began her defense with a disarming maneuver. She admitted freely that the Victorian girl had all the virtues ascribed to her by Mrs. Starr, but, she added, so has the modern girl, and many more in addition—virtues unknown to the belles of yesteryears.

"The grace of limb and body, so characteristic of the modern girl," said Mrs. Brown, "are possible only because of the abolition of the unnatural, constrained, unhygienic, unbeautiful dress of the Victorian era.

"Think of the breath-cramping stays and the hour-glass charms in which your youthful forms masqueraded and say with the poet, 'O, death in life, the days that are no more.'

"The modern girl needs no defense, just understanding and consideration. I am not speaking of the mindless, uneducated by-product of our age, but of the sane, healthy, honest, sincere, self-abnegating and helpful girl. You say the modern girl has no charm. Get in front of her and watch her work it on you.

"In her strength lies her grace. Have you ever seen her play hockey and other games that require physical stamina? Think not only of her physical prowess but of her physical freedom.

"The modern girl also has the virtue of being perfectly frank with her faults and foibles, whereas the Victorian girl had them but she carefully concealed them. 'No vices' of the mid-Victorian age was part of the camouflage of the times.

"The modern girl's scorn of gossip is superb and is second only to her lack of hypocrisy," continued Mrs. Brown.

Then came the rebuttals, punctuated with flashes of wit that were rewarded with peals of laughter from the members of the Modern Club.

"You've got to take off your hat to the Victorian girl for subtle charm that can't be duplicated by superimposed education," began Mrs. Starr.

"You are quite modern," replied Mrs. Brown. "You are using slang." Then the kernel of the argument was pried into.

"The freedom and grace of body and limbs in the girl of today is a dream of art come true," stated Mrs. Brown.

"Is the modern girl," she continued, "any less modest with her revealing dress than the Victorian damsel whose

Widow Says Richard Harding Davis - Directs Rearing of Daughter -

The former Bessie McCoy is convinced that spirit of dead author is constantly present, watching over his family and taking especial care in directing the education of his child—Tells of "manifestations" which have decided her that spirit of husband is near—Davis was an outspoken critic of spiritualism

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, a fine journalist and a gallant gentleman, who has been dead for six years, is believed by his wife, Bessie McCoy Davis, to be in communication with her and with their 7-year-old daughter, Hope. She believes that he continues to direct the education of his child, and to give advice on important matters affecting the welfare of herself and the daughter.

To outsiders, and particularly to those who are skeptical of spirit "manifestations," Mrs. Davis' proofs appear pathetically flimsy. Her husband was a relentless and devastating critic of spiritualism, and once wrote a book exposing its frauds. The first thought that occurs is: "What would he say of this 'evidence'?" But, again, if it is a comfort to the widow, and apparently it is, why should others trouble to shatter the illusion—if it is an illusion?

Mrs. Davis, as is well known, was Bessie McCoy, known on the stage as "the Yama Yama Girl." She is beautiful, vivacious and was devoted to her husband. Since his death she has appeared in St. Louis on the vaudeville stage, although not from necessity, as Davis left a considerable estate.

She cites "manifestations" which, she says, convinced her that her husband was still watching over his family. Before giving these, it is necessary to explain briefly. Davis, alive, was impatient with spiritualism to such a degree that he would only permit one person to discuss it with him. This was a woman, a very close friend of the family. He was wont to say of her: "She is a fine example of self-hypnosis. She hypnotizes herself into believing her premise, and then makes deductions from the premise to support her argument."

A custom of his, while concentrating upon some thought, was to idly print large letters on any piece of paper that happened to be before him—a not uncommon habit of many men. He died suddenly, it will be recalled, in a telephone booth at his home. The body, in falling, knocked a piece of plaster from the wall of the booth, and the dust settled upon the glass door.

"Of course," says Mrs. Davis, "I was too hysterical then to notice anything but the body. But the next day something seemed to draw me to the booth. There I saw, printed in the dust on the glass door—in those characteristic big letters of Richard's—the name of the woman friend with whom he had been willing to discuss spiritualism. I called Miss Fray, his secretary and my companion, and she saw the name, also.

"It came to me then—I understood at once—that Richard after his death had contrived to print this name there as a message to me that I should believe in this woman's theory. I took it as an indication that he would find a way to communicate with me." That was the first "manifestation."

The second occurred, she said, a few weeks later, when she and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Belmont Davis, were standing in the yard of the home where Richard and his wife had lived. "My sister-in-law gasped, and I saw that she was looking at the sky," the widow relates. "Following her gaze, I saw, as if painted upon the sky, an exact picture of our home—just as one would see it from above. I knew then that Richard was looking down upon us, and that this picture was what he saw. Again I was comforted by feeling that he was near me."

The third "proof" was one for which Mrs. Davis has Miss Fray's corroboration. Prefacing this, it is explained that Davis, who was inordinately fond of Hope, even for a father, could never endure hearing her cry. It is also explained that it was his custom, while pottering around his estate, to wear a flannel shirt, and that he had one of which the sleeves were ridiculously short. Says Mrs. Davis:

"We were staying in a village in Nova Scotia one summer. We were preparing for bed. Hope was fretful. She lay with eye wide open staring at a framed tintype that hung opposite her bed. It seemed to us a harmless picture. It was of an elderly woman in a black silk gown with tight waist and full skirt. About her thin neck and across her high shoulders rested a large, white, lace collar. Her smooth hair was parted in the middle and combed down over her ears.

"The child twisted her body and turned her head away from the picture. Finding herself uncomfortable in that posture she turned back again. When her eyes fell upon the picture she frowned, then began to cry. We turned the picture to the wall, but she still cried. We moved it to another nail on the wall, but her impatient, tear-filled eyes still followed it. We took it down from the wall and put it into the drawer of the old-fashioned bureau. But she still fretted.

"I tried the modern method of letting Hope alone. I fell into a doze. Miss Fray's startled cry awoke me. She, the entirely reliable, unimaginative woman of business, had been sitting beside Hope when she saw a hand and arm reach forth. The arm was covered with a gray flannel sleeve, short at the cuff. Miss Fray recognized the hand. It was Richard's even to the hairy covering on its back. The hand reached the child's shoulder. Her crying lessened. The hand gently stroked her shoulder, just as had been my husband's habit with our little girl in life.

"Hope's cries ceased. Soon, under the soothing influence of the hand, she fell asleep. Then the hand slowly withdrew. It was suspended a moment over the head of our little girl, as though in blessing. Then it vanished."

Aside from these supposed occurrences, Mrs. Davis' conviction arises entirely from "inner experience." She says she has a constant feeling that her husband's spirit is near her, and that she continually receives impulses which she regards as coming from it. For instance, she says:

"An evidence that he is present, guiding and directing me in all I do, is my change of feeling toward a relative of his. I had always disliked this member of his family, and sometimes expressed my antipathy. This grieved him, because he was very fond of this relative, and used to say: 'Sometime you two will understand each other and become friends.' Since his death I have undergone a gradual change of attitude toward this person. In fact, we have become excellent friends. How could this have happened except through the influence and intervention of one who loved us both?"

Mrs. Davis believes, moreover, that her husband's influence extends to her material affairs. She believes he looks over her shoulder when she signs contracts. Her hand would be arrested, she thinks, if she started to bind herself in a foolish bargain. Of course, she was a successful actress before she met Davis, but she does not attribute her recent advantageous dealings to that experience.

"It is he who has saved me from making any serious mistakes—of that I am convinced. Things have gone pretty well with us since he died. I have sold the moving picture rights to all his books, and the money has been invested for the future use of Hope.

"It has been conveyed to me silently, but unmistakably, that it is his wish that our daughter shall live in England part of the time. So I have bought a little house in London. From there I shall commute to my work in America, say, spend six months here and six months there. It is not my choice, but his. He wants Hope to be a citizen not of one country but of all. He wants her to learn the languages. The best way to learn is to spend much time abroad. I am providing her with a governess for French and another for her music and a third for English. She is in Bermuda now with one of her governesses.

"I am bringing up Hope as he would have wished me to, for he holds before me his ideal of womanhood. That was his mother, Rebecca Harding Davis. Mrs. Davis was a writer. Hope, I think, will be. Although she is only 7 she already writes verses. Many times, I know, Richard has pointed the way for me when I was in a quandary about Hope. I have decided on something—he has warned and advised me, and I have followed his advice."

The many suitors who hover about the attractive young widow of the author will be interested in this decision:

"I will never marry anyone unless Richard approves of him, and I shall know if he does. He will make clear to me his approval or disapproval. He will guide me in that as he does in all else."

Three portraits of Mrs. Richard Harding Davis, the noted journalist and novelist whom she married, and their daughter, Hope, who, Mrs. Davis believes, is under the watchful care of her father from spirit land.

Pearl Ola Jane Humphrey Broadwood, formerly Princess Hassan.

A STRANGE series of ups and downs has marked the matrimonial and professional career of Pearl Ola Jane Humphrey, who was in turn a stage actress, a moving picture star, a Princess of Egypt and who now, after her third marriage, this time to an English army Captain, faces litigation designed to take from her $2,500,000 of the cash which she inherited from Prince Ibrahim Hassan, a Turk, cousin of the deposed Khedive of Egypt.

The Princess, as she is still known to her friends, has seen in her 38 years more of the seamy and the brocaded sides of life than most women could even dream of in an existence twice as long. She has actually lived through scenes and episodes as weird and romantic as those in which she appeared as a stage and screen actress in the days of her early struggles.

Pearl Ola Jane Humphrey, a red-haired girl with large and wistful eyes and petulant lips, noted as a beauty even in her schooldays, was the daughter of a San Francisco furniture dealer. In dramatic schools and stock companies she received her early stage training and after many hardships and setbacks she at last worked her way to New York, where she made her debut in a Theodore Kramer melodrama called "The Fatal Wedding." Here also she made her matrimonial debut, her first husband being Edwin Mordaunt, her leading man. This was a short-lived romance, for she divorced Mordaunt and went her own way, advancing progressively in her art and her matrimonial ambitions.

After appearing in this country in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "The Little Grey Lady" she went abroad to conquer new fields, and in 1910 and 1911 she toured England and France in "The Man From Mexico," and while thus engaged she met the man from Egypt. This impressive and wealthy personage, Prince Ibrahim Hassan, was near the line of succession to the Egyptian throne and outwardly was of a modern, cultivated, charming Oriental type.

The Prince became a devoted attendant on the beautiful red-haired American actress. He haunted the theaters where she appeared and he sent rich gifts and wonderful bouquets to her dressing room and to her hotel. This romance, the second in the life of the furniture dealer's daughter, developed rapidly. After a courtship of two months they were married in London and went to Paris on their honeymoon.

Less than six months later, the Princess, disillusioned and heartbroken, returned to London alone.

This is her story as she told it at that time:

"I married Prince Hassan against the advice of all my friends, in the face of telegrams from my mother imploring me not to do so. But I would not listen. I was fascinated by him. He was so strong, so dominating, and before we were married he was always so kind, so considerate. He would wait sometimes hours for me if I was visiting my dressmaker's.

"Very soon after our marriage his manner changed. It became commanding, dogmatic. It soon became clear to me that I was only a thing apart from the rest of his life—a thing to be enjoyed when he had nothing more important of which to think.

"He expected me to be at his call. He told me on many occasions that his commands were to be obeyed, that I must study his taste and entirely subordinate myself to his will. He did not wish me to have any friends of my own. I was not to go out without his permission, or even eat my meals where I pleased.

"Although himself fairly fond of display, he never bought me either clothes or jewelry. He gave me no money. I asked him on several occasions if he would not buy me some pretty dress or some jewelry which I had seen, but he always refused, saying 'Why should I? What do you want with more clothes or jewelry? Have you not enough?'

"When displeased he became very violent. The incident which led up to my leaving him was quite unexpected. He had told me one evening to wait downstairs for him. After I had waited some time I got tired and went upstairs to our bedroom. Presently he came in—furious. He shouted: 'How dare you come upstairs when I told you to wait downstairs?'

"Before I could find my voice he shouted at me again: 'I have told you ever since we were married that I intended to break your spirit, and now I intend to teach you your lesson.'

"So saying, he struck me a most violent blow, knocking me to the floor. It was terrible. This experience made me very ill. I had to be attended by two doctors and two nurses. But he never made any inquiry or sent any messages to me. Eleven days later I left Paris and came to London. I have communicated with him since, but he has made no reply. If he had only sent some word to me while I lay ill after his blow, I could have found it in my heart to forgive him. But he was Oriental. Don't you think an American, or any European, if he lost his temper and struck his wife, would show afterward that he was sorry for it; that he would go over to her or send to her and ask her to forgive him?

"You ask me what is my advice to any American girl who is thinking of marrying an Oriental?" summed up the Princess. "It is, emphatically, 'DON'T'!"

The Princess returned to the United States and appeared in motion pictures. Prince Hassan, who had been in the British Foreign Office, was sent to Paris as a purchasing agent of the British Munitions Ministry. In the last year of the war he was arrested on the charge of profiteering in war munitions. A memorandum on his cuff was decoded and was found to indicate that he was in communication with German agents in Copenhagen. The Prince's property in England and France was sequestrated and he was released on parole to await trial. In 1919 the British Government awarded to Princess Hassan $1,000,000 of the Prince's sequestrated property.

The Princess had sued for divorce in 1914, but action was delayed because of the war and the case not docketed in the Paris courts until 1919. While the divorce case was still pending in 1920 the Prince died, without leaving a will. The profiteering and espionage cases against him had not been tried. All of the sequestered property was turned over to his heirs.

It was announced that the Princess received $4,000,000 in cash and securities and $3,000,000 in real estate, including a palatial home in Paris. Deserting the screen, the Princess went to Europe to look after the settlement of the estate. In London, a year ago, she married Capt. Broadwood of the British army, who returned to America with her. They are now said to be in California.

After all of her strange ups and downs it would seem that the former Princess is not to be left in peaceful possession of the large fortune which she inherited from her Oriental husband. A New York attorney, Herman L. Roth, has made it known that he will ask the courts to allow him $2,500,000, just half of the cash and securities of the Princess' inheritance, for services in the divorce case which never came to a conclusion.

The lawyer alleges that this half portion is due him by virtue of an agreement signed by the Princess when she engaged him to act as her attorney in the divorce suit in 1914.

This agreement, as given out by the lawyer, was as follows:

"That if a financial settlement is made in lieu of the said Princess Ibrahim Hassan's interest in the estate of her said husband, then she will pay to the said Herman L. Roth a sum equal to 50 per cent of any and all moneys or property that may be received for such settlement and whether the same is collected by suit or otherwise, which amount may be deducted by said Herman L. Roth and the balance paid over to me as soon as collected.

"The reason why the Princess Hassan offers a sum equal to 50 per cent to the said Herman L. Roth is because the possibility of a financial settlement is uncertain and the amount of any possible settlement is unascertainable, and for the further reason that I have induced the said Herman L. Roth to advance all costs and disbursements necessary to prosecute the said action to its final determination, and also induced Mr. Herman L. Roth to accompany me to foreign countries. All costs and disbursements that may be necessary herein shall be apportioned in a like manner, share and share alike."

Roth contends that his agreement with the Princess entitled him to share in any money she might subsequently receive from her husband or his estate, even though it was not in judgment or settlement of the divorce suit.

It is understood that the former Princess will employ an opposing array of legal talent and will contest in every way possible the claim of the New York attorney.

One interesting feature of the litigation may be the summoning of the deposed ruler of Egypt as a witness for the former wife of his cousin. This might be dependent on the ability of process servers to find him, as he has been difficult to locate since he fled from Egypt after being toppled off the throne because of his alleged friendship for Germany in the war period.

The object in calling the former Khedive as a witness would be to show how he tried to play the part of peacemaker after the separation of the Prince and Princess. Through him the former Princess no doubt would try to show that her lawyer was not the only one who attempted to bring about a settlement while the divorce suit was pending.

She also will attempt to show that her inheritance of the Prince's estate as his legal heir was in no way dependent on any action of the attorney and that the inheritance was in no sense a "settlement" as understood in the written agreement. Lawyers everywhere will be interested in the unusual features of the case.

One contention of the lawyer suing for half the cash inheritance will be based on the clause in the contract which provided that the attorney should have 50 per cent of all that the Princess might receive from her husband's estate, "whether the same is collected by suit or otherwise."

The contract specifies that Roth, upon collection, take out his share and turn the remainder over to her. The Princess will allege that the lawyer made no collection and hence can make no deduction.

Here's the Truth About This.. Golf Business

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

GRANT RICE or Jim Barnes, or somebody else who was born with a silver stymie in his mouth, was saying the other day that the reason people like to play golf is because it teaches them to keep their temper.

That may be the reason that Grant Rice or Jim Barnes play golf, but it isn't the reason that 999 out of a thousand golf addicts have been pronounced incurable by the psychoanalysts.

We have reached the unalterable and indisputable conclusion that golf fastens itself on human beings of both sexes, not because it teaches them to keep their tempers, but because it gives them abundant and constantly recurring opportunities to lose their tempers—and get away with it.

It is easy enough to get indignant at a traffic cop, or a street car conductor, or a large man who thrusts you from the sidewalk. It is easy, but when you come to expressing your anger you are confronted with one of those inhibitions which take most of the fun out of life.

This is the caution inhibition. The caution inhibition doesn't bother you so much on the golf course. If you are careful to keep well ahead of the men behind and well behind the man in front you can revel in glorious paroxysms of fury without any danger save from apoplexy, and that is practically negligible.

Saturday, March 4, at 2:45 p. m., a large, neatly attired elderly gentleman, after making two tolerable shots, drove a ball into a little brook.

The man ran beside the brook for a short time, calling it unpleasant names and practically accusing it of grand and petit larceny and highway robbery. The brook was faster than he was, however, and discovering the chase to be hopeless, he poured forth a stream of language for which he could have been instantly arrested by a policeman, Constable or Deputy Sheriff.

This being concluded, he returned to the clubhouse, stamping his feet into the yielding sod at every step, snarled at the attendant who opened the door for him, and not until he had swallowed three small glasses of a fluid he found in his locker did he regain his self-possession.

On the following day, Sunday, March 5, a small irregular shaped man struck three times at a ball which lay on a small hill of sand before him and, after missing it each time, deliberately dealt it a brutal kick with his toe. Then drawing one club after another from his caddy bag, he broke them consecutively over his knee and threw the remnants in the direction taken by the ball.

While doing this he kept up a flow of talk at which even a hard-faced caddy boy who stood behind him was seen to shudder violently.

On the following Saturday, March 11, a tall, willowy gentleman of a very great age—probably well over 40—was about to sink a putt which would have won a hole and a dollar when an innocent and playful puppy romped over the green, seized the ball and conveyed it rapidly toward his home, which was apparently in some other county.

The tall, slim gentleman wheeled on his caddy and made in very hot words the obviously baseless charge that he (the caddy) had trained the dog to come to the course and purloin golf balls, and that the caddy intended at some later time to meet the dog at a previously agreed-upon rendezvous, receive the ball from the animal and vend it to the highest bidder on the golf course the following day.

This preposterous accusation was made not coldly as we have set it down here, but in a high pitched voice that carried to the far corners of that particular section of the golf course.

From it the man apparently derived a very considerable pleasure, for he accepted the caddy's denial at its face value, and played the remainder of the game with quiet happiness.

Now the point we are seeking to make is that only on a golf course could men thus revel in the delights of temperamental explosion.

Had the man who lost the ball in the creek said the same things to a stranger that he said to the creek he would, unless the stranger was an utter craven, have regretted it later, probably in some emergency hospital.

Had the man who broke his clubs when he missed the ball been moved by a like disappointment in his home to take all the umbrellas out of the umbrella stand and twist them in twain over his knee, his wife would have interposed her constitutional veto power before he got to the second umbrella.

Had the man whose ball the dog pilfered made the same sort of a charge against a brother man that he made against the caddy he would have been in his lawyer's office the next week seeking to compromise a suit for criminal libel.

Yet all these things could be done on a golf course, and safely done. Is it any wonder that man, who loves more than anything else to blow up now and then, has found the golf course the nearest thing to Nirvana to be found on this lowly planet? (Copyright.)

"LOOK OUT! Here come the police!"

At this warning from his companions in the rear seat the driver of the automobile first scanned the clear stretch of road ahead of him, but could see nothing. Then he looked into the mirror. It reflected a stretch of empty road that extended for miles behind him.

"Nobody ahead of us or behind us," he said. "You must be dreaming."

Before the other occupant of the machine could reply there was a mighty humming and whirring noise close at hand, and, dropping down like a giant hawk, an airplane came head on toward the automobile at terrific speed, swooping down until it was only a few feet from the ground.

The automobile driver, now fully alive to the danger of a collision with the low-flying aircraft, brought his machine to a sudden stop.

The policemen of the air had arrived.

This is not an imaginary incident. It happened just the other day in Texas as part of the day's work of the San Antonio aerial police force, the only constabulary of its kind in the United States. It was incidental to an aerial hunt for fleeing bank robbers and it was the first test of the newest and most modern method of forcing a speeding automobilist to come to a halt.

If "speed cops" of the requisite nerve and daring can be found in sufficient numbers it may in time become the accepted way to literally overhaul the wildest and most intractable violators of the speed laws on the open road.

William Long and John Bartow of the San Antonio aerial police were at the hangar at Stinson Field when a telephone message from headquarters informed them that robbers had held up the State Bank at New Braunfels, about 30 miles to the northeast, and had escaped in an automobile with loot amounting to $70,000.

The aerial police force was organized only recently and this was its first call to duty.

While the police airplane was being put in readiness for flight there came additional details, including a description of the machine in which the robbers were fleeing from the scene of their crime.

After a flight in which they reached a maximum speed of 100 miles an hour the policemen of the air were soon hovering over the town of New Braunfels.

As they looked down upon the town they saw signs great excitement, bustle and activity. A posse was gathering to chase the robbers. Men on horses, automobiles and in buggies and farm wagons gathering in the public square.

But what interested the airplane policemen was that dozens of automobiles were to be seen ing along the roads leading out of New Braunfels. These roads were spread out under the eyes of the ators like the lines on a huge map. Every car them was distinctly visible. From the airplane was impossible to determine the makes of the cars.

Any one of the machines might be the one in w the robbers were escaping. Then again, all of the mobiles might be manned by members of posses. It was essential to solve this problem.

It was in working out this solution that the men of the air, at great risk of being killed or hurt, evolved the newest of all methods of stopping speeding automobile.

Their object was not only to force a machine to but to compel its occupants to alight and stand tion.

It was as novel a chase as has ever been With its superior speed the airplane had no in overtaking and passing the swiftest of the biles.

it was possible in each instance for the
the air to closely inspect each machine its occupants. In the event that an arrest should be called for a landing could have been made, or if landing conditions were not favorable one of the aviators could have dropped to the ground.

Both airplane policemen were armed with revolvers. It would have been practical, even easy, for them to have kept suspects covered until they could be taken into custody.

After covering most of the roads and stopping many machines the airplane policemen returned to a point near New Braunfels, landing alongside one of the numerous posses. They were told of the probable direction taken by the robbers, and after refilling their gas tank they took to the air again. Taking up the trail of automobile tracks, they followed them to where they disappeared in the cedar brakes near Bulverde. Dodging in and out of valleys and scanning the dense growth beneath, they looked for signs of the robbers on foot, but found nothing. After patrolling the air for a wide radius they returned to San Antonio.

On the following day a report came in that the robbers were believed to be in the canebrakes east of Bulverde. Again the air policemen got into action. They flew low over the canebrakes and the Cibolo Valley, but could see no trace of the robbers in the densely wooded hills.

At one time the airplane developed engine trouble while over a dense growth of timber, where a forced landing would have meant a serious accident, if not death, but the policeman pilot, by skillful manipulation of the controls, cleared the timber and found a landing place in the open.

The altitude range on these remarkable flights was from four feet to 10,000 feet. From the greater height the country could be scanned for 20 miles around.

Despite the fact that the air policemen, working on their first assignment, did not track down their quarry, the police officials of San Antonio are highly pleased with the efficiency of the latest addition to the force.

Any one of many explanations for the escape of the robbers might be accepted. Even an airplane, with its great speed and range, cannot be in more than one place at once, and much time may have been lost at the very start if wrong directions were given to the air policemen as to the probable line of flight of the robbers.

But, in the view of the police officials, the chase demonstrated the value of the use of airplanes in overhauling and actually stopping automobiles. This opens up great possibilities in running down law violators.

A Solomon of the . . . Solomon Islands

GET it out of your head that primitive people are lawless. The fact of it is that if you were to flee civilization because of its restrictions, its laws and prohibitions, and attempt to live among the Solomon Islanders, you would find yourself as completely ruled as in these United States.

This state of affairs has lately been disclosed by Capt. Edward Salisbury, explorer of the South Sea Islands for the past quarter of a century.

"On my last voyage to the Solomon Islands, a year ago," he said, "I met a chief named Geu. He was the head of a village, Bilwa, in the Western Solomons. He wasn't much to look at, with his fuzzy black hair, thick lips and big ears, but, on the other hand, Geu had an extraordinary sense of justice, and was consequently a great power among the natives. He was a sort of Judge and made the villagers live up to the law.

"Now, among the Solomon Islanders, a woman is bought at the age of 3 years by her future husband. He makes a first payment, and, when the child has grown up and is 12, the final payment is made and the girl taken to live with her spouse.

"When I arrived at Bilwa and had met Geu I inquired among the villagers about this amazing chief, and heard many stories of his wisdom. Here is one of them:

"It appears that a man and a woman had been married, according to the custom of the country, the payments made correctly and so on. And the pair had gone off to live happily ever after. But, after a year of marriage, the man had suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, leaving his wife to face the economic problem as best she might.

"Finally the girl decided to marry the man who had been wooing her ever since the pseudo demise of her lawful mate. They joined forces, but, since the girl was no longer living with her parents, the new husband had no presents to make, and no price to pay. They set up an establishment. The man hunted and fished. The woman did the gardening and took care of the cooking and the housework. All was serene, until, alas, the first husband showed up and demanded to have his wife back.

"Here was a pretty mess, a scandal in Bilwa, with bloodshed in the future if the matter were not settled quickly and decently. So the neighbors got together and suggested that the question be left to the wisdom of Geu the just, Geu the wise, Geu the great lawgiver.

"The triangle repaired to the hut of the chief. He heard the testimony of all parties, acknowledged the plea of husband No. 1, concerning his payment to the parents and the consequent title to his property, to-wit, the wife. And he listened with bent head to the passionate asseverations of husband No. 2, who swore that he adored the lady, was willing to support her in a manner to which she was accustomed, and better. Then said Geu:

" 'This is too serious a matter for off-hand decision. Let me think.' Geu considered silently for a long five minutes, then said: 'I'll tell you what you do. You leave the girl with my wife for two moons. Both of you clear out to Gazo, that's only a few miles away. Stay there, have no relation to this woman. Then come back and I will give you my judgment.'

"So the men went to Gazo, and the woman stayed with Geu's wife. In two weeks the men returned and came to Geu's house. He met them outside, and they sat down on a log and began to talk. Geu appeared to be very sad.

" 'I have something terrible to tell you both,' he said in melancholy fashion, and the two became silent. 'Three days ago my wife and your wife went to the reef to gather shellfish. When they returned my wife prepared the evening meal. The women ate the fish. I did not, for I was not hungry, and both of them grew sick. Two nights ago your wife died. My wife is recovering.' Both husbands groaned. The first husband rose from the log and wept and tore his hair. The second husband sat quiet and looked out to sea. Geu went on.

" 'Now, of course, the feast for the dead must be given. You,' he said to husband No. 1, 'as her lawful husband, will no doubt provide the feast and the burial ceremony?'

"The lawful husband stopped tearing his hair and waxed indignant.

" 'Why—what the devil!' he exclaimed, 'she hasn't been living with me for the last three years; let him prepare the feast.'

"Husband No. 2 could hardly articulate, so grief-stricken was he. He murmured:

" 'Yes, I loved her. I am very sad. I will prepare the feast and bury her body.'

" 'Well,' said Geu, 'you will find her body in the house. Take it away, for the weather is warm.'

"So husband No. 1 walked off into the forest, still excited by the ridiculous proposal that had been made him. No. 2, in great sorrow, opened the door of the house, and there, smiling at him, was his wife, as sound as a dollar."

This was the story of Capt. Salisbury.

Henry Ford—His Whims, Fancies and Home Life

Intimate picture of Mrs. Ford and her private philanthropical activities—Description of their home on the River Rouge—Ford has a personal laboratory near his home in which he often works far into the night—Incidents which illustrate the individual characteristics of the manufacturer :: :: ::

HEREWITH is presented the third and last of a series of three articles dealing intimately with the life of Henry Ford, and drawn, by permission of the Reilly & Lee Publishing Co., from Sarah Bushnell's biography, "The Truth About Henry Ford," which was compiled with Mrs. Ford's assistance. Here the narrative takes up some of the present aspects of the manufacturer's family life, including a picture of Mrs. Ford and her activities.

FORD receives an average of about 10,000 letters a day. A staff of secretaries is employed solely to open and answer them. In the course of a year 200,000 visitors go through the Ford plant, and most of them want to see Ford and shake hands with him. Needless to say, very few such requests are granted. In one day his callers included a Queen, a former President of the United States, a Chinese millionaire, a United States Senator, two university presidents, a committee of educators and a 70-year-old woman who had driven from California in a Ford roadster.

He is usually represented by his secretary, Ernest G. Leibold, whose vigilance in protecting his chief against intrusion has caused, on some occasions, subsequent embarrassment to Ford. One slur against Ford has been that he did not maintain contact with current events. The fact is that a wide selection of newspaper clippings is placed before him each day, in order that he may keep informed on events and the state of public opinion throughout the country. In this respect his routine resembles that of a Cabinet Minister.

Ford seldom wears a hat, and his hair is snowy white. He is rather frail in appearance, and shows the weight of his responsibilities and struggles. As a rule he fancies suits gray in color, and (mention this only in a scandalized whisper) gossip has it that they are hand-me-downs. There is neither confirmation nor denial of this, but his friends say they wouldn't be at all surprised if it were true.

He shrinks from contact with strangers and winces at publicity. The plain fact is that Ford is exceedingly shy. His utterances are often cryptic, and, unless he is explaining the details of some project, he rarely goes into long explanations. Perhaps the best way to illustrate his general attitude is with the phrase, "common as an old shoe." Coupled with this is a constant air of preoccupation, as if he were continually turning over phases of some vast scheme in his mind—which, in all likelihood, is precisely what he is doing. He is given to quizzical expressions, one of which is: "I believe in religion, but don't work at it much." Doubtless there is curiosity to know what sort of an automobile Ford drives. Much of the time he uses a Ford coupe—taken from stock. On other occasions he drives a Marmon, a Studebaker and a Cadillac.

As is widely known, his cronies include Thomas A. Edison and Harvey S. Firestone, and, until his death, John Burroughs, the beloved naturalist. Details of their camping parties, the last of which included President Harding as a guest, have been thoroughly described in the news columns of the Post-Dispatch.

A fact that did not become public until Burrough's will was filed was that Ford had paid off a mortgage on the Burroughs homestead, "Riverby-on-Hudson," and had paid for the improvement of the estate. Practically the only sport which the manufacturer engages in, aside from the camping excursions, is that of skating, a heritage from his younger days, when he was accounted the best skater in the township. He is still an adept at it.

The Ford residence on the River Rouge is of gray native stone, built on Gothic lines. His study is in a round tower at one corner. The walls are covered with bookshelves, a large proportion of which are on technical subjects. Nearby is a large stone garage, and in it are Ford's private laboratory and experiment rooms. It was here that he perfected the tractor. He often labors here until far into the night, just as he did in the old brick barn in the rear of the house on Bagley street.

A few years ago a certain Detroit clergyman approached Ford for a subscription to a large church building fund. "No, I don't believe in expensive churches," said Ford. "I'd like for you to hear me preach on the subject. I think you would be converted," said the minister.

"Can you make it next Sunday?" asked Ford, and the clergyman said he could. The following Sunday found Ford in a pew and the pastor taking for his text: "Lo, I dwell in a house of cedar, but the ark of the covenant of the Lord dwelleth under curtains." He descanted lengthily upon the man who wants a better house for himself than for his church, and labored a parallel about putting a dynamo in a fine building while leaving the "Lord's dynamo, the church," poorly housed.

After the services he approached Ford. The latter grinned: "I haven't heard anything to change my opinion," he said, "but I do think, as I've always thought, that a preacher should be paid enough to lay aside something, so he can end his days in a little place in the country. So please hand this to your wife, as a little token of my regard for you both," and he gave the minister an envelope. It contained $2000.

It is said on good authority that, in December of 1920, when manufacturers were retrenching everywhere, Ford kept his factory running full blast and took a loss of $15,000,000, in order that his employes might not be idle. When eventually he was compelled to close for a while, reports flew about that he was in financial trouble. This was not literally true. He did need money, and it is a well-known story how Wall street sent its emissaries to him to offer help—in Wall street's way—and how he hadn't time to see them.

Beyond doubt, Henry Ford is the wealthiest man in the country who is utterly independent of the New York bankers. He has never asked their help, and has never accepted it. The East has never succeeded in getting its tentacles into the Ford plant, and he is determined that it never shall. Wall street's way is to let enterprising and original men build up paying institutions by their genius and foresight and then step in and take the cream of the products. In Ford's case it signally failed to accomplish that purpose. Perhaps that is behind the desire in certain quarters to make it appear that Henry Ford is "queer." He certainly is "queer"—if that means keeping off the leeches.

No sketch of the mechanical wizard's life is complete without a description of his wife, who has been his companion on the meteoric rise from township farmer to head of a corporation that is said to pay an income tax of $80,000,000 a year. Mrs. Ford is small and robust. Her manner is vivacious, and she has unusually bright and expressive black eyes. She is very fond of music, and there is a pipe organ concealed in the walls of the Ford drawing room, while pianos and cabinet phonographs are scattered all over the house. Wealth has not spoiled this farmer's daughter. It has, however, brought many responsibilities. She is director in half a dozen benevolent organizations, and activity of this sort usurps most of her time.

She makes regular visits to homes for children and young women. So many of these calls are necessary that she has a regular weekly schedule. In addition to that, she always has taken a keen interest in the welfare of the families of men who work in the Ford plant. When the number of these is considered, it may be seen that she has her hands full. As a matter of fact, authorized agents investigate and report on cases where help is wanted, and when the report is favorable to the subject, Mrs. Ford personally supplies the needs, and, on occasion, visits the home.

Three miles from the Ford estate, about half way between Detroit and the University of Michigan, is a square red brick house bearing a modest board, "Valley Farm." This institution is a branch of the Dunbar Memorial Woman's Hospital, and it is under Mrs. Ford's especial sponsorship. Here girls and women are trained for useful work and prepared for "another chance" at health and happiness.

Mrs. Ford makes several visits a week to "Valley Farm." She maintains a personal touch with the patients, and uses her hopeful, energetic personality to stimulate the atmosphere of cheerfulness. As she remarked: "Men are always ready to help men and boys who have made mistakes, but nobody seems to have been willing to help the girls, except for a few men. This is women's work. Women know the weakness and impulsiveness which cause girls to get into trouble, and they should be the first to excuse it and help repair the damage."

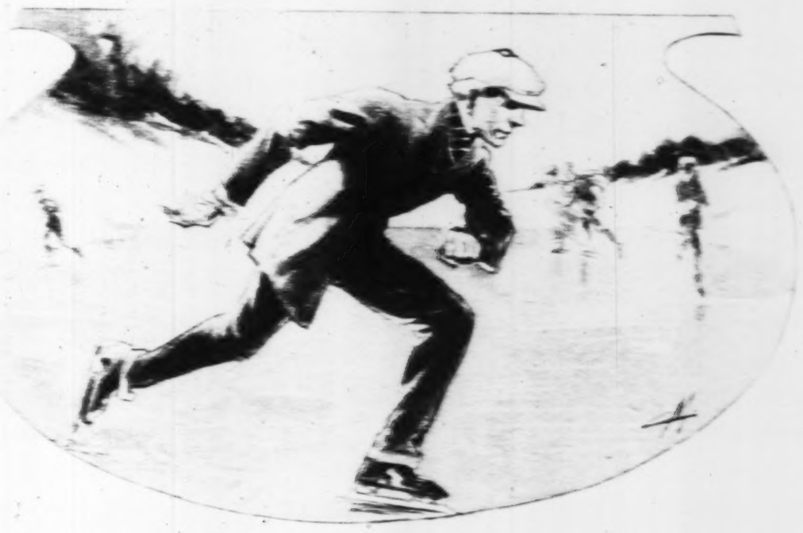
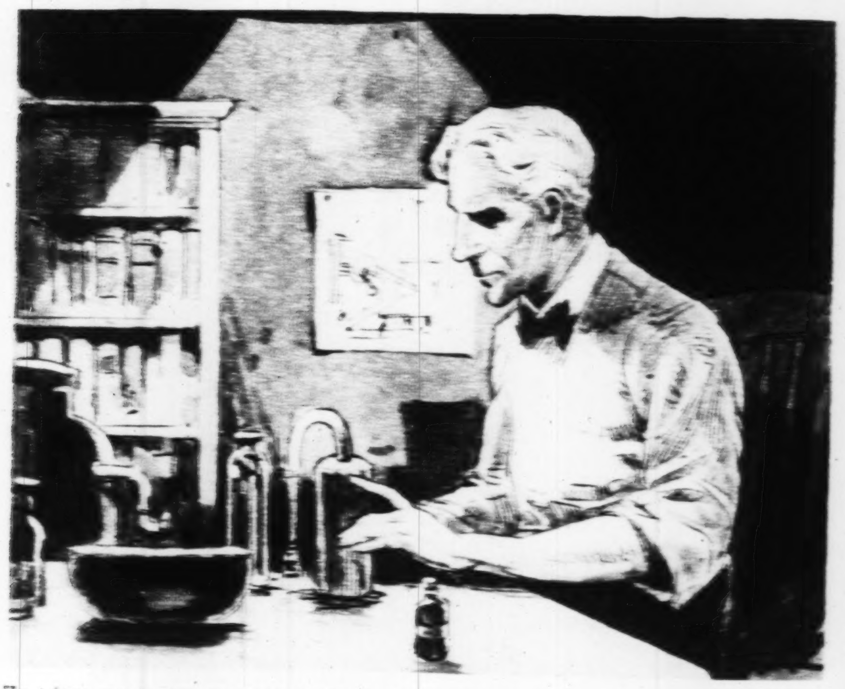
Ford's hair is snow-white, and he seldom wears a hat.



His favorite outdoor sport has always been skating, and he still does it.



He often works far into the night in his private laboratory, just as he once did in the old brick barn.

The Cell Which Makes Up Your Body

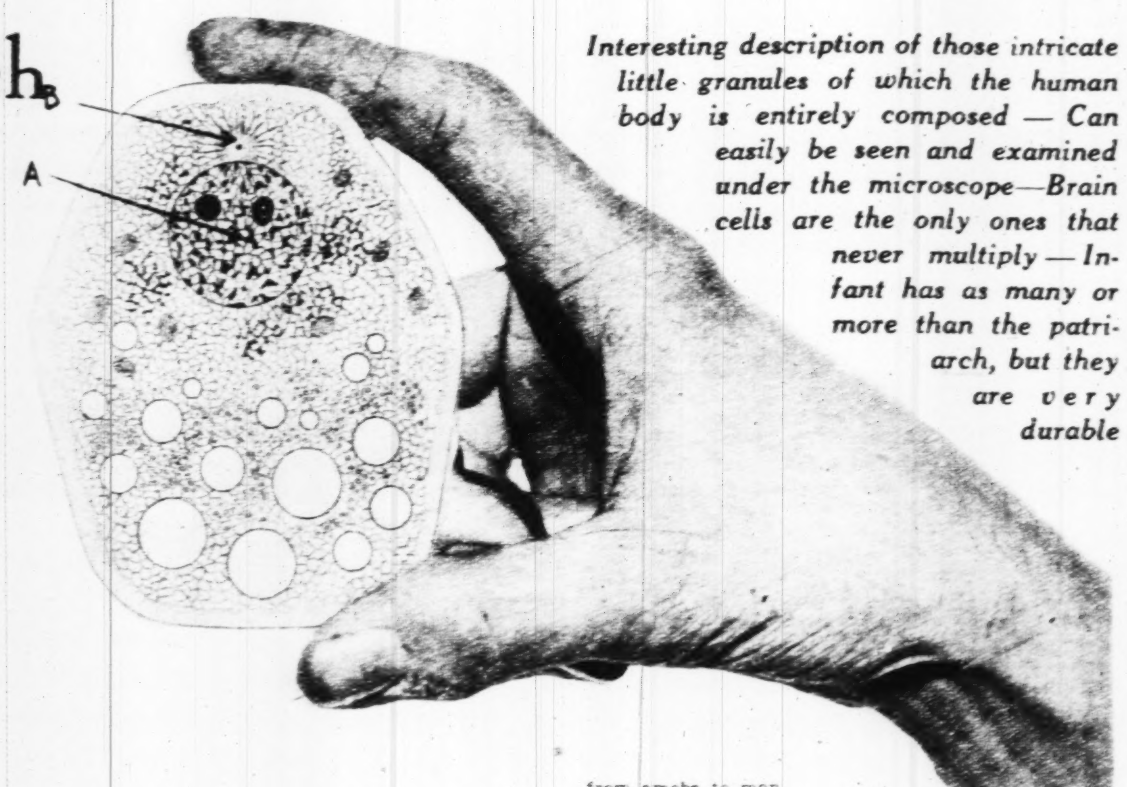
Professor of Zoology, Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.



Interesting description of those intricate little granules of which the human body is entirely composed — Can easily be seen and examined under the microscope—Brain cells are the only ones that never multiply — Infant has as many or more than the patriarch, but they are very durable

Despite its diminutiveness, the life cell contains a number of highly diverse organs. Most important of these is the nucleus, (A), which directs and regulates the chief activities of the cell. The contents of the nucleus are quite different from the contents of the rest of the cell. In the nucleus are the chromosomes, whose composition is believed to determine human characteristics. The other organs, notably the centrosome, (B), have minor functions.

THE entire body is composed of small microscopic units called cells. The unit of structure in a brick house is the single brick. The unit of structure in the body is the cell. Each organ and tissue is composed of cells, and each set of cells making up any organ, such as the liver, ng, heart, brain, etc., has a definite kind of work in the body. Muscle cells have the power of action; nerve cells are the conductors of stimuli; ells of the digestive system have their special ion.

hen all the systems of cells in the body are working smoothly we have the same harmony in the body prevails in the highly organized manufacturing t only in the body we call this harmony health.

t only the human body, but the bodies of all ani- s and plants are enormous aggregates of these its" or units of structure called cells. How many are there in the human body, or in a rose, or in ly, or in a dog? The number of cells in a rose or man's body is so great that our minds can have conception of the number.

e can take a piece of tissue such as the lining of erebrum, where the cells are arranged in a layer one cell in thickness. By counting the number lls in a small area under the microscope we can mate the number of cells in the lining covering entire brain. There are approximately 10,000,- 000 of these cells. Now roll up this lining into a It will be about the size of your thumb. a piece of you the size of your thumb contains 00,000,000 cells, how many cells are there in a weighing 150 pounds? Page the mathematician! an tell us easily. And it will be a very interesting figure that he gives us, except that it doesn't mean thing.

t birth a person has all the brain cells he will ever . No use to go to college to get brains. Brains born, not made. When a brain cell dies it is er replaced. But as a compensation, brain cells long-lived cells and are duplicated on each side of brain; if one cell dies, its mate on the opposite of the brain continues to function.

his is not true of the other cells of the body. These in many cases of very brief life, and are con- tly being replaced. The cells of the skin are con- ally being worn away and replaced by new cells the germinal layer or deep layer of the skin. In y bath we wash off several billions of cells—dead cells. The blood cells are short lived, they die are replaced by others.

he cells of the body were likened above to the ks of a house. They are the units of structure organization. But they are much more than is. For cells are alive. They take in food ma- als and oxygen for building themselves up. They to themselves. In their work they give off energy d waste products.

ut the outstanding feature of cells is that they e duplicates of themselves. No brick ever makes ther brick just like itself. But cells do. One cell ides and becomes two cells. Each of these two divides and we have four. The four by the same ess become eight, the eight in turn make 16, and on ad infinitum.

ll living things have a cellular composition. The the unit of structure, was first described in plants (cork tissue) by Robert Hooke in 1665. In viewing such tissue under a simple lens the striking thing is that of the small box-like units of which it is composed. These seem to resemble the cells of a honeycomb. Hence the term "cells." About the middle of the last century it became apparent that the contents of the cells and not the walls were the important things. In fact some cells have no walls. But the term "cell" had become so firmly fixed in the literature that it could not be changed.

Cells of different animals and plants, and cells of different organs within the same animal, exhibit an unending variety in size, form, structure and function.

There are many structures and inclusions within the cell, but for our purpose a cell may be defined as a bit of protoplasm or living substance containing nuclear material. The protoplasm and the nucleus are both living substances, but the nucleus stains more deeply, has a different refractive index, and is probably the seat of some of the chief activities of the cell.

Although cells are always very small, yet there are great variations in their mass. The smallest cells known are the bacteria, some of which may be only 0.001 of a millimeter or 1-2500 of an inch in length; some are even less than this. But in the higher animals the cells are largest. The human white blood corpuscle is about average in size. It measures a little less than 0.01 of a millimeter in diameter.

Tissue cells having a diameter of 0.05 of a millimeter are considered large, though they are exceeded in size by some highly specialized cells such as the muscle and nerve cells. The cells of any organ within the species are remarkably constant in size. The size of an organ or of an individual depends upon the number of cells rather than their size.

Undoubtedly the primordial germ of life on this planet was a microscopic bit of protoplasm, or living substance, such as we would call a "cell" today. During the unnumbered millions of years that have elapsed since this first appearance of life on the earth, the evolutionary process has transformed that single germ of life into successively higher and higher forms of life until at last, man, the crowning glory of the evolutionary process, is reached, and the gap is bridged from ameba to man.

So in a general way each individual in his own life parallels the history of the evolution of life on the earth, or as it is expressed in what is known as Von Baer's law, the life history of the individual briefly repeats or recapitulates the life history of the race. Evolution simply teaches that even as the individual now begins his life as a single cell, so the life of the race back in the twilight stages had its beginning in some one or more primordial germs of living substance. The biologist has no more difficulty in believing in the origin of life on our planet from a single cell than he has in believing that each life now so begins, a fact he can verify under the microscope. The present method of creation is by the long slow development of the individual from a little bit of living substance called a cell. There is no reason to suppose that any other method of creation was ever used, or ever will be adopted.

How old is your family tree? Did your ancestors come over in the Mayflower? Many people who have a family tree and can trace their ancestors back for several or a dozen generations think that by reason of that fact they belong to older families than the rest of us. So we have the F. F. V., or first families of Virginia; the Mayflower tribe, and all the rest of the "bluebloods," who know who their great-great-great grandfather was. Biologically there are no new families as contrasted with older families. An old family is merely one in which for one reason or other the records have been preserved for a few generations back. All families now in existence upon the earth, whether of men or of animals, are exactly of the same age. We are all "bluebloods," and all belong to the "old first families," for we came from lines of immortal germ cells that are in the direct line of descent from the first appearance of life on this earth.

To have a family tree is a pleasant satisfaction if one's forebear was a signer of the Declaration of Independence; or it may be equally distressing if the progenitor of the family line were hanged. The genealogist may receive a larger fee for covering up what he finds than for the original work of finding it. But whether good or bad, most recorded family histories go back only a few score of years, while behind these lie unnumbered and unrecorded millions of generations and years during which animal life was struggling onward and upward from the primordial ameba-like creatures dwelling in the slime of the tidal beaches where the tide ebbs and flows twice in 24 hours.

nnocent Man's Remarkable Escape From Gallows term of enlistment in the army at the time the anda killings were done.

e reported triumphantly to the Governor, and this al immediately commuted De Masi's term to life sonment. It had not been proved that the man innocent of the killings in Quinn's saloon, but e doubt had been cast upon the vital testimony h had convicted him.

oney had still his great work to do. He went at it rishly and with all confidence. But one afternoon went home from his office feeling ill and in a few s he was dead. The fates had fired from an unex- ed quarter.

fter a time the lawyer's widow took up the case poor Tino De Masi again. It had been her husband's sion. She would try to carry on his work. But e were many obstacles, just as there were in the dow case. Mrs. Roney found it hard to get men means interested in this friendless Italian. Then discovered that the District Attorney's office was bitterly hostile and in no mood to reverse itself and confess its error. Political ambitions had to be dealt with. This involved waiting until offices changed hands and new men came into power. Meanwhile, Tino remained in prison.

Finally Mrs. Roney enlisted the aid of C. Stuart Patterson, a prominent Philadelphia attorney, who soon became as convinced as she of the innocence of the prisoner. The matter was again taken before the Prison Pardons Board and finally to Gov. Sproul, who had meantime assumed office. The same old obstructionists stood in the way, the same old party considerations seemed to stand immovably between De Masi and freedom. The Governor finally waved them aside and ordered an investigation. It disclosed in short order that the convict was guiltless as any of his judges.

Comporto, haled from the hospital for the criminal insane and brought before fresh inquisitors, lied stubbornly until he was cornered, and then threw up his hands.

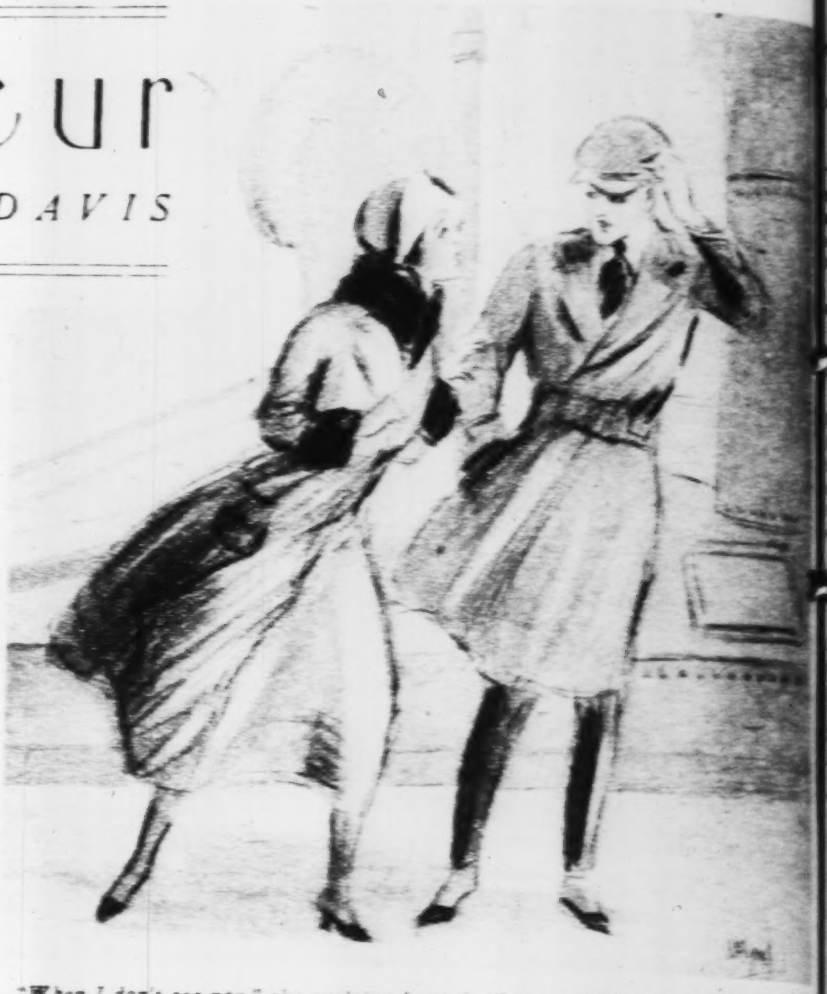
"Sure De Masi didn't do it," he admitted, defiantly. "But I hate him. He squealed on me, and if I ever get out of here I'll kill him."

For the first time it dawned on the prosecutors of De Masi that Comporto might really be insane or at least irrational. He had been admitted to the prison lunatic ward almost immediately after his confinement, but 12 years went by before these petty bureaucrats awoke to the realization that the whole case against De Masi had been based upon the spiteful ravings of a terrified and tortured madman. These 12 years came out of poor Tino's most unimportant life, to be sure.

Well, De Masi is free. His wife deserted him when she arrived from Italy and found her husband in jail as a murderer, later twice convicted. And his suffering mother died while he was in prison, anguished by the doubt of her son's innocence. Tino himself is 12 years older and poorer by so much. Certainly he was taught nothing and learned nothing in prison save fear and hatred. On his release some one charitably got him a job at digging ditches, which was what he was doing when the majestic and impartial law stepped in and condemned him to death.

The Amateur

By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS



"When I don't see you," she exclaimed, as simply as a child, "I feel so frightened."

IT WAS February off the Banks, and so thick was the weather that, on the upper decks, one could have driven a sleigh. Inside the smoking room Austin Ford ordered hot gin for himself and the ship's doctor. The ship's doctor had gone below on another "hurry call" from the widow. At the first luncheon on board, the widow had sat on the right of Dr. Sparrow, with Austin Ford facing her. Since then, at frequent intervals, the ill health of the widow had deprived Ford of the society of the doctor. That it deprived him, also, of the society of the widow did not concern him. Her life had not been spent upon ocean liners; she could not remember when staterooms were named after the states of the Union. She could not tell him of shipwrecks and salvage, of smugglers and of the modern pirates who found their victims in the smoking room.

Ford was on his way to England to act as the London correspondent of the New York Republic. For three years on that most sensational of the New York dailies he had been the star man, the chief muckraker, the chief sleuth. His interest was in crime, in such offenses against law and society as are perpetrated with nice intelligence. The man he studied, pursued and exposed was the cashier who evolved a new method of covering up his peculations, the dishonest president of an insurance company, the confidence man who used no concealed weapon other than his wit. Toward the criminals he pursued young Ford felt no personal animosity.

* * * * * * * *

The ship's doctor returned from his visit below decks and sank into the leather cushion close to Ford's elbow. "I told her to talk to you," he said, fretfully.

"Her? Who?" inquired Ford. "Oh, the widow?"

"You were right about that," said Dr. Sparrow. "She is not a widow."

The reporter smiled complacently.

"Do you know why I thought not?" he demanded. "Because all the time she was at luncheon she kept turning over her wedding ring as though she was not used to it. It was a new ring, too. I told you then she was not a widow."

"Do you always notice things like that?" asked the doctor.

"Not on purpose," said the amateur detective. "I can't help it."

"It is a gift," said the doctor.

"No. It's a nuisance," laughed the reporter. "I see so many things I don't want to see. I see when women are lying to me. I see when men are on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and whether it is drink or debt or morphine"——

The doctor snorted triumphantly.

"You did not see that the widow was on the verge of a breakdown!"

"No," returned the reporter. "Is she? I'm sorry."

"If you're sorry," urged the doctor, eagerly, "you'll help her. She is going to London alone to find her husband. He has disappeared. She thinks that he has been murdered, or that he is lying ill in some hospital. I told her if anyone could help her to find him you could. She is very ill."

"London is a large town," Ford remarked.

"She has photographs of him and she knows where he spends his time," pleaded the doctor. "He is a company promoter. It should be easy for you."

"Maybe he doesn't want her to find him," said Ford. "Then it wouldn't be so easy for me."

The old doctor sighed heavily. "I know," he murmured. "I thought of that, too. And she is so very pretty. She must stop worrying," he exclaimed, "or she will have a mental collapse. I have tried sedatives, but they don't touch her. I want to give her courage. She is frightened. She's left a baby boy at home, and she's fearful that something will happen to him, and she's frightened at being at sea, frightened at being alone in London; it's pitiful." The old man shook his head. "Pitiful! Will you talk to her now?" he asked.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Ford. "She doesn't want to tell the story of her life to strange young men."

"But it was she suggested it," cried the doctor. "She asked me if you were Austin Ford, the great detective."

Ford snorted scornfully. "She did not!" he protested. His tone was that of a man who hopes to be contradicted.

"But she did," insisted the doctor, "and I told her that your specialty was tracing persons. Her face lightened at once; it gave her hope. She will listen to you."

"Where is the lady now?" asked Ford.

Dr. Sparrow scrambled eagerly to his feet. "She cannot leave her cabin," he answered.

* * * * * * * *

The widow, as Ford and Dr. Sparrow still thought of her, was lying on the sofa that ran the length of the stateroom. She was fully dressed, except that instead of her bodice she wore a kimono. She had been sleeping, and when their entrance awoke her, her blue eyes regarded them uncomprehendingly. Ford, hidden from her by the doctor, observed that not only was she very pretty, but that she was absurdly young, and that the drowsy smile she turned upon the old man before she noted the presence of Ford was as innocent as that of a baby. Her cheeks were flushed, her eyes brilliant, her yellow curls had become loosened and were spread upon the pillow. When she saw Ford she caught the kimono so closely around her throat that she choked.

"I thought," she stammered, "he was an old man."

The doctor, misunderstanding, hastened to reassure her. "Mr. Ford is old in experience," he said, soothingly. "He has had remarkable success. Why, he found a criminal once just because the man wore a collar. And he found Walsh, the burglar, and Phillips the forger, and a gang of counterfeiters"—— Mrs. Ashton turned upon him her eyes, wide with wonder.

"But my husband," she protested, "is not a criminal!"

"My dear lady!" the doctor cried. "I did not mean that, of course not. I meant, if Mr. Ford can find men who don't wish to be found, how easy for him to find a man who"—— He turned helplessly to Ford. "You tell her," he begged.

Ford sat down on a steamer trunk, and, turning to the widow, gave her the full benefit of his working smile. It was confiding, helpless, appealing.

"Dr. Sparrow tells me," began Ford, timidly, "you have lost your husband's address; that you will let me try to find him. If I can help in any way I should be glad."

The young girl regarded him, apparently, with disappointment. It was as though Dr. Sparrow had led her to expect a man full of years and authority; a man upon whom she could lean; not a youth whose smile seemed to beg one not to scold him. She gave Ford three photographs bound together with a string.

"When Dr. Sparrow told me you could help me I got out these," she said.

Ford jotted down a mental note to the effect that she "got them out." That is, she did not keep them where she could always look at them.

The first photograph showed three men standing in an open place and leaning on a railing. One of them was smiling toward the photographer. He was a good-looking young man of about 30 years of age, well fed, well dressed and apparently well satisfied with the world and himself. Ford's eyes were alert and interested.

"The one with the panama hat pulled down over his eyes is your husband?" he asked.

"Yes," assented the widow. Her tone showed slight surprise.

"This was taken about a year ago?" inquired Ford. "Must have been," he answered himself; "they haven't raced at the bay since then. This was taken in front of the club stand—probably for the Telegraph?" He lifted his eyes inquiringly.

Rising on her elbow, the young wife bent forward toward the photograph. "Does it say that there?" she asked, doubtfully. "How did you guess that?"

In his role as chorus the ship's doctor exclaimed, with enthusiasm: "Didn't I tell you? He's wonderful."

Ford cut him off impatiently. "You never saw a rail as high as that except around a racetrack," he muttered. "And the badge in his buttonhole and the angle of the stand all show"——

He interrupted himself to address the widow: "This is an owner's badge. What was the name of his stable?"

"I don't know," she answered. She regarded the young man with sudden uneasiness. "They only owned one horse, but I believe that gave him the privilege of"——

"I see," exclaimed Ford. "Your husband is a bookmaker. But in London he is a promoter of companies."

"So my friend tells me," said Mrs. Ashton. "She's just got back from London. Her husband told her Harry, my husband, was always at the American bar in the Cecil or at the Salisbury or at the Savoy." The girl shook her head. "But a woman can't go looking for a man there," she said. "That's why I thought"——

"That'll be all right," Ford assured her, hurriedly. "It happens that my own work takes me to these hotels, and if your husband is there I will find him." He returned the photographs.

"Hadn't you better keep one?" she asked.

"I won't forget him," said the reporter. "Besides"—he turned his eyes toward the doctor, and, as though thinking aloud, said—"he may have grown a beard."

The eyes of the woman grew troubled. Her lips pressed together as though in a sudden access of pain.

"And he may," Ford continued, "have changed his name."

As though fearful, if she spoke, the tears would fall, the girl nodded her head stiffly.

Having learned what he wanted to know, Ford applied to the wound a soothing ointment of promises and encouragement.

"He's as good as found," he protested. "You will see him in a day, two days, after you land."

The girl's eyes opened happily. She clasped her hands together and raised them.

"You will try?" she begged. "You will find him for me"—she corrected herself, eagerly—"for me and the baby?"

The loose sleeves of the kimono fell back to her shoulders, showing the white arms; the eyes raised to Ford were glistening with tears.

"Of course I will find him," growled the reporter.

He freed himself from the appeal in the eyes of the young mother and left the cabin. The doctor followed. He was bubbling over with enthusiasm.

"That was fine!" he cried. "You said just the right thing. There will be no collapse now."

His satisfaction was swept away in a burst of disgust.

"The blackguard!" he protested. "To desert a wife as young as that and as pretty as that."

"So I have been thinking," said the reporter. "I guess," he added, gravely, "what is going to happen is that before I find her husband I will have to know him pretty well."

Apparently, young Mrs. Ashton believed everything would come to pass just as Ford promised it would, for the next day, with courage in her eyes, she joined Ford and the doctor at the luncheon table. Her attention was concentrated on the younger man. In him she saw the one person who could bring her husband to her.

"She acts," growled the doctor later, in the smoking room, "as though she was afraid you were going to back out of your promise and jump overboard."

"Don't think," he protested violently, "it's you she's interested in. All she sees in you is what you can do for her. Can you see that?"

"Anyone as clever at seeing things as I am," returned the reporter, "cannot help but see that."

Later, as Ford was walking on the upper deck, Mrs. Ashton came toward him, beating her way against the wind. Without a trace of coquetry or self-consciousness, and with a sigh of content, she laid her hand on his arm.

"When I don't see you," she exclaimed, as simply as a child, "I feel so frightened. When I see you I know all will come right. Do you mind if I walk with you?" she asked. "And do you mind if every now and then I ask you to tell me again it will all come right?"

For the three days following Mrs. Ashton and Ford were constantly together. Or, at least, Mrs. Ashton was constantly with Ford. She told him that when she sat in her cabin the old fears returned to her, and in these moments of panic she searched the ship for him.

The doctor protested that he was growing jealous.

THE AMATEUR (Continued)

"I'm not so greatly to be envied," suggested Ford. "'Harry' at meals three times a day and on deck all the rest of the day becomes monotonous. On a closer acquaintance with Harry he seems to be a decent sort of young man; at least he seems to have been at one time very much in love with her."

"Well," sighed the doctor, sentimentally, "she is certainly very much in love with Harry."

Ford shook his head noncommittingly. "I don't know her story," he said. "Don't want to know it."

* * * * * * *

The ship was in the channel on her way to Cherbourg, running as smoothly as a clock. From the shore friendly lights told them they were nearing their journey's end; that the land was on every side. Seated on a steamer chair next to his in the semi-darkness of the deck, Mrs. Ashton began to talk nervously and eagerly.

"Now that we are so near," she murmured, "I have got to tell you something. If you did not know I should feel I had not been fair."

"You mean," said the amateur detective, "that your husband has deserted you. That if it were not for the baby you would not try to find him. Is that it?"

"Yes," she whispered, "that is it."

There was a long pause. When she faced him again the fact that there was no longer a secret between them seemed to give her courage.

"Maybe," she said, "you can understand. Maybe you can tell me what it means. I have gone over it and over it until when I go back to it my head aches. I can't find any excuse. I have no one to talk to, no one I could tell. I thought maybe a man could understand." She raised her eyes appealingly.

"If you can only make it seem less cruel. Don't you see?" she cried miserably. "I want to believe; I want to forgive him. I want to think he loves me. Oh, I want so to be able to love him, but how can I? I can't! I can't!"

In the week in which they had been thrown together the girl unconsciously had told Ford much about herself and her husband. What she now told him was but an amplification of what he had guessed.

She had met Ashton a year and a half before, when she had just left school at the convent and had returned to live with her family. Her home was at Far Rockaway. Her father was a cashier in a bank at Long Island City. One night, with a party of friends, she had been taken to a dance at one of the beach hotels, and there met Ashton. At that time he was one of a firm that was making a book at the Aqueduct racetrack. The girl had met very few men and with them she was shy and frightened, but with Ashton she found herself at once at ease. That night he drove her and her friends home in his touring car and the next day they teased her about her conquest. It made her very happy. After that she went to hops at the hotel, and as the bookmaker did not dance, the two young people sat upon the piazza. Then Ashton came to see her at her own house, but when her father learned that the young man who had been calling upon her was a bookmaker he told him he could not associate with his daughter.

But the girl was now deeply in love with Ashton, and apparently he with her. He begged her to marry him. They agreed that in August, when the racing moved to Saratoga, they would run away and get married at that place. Their plan was that Ashton would leave for Saratoga with the other racing men, and that she would join him the next day.

They had arranged to be married by a Magistrate, and Ashton had shown her a letter from one at Saratoga who consented to perform the ceremony. He had given her an engagement ring and $2000, which he asked her to keep for him, lest, tempted at the racetrack, he should lose it.

But she assured Ford it was not such material things as a letter, a ring or a gift of money that had led her to trust Ashton. His fear of losing her, his complete subjection to her wishes, his happiness in her presence, all seemed to prove that to make her happy was his one wish, and that he could do anything to make her unhappy appeared impossible.

They were married the morning she arrived at Saratoga, and the same day departed for Niagara Falls and Quebec. The honeymoon lasted 10 days. They were 10 days of complete happiness. No one, so the girl declared, could have been more kind, more unselfishly considerate than her husband. They returned to Saratoga and engaged a suite of rooms at one of the big hotels. Ashton was not satisfied with the rooms shown him, and, leaving her upstairs, returned to the office to ask for others.

Since that moment the wife had never seen him nor heard from him.

On the day of her marriage young Mrs. Ashton had written to her father, asking him to give her his good wishes and pardon. He refused both. The letters he wrote his daughter were so bitter that in reply she informed him he had forced her to choose between her family and her husband, and that she chose her husband. In consequence, when she found herself deserted she felt she could not return to her people. She remained in Saratoga. There she moved into cheap lodgings, and in order that the $2000 Ashton had left with her might be saved for his child, she had learned to typewrite, and after four months had been able to support herself. Within the last month a girl friend, who had known both Ashton and herself before they were married, had written her that her husband was living in London. For the sake of her son she had at once determined to make an effort to seek him out.

"The son! Nonsense!" exclaimed the doctor, when Ford retold the story. "She is not crossing the ocean because she is worried about the future of her son. She seeks her own happiness. The woman is in love with her husband."

Ford shook his head.

"I don't know!" he objected. "She's so extravagant in her praise of Harry that it seems unreal. It sounds insincere. Then, again, when I swear I will find him she shows a delight that you might describe as savage, almost vindictive. As though, if I did find Harry, the first thing she would do would be to stick a knife in him."

"Maybe," volunteered the doctor, sadly, "she has heard there is a woman in the case. Maybe she is the one she's thinking of sticking the knife into?"

"Well," declared the reporter, "if she doesn't stop looking savage every time I promise to find Harry I won't find Harry. How do I know that Harry hasn't got a wife in London and several in the States? How do we know that he didn't leave the country for his country's good? That's what it looks like to me. How can we tell what confronted him the day he went down to the hotel desk to change his rooms and, instead, got into his touring car and beat the speed limit to Canada? Whom did he meet in the hotel corridor? A woman with a perfectly good marriage certificate, or a detective with a perfectly good warrant? Or did Harry find out that his bride had a devil of a temper of her own, and that for him marriage was a failure? The widow is certainly a very charming young woman, but there may be two sides to this."

"You are a cynic, sir," protested the doctor.

"That may be," growled the reporter, "but I am not a private detective agency, or a matrimonial bureau, and before I hear myself saying, 'Bless you, my children!' both of these young people will have to show me why they should not be kept asunder."

* * * * * * * *

On the afternoon of their arrival in London Ford conveyed Mrs. Ashton to an old-established private hotel in Craven street.

"Here," he explained, "you will be within a few hundred yards of the place in which your husband is said to spend his time. I will be living in the same hotel. If I find him you will know it in 10 minutes."

The widow gave a little gasp, whether of excitement or of happiness Ford could not determine.

"Whatever happens," she begged, "will you let me hear from you sometimes? You are the only person I know in London—and it's so big it frightens me. I don't want to be a burden," she went on, eagerly, "but if I can feel you are within call"——

"What you need," said Ford, heartily, "is less of the doctor's nerve tonic and sleeping drafts and a little innocent diversion. Tonight I am going to take you to the Savoy to supper."

Mrs. Ashton exclaimed delightedly, and then was filled with misgivings.

"I have nothing to wear," she protested, "and over here, in the evening, the women dress so well. I have a dinner gown," she exclaimed, "but it's black. Would that do?"

Ford assured her nothing could be better. He had a man's vanity in liking a woman with whom he was seen in public to be pretty and smartly dressed, and he felt sure that in black the blonde beauty of Mrs. Ashton would appear to advantage. They arranged to meet at 11 on the promenade leading to the Savoy supper room, and parted with mutual satisfaction at the prospect.

* * * * * * * *

The finding of Harry Ashton was so simple that in its very simplicity it appeared spectacular.

On leaving Mrs. Ashton, Ford engaged rooms at the Hotel Cecil. Before visiting his rooms he made his way to the American bar. He did not go there seeking Harry Ashton. His object was entirely self-centered. But as though by appointment, the man he had promised to find was waiting for him. As Ford entered the room, at a table facing the door sat Ashton. There was no mistaking him. He wore a mustache, but it was no disguise. He was the same good-natured, good-looking youth who, in the photograph, from under the panama hat, had smiled upon the world. With a glad cry Ford rushed toward him.

"Fancy meeting you!" he exclaimed.

Mr. Ashton's good-natured smile did not relax. He merely shook his head.

"Afraid you have made a mistake," he said.

The reporter regarded him blankly. His face showed his disappointment.

"Aren't you Charles W. Garret of New York?" he demanded.

"Not me," said Mr. Ashton.

"But," Ford insisted, in hurt tones, as though he were being trifled with, "you have been told you look like him, haven't you?"

Mr. Ashton's good nature was unassailable.

"Sorry," he declared, "never heard of him."

Ford became garrulous, he could not believe two men could look so much alike. The stranger must certainly have a drink, the drink intended for his twin. Ashton was bored, but accepted. He was well acquainted with the easy good-fellowship of his countrymen. The room in which he sat was a meeting place for them. This one, though as loquacious as the others, seemed better dressed, more "wise," he brought to the exile the atmosphere of his beloved Broadway, so Ashton drank to him pleasantly.

"My name is Sydney Carter," he volunteered.

As a poker player skims over the cards in his hand, Ford, in his mind's eye, ran over the value of not giving his right name. He decided that Ashton would not have heard it, and that, if he gave a false one, there was a chance that later Ashton might find out that he had done so. Accordingly he said: "Mine is Austin Ford," and seated himself at Ashton's table. Within 10 minutes the man he had promised to pluck from among the 8,000,000 inhabitants of London was smiling sympathetically at his jests and buying a drink.

On the steamer Ford had rehearsed the story with which, should he meet Ashton, he would introduce himself. It was one arranged to fit with his theory Ashton was a crook. If Ashton were a crook, Ford argued that to at once ingratiate himself in his good graces he also must be a crook. His plan was to invite Ashton to co-operate with him in some scheme that was openly dishonest. By so doing he hoped apparently to place himself at Ashton's mercy. He believed if he could persuade Ashton he was more of a rascal than Ashton himself, and an exceedingly stupid rascal, any distrust the bookmaker might feel toward him would disappear. He made the advances so openly, and apparently showed his hand so carelessly, that, from being bored, Ashton became puzzled, then interested, and when Ford insisted he should dine with him, he considered it so necessary to find out who the youth might be who was forcing himself upon him that he accepted the invitation.

They adjourned to dress, and an hour later, at Ford's suggestion, they met at the Carlton. There Ford ordered a dinner calculated to lull his newly made friend into a mood suited to confidence, but which had on Ashton exactly the opposite effect. In Ford's hospitality he saw only cause for suspicion. If, as he had first feared, Ford was a New York detective, it was most important he should know that. No one better than Ashton understood that, at that moment, his presence in New York meant, for the police, unalloyed satisfaction, and for himself undisturbed solitude. It was true. Ford was familiar with all the habits of Broadway and the Tenderloin. Of places with which Ashton was intimate, and of men with whom Ashton had formerly been well acquainted, he talked glibly. But, if he were a detective, Ashton considered, they certainly had improved the class.

The restaurant into which for the first time Ashton had penetrated, and in which he felt ill at ease, was to Ford, he observed, a matter of course. Evidently for Ford it held no terrors. He criticised the service.

So Children Will Not Grow Up to Be Snobs

"Oh, yes," replied the poor man's daughter. "She always gives us 50 cents to spend when we go out."

"Why, I never had so much money in my life," said the child of the multimillionaire. "We get only 25 cents a week."

Thus the leavening process is going on. It is not local. It is being done in every part of the globe where democracy is prized. Even in England, where property descends to the eldest son, one of the signs of the times is the greatest educational war on snobbery that has ever been waged there.

Shelby H. Curlee, a wealthy St. Louis clothing manufacturer, is fond of saying that he hopes his only son, now 18 years old, will be as good a business man as one of his clothing factory employes, who started in as operator of a sewing machine and is now a buyer for the company at the age of 25.

The buyer never had the advantage of "higher education." The son is in a noted finishing school at Andover, Mass.

"Many persons have a wrong idea about what they consider the fortunate position of the rich man's son," said Curlee. "I don't think there is much snobbishness in America, and I don't think there is any in the Middle West. We hear a good deal of the 'advantages' enjoyed by rich men's sons. I don't know that they really are advantages. They certainly are not unless the boy has had the best sort of home training to prevent him from being a snob. When I consider the man here who has risen in a few years from a sewing machine operator to one of the best buyers in the business, I sometimes wonder if my boy's start has been as good as his. My only hope that it has is based on my belief that the boy's early training has been such that when he finishes his college course and comes back here to learn the business, he will look up to that buyer and not look down on him. I sincerely believe he will. I have tried to instill into him the idea that money in itself is nothing and it is a curse if it is not rightly used. When my boy wants a suit of clothes we talk it over to determine if he really needs it. I have never given money to him unless he could show me the need for it and tell me just what he whether they be speeders, bandits, whisky runners or smugglers. The possibility of a collision with a low-flying airplane will be an everpresent menace to lawbreakers who try to seek safety in flight on the country roads within a wide radius of San Antonio.

Flying boats have been used successfully in the United States revenue service to locate "rum runners" and smugglers' craft at sea, but the San Antonio air policemen were the first to make official use of land planes in hunting down criminals.

Thus another peace-time use has been found for the airplane, which already had been put to strange uses in many fields of endeavor.

The air above thousands of acres of Government forest preserves in the West has been dotted with forest patrol airplanes, whose pilots are on the lookout constantly for signs of fire. When one of these pilots discovers a fire he signals the ground forces by radio or wireless and the fire is quickly extinguished. Many private lumber companies also maintain airplane fire patrols.

In remote corners of the earth the airplane has been used by prospectors, racing to be the first on the ground to open up new oil fields. In the Philippines railroads have been surveyed from airplanes and aerial photography as an aid to map making in all parts of the globe has become a giant industry.

In Newfoundland the airplane is used in locating herds of seals and in carrying hunters to them.

The airplane has been extensively used in obtaining and disseminating news and the "flying drummer," newest type of commercial traveler for enterprising business firms, has been able to put it all over his slower brother who still depends on railroad transportation. Oil well operators and rice plantation owners have used airplanes to make inspections of their properties and cases have been rep

HENRY FORD

One of her characteristics is a marked fondness for flowers. In this connection she ruefully exclaimed one day at the inability of wealth to supply all wants: "Like my mother, I love old-fashioned pinks," she said. "In search of them, I haunted florist shops, cemeteries and farmhouses, but nobody knew where I could get any. My dressmaker's sister finally supplied them." She now has several large beds.

At the beginning of the war, long before America was involved, Mrs. Ford leased Cathrington Hall, in Cheeshire Township, England, near her mother's birthplace, and equipped it as a home for Belgian refugees. In contingents of 100 they were given clothing and sheltered and fed until other arrangements could be made for them. Teachers were employed for the children, and those who remained long enough were given occupational training.

Mrs. Ford's most intimate friends, it is interesting to know, are those farmers' daughters whom she knew in girlhood. There are numerous stories of ambitious salesmen who sought to peddle jewelry and ornate objects of art to this new multimillionaire's lady, all without success.

Such is the home and family life of one of America's most remarkable men. As for his public career, the history cannot be completed, because Henry Ford thinks, and some others think, too, that the biggest things of his life are yet to be accomplished.

THE AMATEUR - -

patronized the head waiters and grumbled at the food; and when, on leaving the restaurant, an Englishman and his wife stopped at their table to greet him, he accepted their welcome to London without embarrassment.

Ashton, rolling his cigar between his lips, observed the incident with increasing bewilderment.

"You've got some swell friends," he growled. "I'll bet you never met them at Healey's!"

"I meet all kinds of people in my business," said Ford. "I once sold that man some mining stock, and the joke of it was," he added, smiling knowingly, "it turned out to be good."

Ashton decided that the psychological moment had arrived.

"What is your business?" he asked.

"I'm a company promoter," said Ford, easily. "I thought I told you."

"I did not tell you that I was a company promoter, son, did I?" demanded Ashton.

"No," answered Ford, with apparent surprise. "Are you? That's funny."

Ashton watched for the next move, but the subject seemed in no way to interest Ford. Instead of following it up he began afresh.

"Have you any money lying idle?" he asked, abruptly. "About a thousand pounds?"

Ashton recognized that the mysterious stranger was about to disclose both himself and whatever object he had in seeking him out. He cast a quick glance about him.

"I can always find money," he said, guardedly. "What's the proposition?"

With pretended nervousness Ford leaned forward and began the story he had rehearsed. It was a new version of an old swindle and to every self-respecting confidence man was well known as the "sick-engineer" game. The plot is very simple. The sick engineer is supposed to be a mining engineer who, as an expert, has examined a gold mine and reported against it. For his services the company paid him partly in stock. He falls ill and is at the point of death. While he has been ill much gold has been found in the mine he examined, and the stock which he considers worthless is now valuable. Of this, owing to his illness, he is ignorant. One confidence man acts the part of the sick engineer, and the other that of a broker who knows the engineer possesses the stock but has no money with which to purchase it from him. For a share of the stock he offers to tell the dupe where and the engineer can be found. They visit the man, apparently at the point of death, and the dupe gives him money for his stock. Later the dupe finds the stock is worthless and the supposed engineer and the supposed broker divide the money he paid for it. In telling the story Ford pretended he was the broker and that he thought in Ashton he had found a dupe who would buy the stock from the sick engineer.

As the story unfolded and Ashton appreciated the part Ford expected him to play in it, amusement, joy, chagrin and indignation illuminated his countenance. His cigar ceased to burn, and with his eyes opened wide he regarded Ford in pitying wonder.

"Wait!" he commanded. He shook his head uncomprehendingly. "Tell me," he asked, "do I look as easy as that, or are you just naturally foolish?"

Ford pretended to fall into a state of great alarm.

"I don't understand," he stammered.

"Why, son," exclaimed Ashton, kindly, "I was taught that story in the public schools. I stopped using it before you cut your teeth. See!" he exclaimed, delightedly. "I knew I had grown respectable looking, but I didn't think I was so damned respectable looking as that!" He began to laugh silently, so greatly was he amused that the tears shone in his eyes and his shoulders shook.

"I'm sorry for you, son," he protested, "but that's the funniest thing that's come my way in two years. And you buying me hothouse grapes, too, and fancy water! I wish you could see your face," he taunted.

Ford pretended to be greatly chagrined.

"All right," he declared, roughly. "The laugh's on me this time, but just because I lost one trick don't think I don't know my business. Now that I'm wise to what you are we can work together and"——

The face of young Mr. Ashton became instantly grave. His jaws snapped like a trap. When he spoke his tone was assured and slightly contemptuous.

"Not with me you can't work!" he said.

"Don't think because I fell down on this," Ford began, hotly.

"I'm not thinking of you at all," said Ashton. "You're a nice little fellow, all right, but you have sized me up wrong. I am on the 'straight and narrow' that leads back to little old New York and God's country, and I am warranted not to run off my trolley."

The words were in the vernacular, but the tone in which the young man spoke rang so confidently that it brought to Ford a pleasant thrill of satisfaction. From the first he had found in the personality of the young man something winning and likable; a shrewd manliness and tolerant good humor. His eyes may have shown his sympathy, for, in sudden confidence, Ashton leaned nearer.

"It's like this," he said. "Several years ago I made a bad break and, about a year later, they got on to me and I had to cut and run. In a month the law of limitation lets me loose and I can go back. And you can bet I'm going back. I will be on the bowsprit of the first boat. I've had all I want of the 'fugitive-from-justice' game, thank you; and I have taken good care to keep a clean bill of health so that I won't have to play it again. They've been trying to get me for several years—especially the Pinkertons. They have chased me all over Europe. Chased me with all kinds of men; sometimes with women; they've tried everything except bloodhounds. At first I thought you were a 'Pink,' that's why"——

"I!" interrupted Ford, exploding derisively. "That's good! That's one on you." He ceased laughing and regarded Ashton kindly. "How do you know I'm not?" he asked.

For an instant the face of the bookmaker grew a shade less red and his eyes searched those of Ford in a quick agony of suspicion. Ford continued to smile steadily at him, and Ashton breathed with relief.

"I'll take a chance with you," he said, "and if you are as bad a detective as you are a sport, I needn't worry."

They both laughed, and, with sudden mutual liking, each raised his glass and nodded.

"But they haven't got me yet," continued Ashton, "and unless they get me in the next 30 days I'm free. So you needn't think that I'll help you. It's 'never again' for me. The first time, that was the fault of the crowd I ran with; the second time, that would be my fault. And there ain't going to be any second time."

He shook his head doggedly, and with squared shoulders leaned back in his chair.

"If it only breaks right for me," he declared, "I'll settle down in one of those 'own-your-own-homes,' 45 minutes from Broadway, and never leave the wife and baby."

The words almost brought Ford to his feet. He had forgotten the wife and the baby. He endeavored to explain his surprise by a sudden assumption of incredulity.

"Fancy you married!" he exclaimed.

"Married!" protested Ashton. "I'm married to the finest little lady that ever wore skirts, and in 37 days I'll see her. Thirty-seven days," he repeated, impatiently. "Gee! That's a hell of a long time!"

Ford studied the young man with increased interest. That he was speaking sincerely from the heart, there seemed no possible doubt.

Ashton frowned and his face clouded. "I've not been able to treat her just right," he volunteered. "If she wrote me, the letters might give them a clue, and I didn't want her to know all my troubles until they're over. But I know," he added, "that five minutes' talk will set it all right. That is, if she still feels about me the way I feel about her."

The man crushed his cigar in his fingers and threw the pieces on the floor. "That's been the worst!" he exclaimed bitterly. "Not hearing, not knowing. It's been hell!"

His eyes as he raised them were filled with suffering, deep and genuine.

Ford rose suddenly. "Let's go down to the Savoy for supper," he said.

"Supper!" growled Ashton. "What's the use of supper? Do you suppose cold chicken and a sardine can keep me from thinking?"

Ford placed his hand on the other's shoulder.

"You come with me," he said kindly. "I'm going to do you a favor. I'm going to bring you a piece of luck. Don't ask me any questions," he commanded hurriedly. "Just take my word for it."

They had sat so late over their cigars that when they reached the restaurant on the embankment the supper room was already partly filled, and the corridors and lounge were brilliantly lit and gay with well-dressed women. Ashton regarded the scene with gloomy eyes. Since he had spoken of his wife he had remained silent, chewing savagely on a fresh cigar. But Ford was grandly excited. He did not know exactly what he intended to do. He was prepared to let events direct themselves, but of two things he was assured: Mrs. Ashton loved her husband, and her husband loved her. As the god in the car who was to bring them together, he felt a delightful responsibility.

The young men left the coatroom and came down the short flight of steps that leads to the wide lounge of the restaurant. Ford slightly in advance, searching with his eyes for Mrs. Ashton, found her seated alone in the lounge, evidently waiting for him. At the first glance she was hardly to be recognized. Her low-cut dinner gown of black satin was the last word of the new fashion; and since Ford had seen her her blonde hair had been arranged by an artist. Her appearance was smart, elegant, daring. She was easily the prettiest and most striking looking woman in the room, and for an instant Ford stood gazing at her, trying to find in the self-possessed young woman the deserted wife of the steamer. She did not see Ford. Her eyes were following the progress down the hall of a woman, and her profile was toward him.

The thought of the happiness he was about to bring to two young people gave Ford the sense of a genuine triumph, and when he turned to Ashton to point out his wife to him he was thrilling with pride and satisfaction. His triumph received a bewildering shock. Already Ashton had discovered the presence of Mrs. Ashton. He was standing transfixed, lost to his surroundings, devouring her with his eyes. And then, to the amazement of Ford, his eyes filled with fear, doubt and anger. Swiftly, with the movement of a man ducking a blow, he turned and sprang up the stairs and into the coat room. Ford, bewildered and more conscious of his surroundings, followed him less quickly, and was in consequence only in time to see Ashton dragging his overcoat behind him, disappear into the courtyard. He seized his own coat and raced in pursuit. As he ran into the courtyard, Ashton, in the Strand, was just closing the door of a taxicab, but before the chauffeur could free it from the surrounding traffic, Ford had dragged the door open and leaped in. Ashton was huddled in the corner, panting, his face pale with alarm.

"What the devil ails you?" roared Ford. "Are you trying to shake me? You've got to come back. You must speak to her."

"Speak to her!" repeated Ashton. His voice was sunk to a whisper. The look of alarm in his face was confused with one grim and menacing. "Did you know she was there?" he demanded, softly. "Did you take me there, knowing"——

"Of course I knew," protested Ford. "She's been looking for you"——

His voice subsided in a squeak of amazement and pain. Ashton's left hand had shot out and swiftly seized his throat. With the other he pressed an automatic revolver against Ford's shirt front.

"I know she's been looking for me," the man whispered, thickly. "For two years she's been looking for me. I know all about her! But, who in hell are you?"

Ford, gasping and gurgling, protested loyally.

"You are wrong!" he cried. "She's been at home waiting for you. She thinks you have deserted her and your baby. I tell you she loves you, you fool, she loves you!"

The fingers on his throat suddenly relaxed; the flaming eyes of Ashton, glaring into his, wavered and grew wide with amazement.

"Loves me," he whispered. "Who loves me?"

"Your wife," protested Ford, "the girl at the Savoy; your wife."

Again the fingers of Ashton pressed deep around his neck.

"That is not my wife," he whispered. His voice was unpleasantly cold and grim. "That's 'Baby Belle,' with her hair dyed, a detective lady of the Pinkertons, hired to find me. And you know it. Now, who are you?"

To permit him to reply, Ashton released his hand, but at the same moment dug the revolver deeper into the pit of Ford's stomach.

"Quick!" he commanded. "Never mind the girl. Who are you?"

Ford collapsed against the cushioned corner of the cab. "And she begged me to find you," he roared, "because she loved you, because she wanted to believe in you!" He held his arms above his head. "Go ahead and shoot!" he cried. "You want to know who I am?" he demanded. His voice rang with rage. "I'm an amateur. Just a natural born fool amateur! Go on and shoot!"

The gun in Ashton's hand sank to his knee. Between doubt and laughter his face was twisted in strange lines. The cab was whirling through a narrow, unlit street leading to Covent Garden. Opening the door, Ashton called to the chauffeur, and then turned to Ford.

"You get off here!" he commanded. "Maybe you're a 'Pink,' maybe you're a good fellow. I think you're a good fellow, but I'm not taking any chances. Get out!"

Ford scrambled to the street, and as the taxicab again butted itself forward, Ashton leaned far through the window. "Good-by, son," he called. "Send me a picture postal card to Paris. For I am off to Maxim's," he cried, "and you can go to"——

"Not at all!" shouted the amateur detective, indignantly. "I am going back to take supper with 'Baby Belle'!"

The Flapper Wins

low-neck frocks were once considered the acme of daring?' No, this modesty is a relative thing."

"Yes, the modern girl is less modest," averred Mrs. Starr. "I admit that modesty may be a matter of how much exposure of the anatomy is tolerated by custom. Some old-fashioned persons like myself balk at having it all disclosed at once. I prefer my art veiled."

The audience waited while the jury deliberated. In a less polite gathering bets would have been wagered as to which side would win out. The advocates of the Victorian damsel were sure that Mrs. Starr had proven herself an able champion, whereas the boosters of the flapper were sure that Mrs. Brown was a veritable Lohengrin in petticoats who has come to the rescue of the little understood, often maligned Miss of 1922.

While waiting for the verdict, Mrs. Downs appealed to Mrs. Lucretia Blankenburg, known as "the grand old lady of Philadelphia," for an expression of opinion on the girl of today. The revered and beloved old lady evaded giving a direct answer, something unusual for her. Instead she stated that inasmuch as the present age had given political freedom to women she felt that the present generation of women were apt to prove themselves useful citizens.

The jury's verdict acquitted the flapper. Figuratively, she stood triumphant in as conservative a feminine court as could be found throughout the length and breadth of the land.

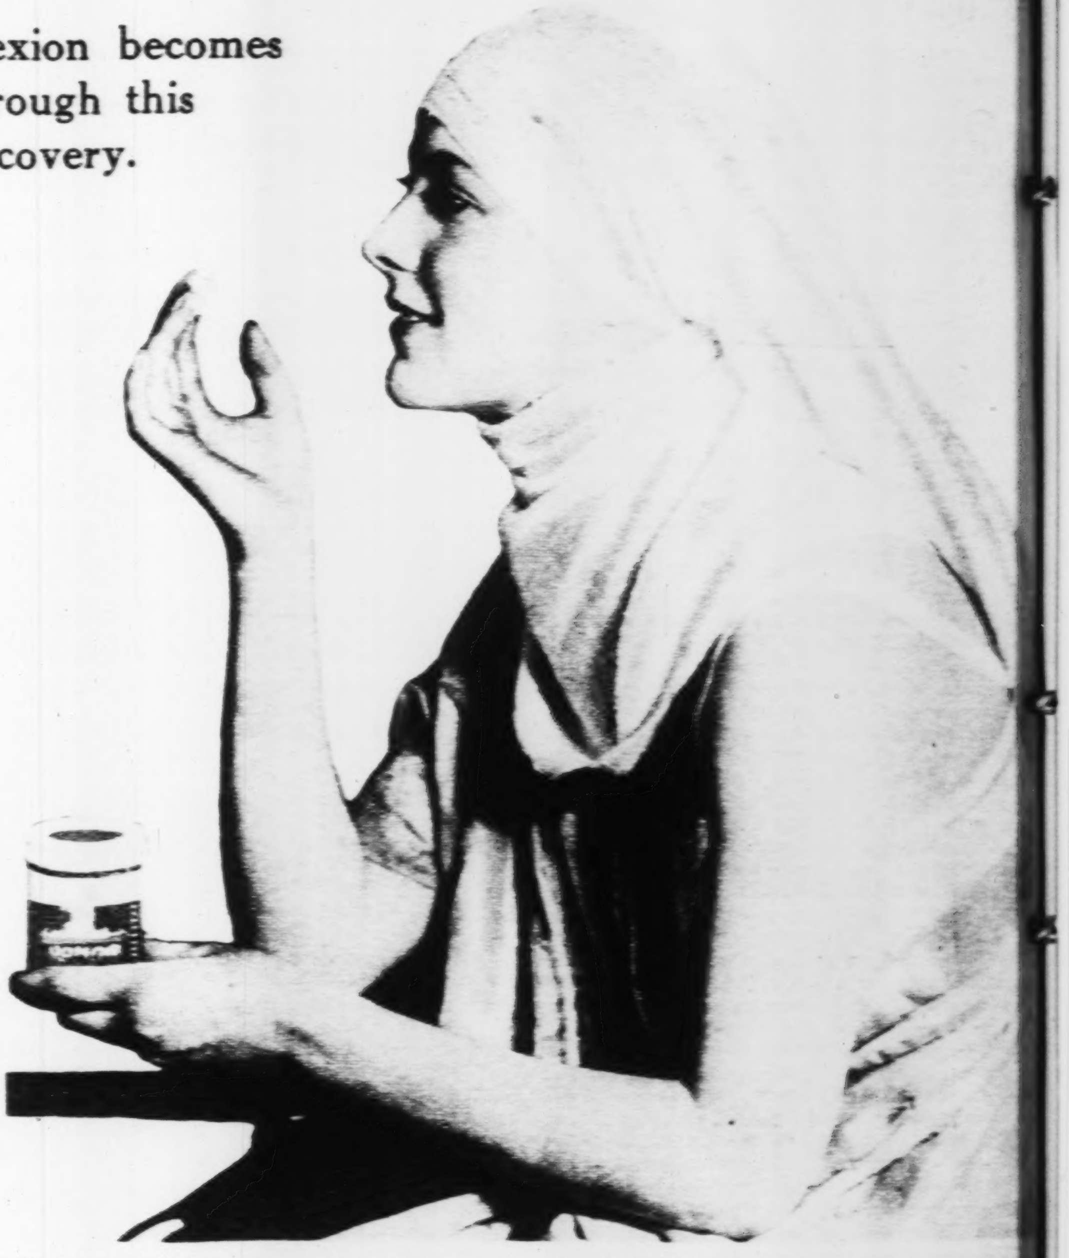
A strong earthquake is sometimes, though not always, preceded by a few slight shocks, and it is invariably followed by numerous shocks of this character. The aftershocks sometimes continue for years. More than 3000 aftershocks were registered by seismographs during the two years following the great Mino-Owari earthquake, in Japan, which occurred Oct. 28, 1891.

Wonderful Clay Brings New Beauty to Every Skin!

Almost at once the complexion becomes clear and beautiful through this amazing scientific discovery.



The beauty of the face is more largely determined by the texture and quality of the skin than by the fea
The marvelous new discovery actually absorbs all blemishes and impurities, lifts away the coarse, dull, unsightly complexion and unmasks an entirely new complexion underneath—one as soft and smooth and charming as a child's! Because it is not a cosmetic, but a pure scientific and hygienic preparation, it cannot harm the most sensitive skin.

SCIENCE is giving new complexions for old through a marvelous new discovery! Dull, coarse, blemished skins are being transformed into exquisite softness and smoothness—almost at once. Years of scientific research and experiment have finally revealed the elements which, when combined in certain exact proportions, remove the dead scales on the surface of the skin, clear the pores of every impurity, and leave the complexion as clear and charming as a child's.

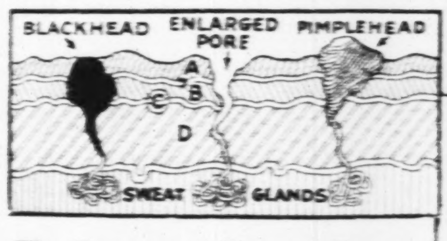
The skin is provided by nature with millions of tiny pores with which to expel acids and impurities. When dust bores deeply into these pores and the use of harmful cosmetics clog them even more, the impurities remain in the skin. The result is not always noticeable at first. But soon the complexion becomes dull and harsh. Suddenly the face "breaks out" in pimples and blackheads. And if the impurities are still allowed to remain, the complexion becomes ruined entirely.

The New Discovery Explained

Certain elements, when correctly combined according to a chemist's formula, have been found to possess a powerful potency. These elements, or ingredients, have been blended into a soft, plastic, cream-like clay, delicately scented. It is applied to the face with the finger tips—just as a cream would be applied.

The name given to this wonderful discovery is Complexion Clay. The moment it is applied, every one of the millions of tiny pores in the skin awaken and hungrily absorb the nourishing skin-foods. In a few minutes the clay dries and hardens, and there is a cool, tingling, pleasant sensation as the powerful clay draws out every skin impurity. You will actually feel the tiny pores breathing, relaxing, freeing themselves with relief from the impurities that clogged and stifled them.

Allow Compexion Clay to remain for a little while. You may read, or sew, or go about your household duties. All the while you will feel the powerful beauty clay doing its work, gently drawing out impurities and absorbing blemishes. A warm towel will soften the clay, and you will be able to roll it off easily with your fingers. And with it you will roll off every scale of dead skin, every harmful impurity, every blemish. A hidden beauty will be unmasked—beneath the old complexion will be revealed a new one with all the soft, smooth texture and delicate coloring of youth.



The Danger of Clogged Pores

When dust clogs the pores, pimples and blackheads make their appearance. Complexion Clay does not cover up or hide these blemishes—it draws out and absorbs the dust and impurities and the complexion is left soft and beautiful.

Not a Cosmetic — Guaranteed Harmless

Complexion Clay does not cover up blemishes and impurities—but removes them at once. There is a feeling almost of physical relief as the facial pores are relieved, as the magic clay draws out the accumulated self-poisons and impurities. You will be amazed when you see the results of only one treatment—the whole face will appear rejuvenated. Not only will the beauty of your complexion be brought to the surface, but enlarged pores will be normally closed, tired lines and bagginess will vanish, mature lines will be softened. Complexion Clay brings life and fervor to every skin cell and leaves the complexion clear, firm, smooth, fresh-looking.

Special Free Examination Offer

In order to enable everyone to test this wonderful new preparation, we are making a very special free-examination offer. If you send in your application now a jar of Complexion Clay, sufficient for three months of beauty treatments, will be sent to you at once, freshly compounded and direct from the Domino House. Although it is a $3.50 product and will cost that much ordinarily, you may pay the postman only $1.95 (plus a few cents postage) in full payment. And despite this special low introductory price you have the guaranteed privilege of returning the jar and having your money refunded at once if you are not delighted with results.

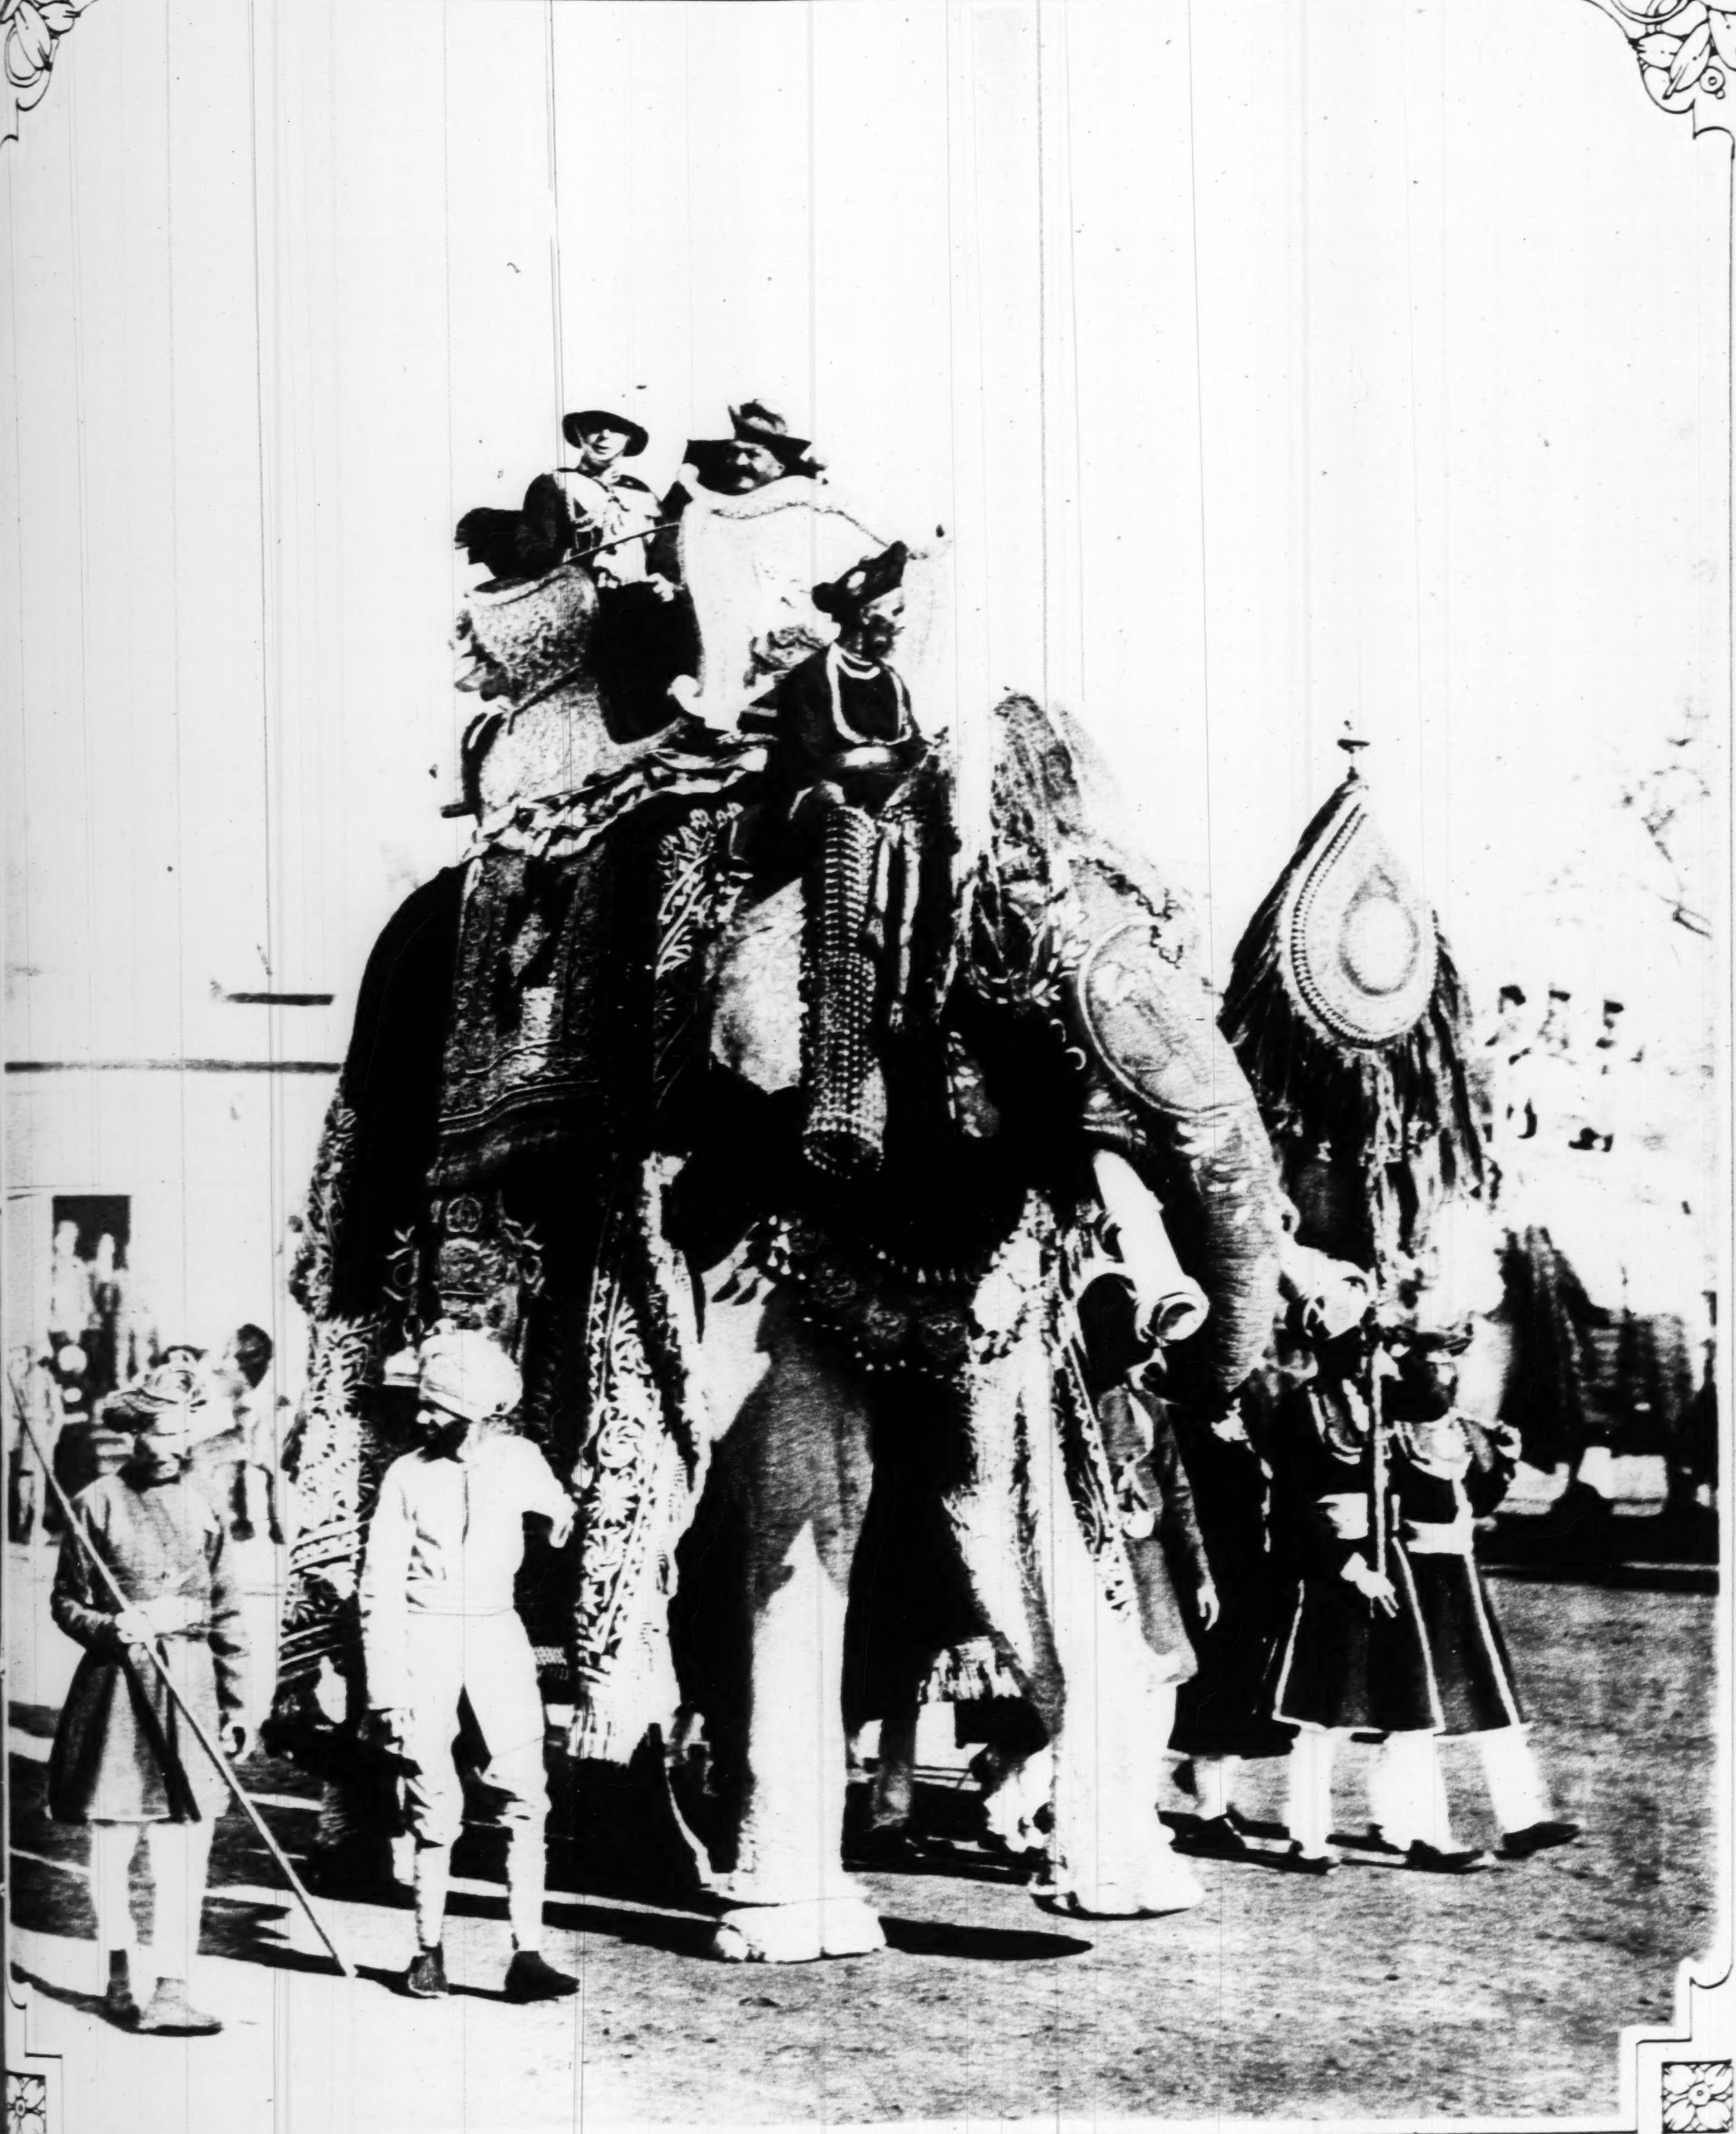
THE PRINCE RIDES IN STATE



This beautiful picture, one of the finest photographs which has come out of India during the Prince of Wales' visit there, shows the Prince riding with the Maharajah of Gwalior on the royal elephant, Hiragaz. The elephant has been sumptuously adorned for the stately procession through the streets of the capital.

In an ancient quarry in Syria lies this enormous block of stone, evidently intended for the Temple of the Sun at Baalbek. The cutting of the block was almost completed, when the workmen laid down their tools for the last time, many centuries ago. How the ancients transported such weights is still a mystery.

We confidently invite you to test Bourjois' [pronounced Bourge-wah] Java* Face Powder against other powders.

If you are able to distinguish the effect that the right powder has on your complexion we think you will like Bourjois' Java. It is unlike all other Face Powders—unlike in its soft fine texture—unlike in its dainty coloring—and unlike in the richness of its elusive and delicate perfume.

HOW EVERY WOMAN CAN ACQUIRE THE KNACK OF PERFECTION IN FRYING

By A. Louise Andrea

Delicious and Wholesome Fried Foods May Be Enjoyed in Every Home

Mrs. Andrea was awarded the gold medal as lecturer on food and culinary topics, at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, in 1915; appointed official lecturer on foods and canning for the New York International Exposition in 1918, and recognized as one of the greatest living authorities on food preparation.

FIRST make sure the frying medium you use is one hundred per cent fat, and not any per cent water—for water will not fry food. A pure vegetable oil is desirable, as it saves the time necessary for bringing solid fat to the melted state. Also, it is quicker and easier to measure an oil accurately.

Mazola embodies all these qualities. You can depend on Mazola to give you naturally flavored as well as correctly-fried products.

Mazola will not carry the flavor from one fried food to another

I have personally used the same Mazola to fry onion rings, cod-fish balls, Saratoga chips and doughnuts, by just straining without clarifying, and none of the flavors have been carried to the other foods. This effects a very substantial saving in your cooking bill in addition to insuring better-tasting food. Frying may be done with just a little Mazola—this method being termed sauteing. The saute, or frying pan, should be heated before Mazola is put into it, and then reheated until the oil is so hot that it "hisses" when food is added.

When deep frying with Mazola, completely immersing the food, you do not need to watch for the "smoke" temperature, as Mazola serves as a frying medium before it reaches this degree of heat. This immersion coats the outside surface quickly and forms a protective crust, preventing the fat from soaking into the food.

For deep frying one must have a commodious sauce pan (preferably of iron, as this metal holds the heat best) and a wire frying basket to hold the food while frying.

Try this method of deep frying—it's very simple

Never load the basket, but lay the food on the bottom (when large) without the pieces touching each other, so that the hot Mazola can act upon all surfaces. Too much food put into the fat at one time will lower its temperature unduly. For the best results, the temperature should be maintained as evenly as possible. Between each immersion re-heat the Mazola.

How to judge the heat

A thermometer, while not absolutely essential, easily ensures the correct frying temperature.

A fairly accurate temperature test, however, may be made with a small cube of bread. For uncooked mixtures, such as fritters, batters and doughnuts, the cube should brown in one minute by actual timing. While for cooked mixtures, such as croquettes, the cubes must brown in 40 seconds.

The sauce pan should be large enough to allow of plenty of Mazola, so that the food can be completely covered, and still allow sufficient room for the bubbling oil, so that it will not overflow.

As soon as the food is lowered into the hot oil the moisture in the food starts bubbling or "boiling." This makes some think that the fat is boiling, but it really comes from the water in the frying food.

The secret of making perfect doughnuts

If you will be careful to follow a few plain rules, you will have none but Perfect Doughnuts, as light as a feather and never greasy.

First, select a good recipe, remembering the old saying that "like attracts like." So do not take a recipe that is rich in eggs and shortening, or the finished doughnut will be apt to soak fat while frying.

The dough must be rolled out to a uniform thickness, preferably quarter inch, so it will be cooked uniformly. The temperature must be just right, and fat sufficiently deep to more than cover doughnuts while frying. Your Mazola should be hot enough to brown cube of bread in one minute. With these points in mind start your doughnut frying with confidence.

After Mazola has been used for deep frying strain it through cheesecloth or very fine wire strainer to free it from particles of food or crumbs, which might burn when the oil is used again.

The greatest sale of any cooking oil

The wonderful economy and high quality of Mazola have given it the greatest sale of any brand of cooking oil.

If you have not yet tried Mazola, get a can from your grocer. Once you try it for frying and cooking you will always prefer it to lard and other animal fats.

Your grocer sells Mazola in pint, quart, ½ gallon and gallon cans. The large size cans are most economical.

MAZOPOPS

Bread dough made with yeast. Mazola for deep frying.

When bread dough has risen and is ready to be shaped into loaves, cut off sufficient dough for one small loaf and roll it out on a slightly floured board to a half-inch thick and cut into rounds with a small floured cutter. Let these stand so that they will not touch each other and in a warm place until they are very light. Then fry in Mazola hot enough to brown a cube of bread in one minute. Serve hot.

SARATOGA CHIPS

Wash and pare potatoes. Slice thinly, using vegetable slicer, into bowl of cold water. Let stand until crisp. Dry between towels and fry in deep, hot Mazola until light brown. Remove from kettle and sprinkle with salt.

Lingette
Everybody thinks it's silk

Lingette—the Wonder Fabric—
A gift of modern weaving magic

It is as though a fairy had taken the silk cocoon's beauty and the cotton plant's strength, the tints of the morning sky and the deep hues of a midsummer garden, and mixed them all together, to produce Lingette.

A dash of the ancient magic that spun straw into gold seems to have been possessed by Lingette's modern weaver—he has taken cotton yarn and made a fabric that shimmers like silk; that hangs and drapes and clings and feels like silk!

And yet, he has kept for you all of cotton's practical indifference to warm, soapy water, hot irons, hurrying laundresses! Lingette's fine twilled surface was especially made to resist wear and frequent tubbings. Lingette's silk-like finish is permanent—woven into the fabric. It can't wash off!

Lingette is offered in a fairy-like variety of pastel tints, of bright sports colors, and dark shades; plain, self-striped, and printed with dainty flower and bird motifs. There's a pattern and a color for every need—from lingerie to gay over-blouses; from children's frocks to men's pajamas.

Ask for Lingette by name—look for "Lingette" on the selvage of the fabric; in the label of ready-to-wear garments. Only in this way can you be sure of getting Lingette's quality, Lingette's permanently silky finish, Lingette's long-time satisfaction in wear and washing.

Free—Send for booklet of dainty designs for lingerie and other articles that can be made from Lingette. Write us if you cannot find Lingette at your local store.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 27.—Turkey conceded nearly all her claims, cept those to Adrianople and p of Eastern Thrace, in the memor dum which the allied Foreign Mi ters today forwarded to Athens, A gora and Constantinople with a vi to its acceptance as a prelimin peace settlement, revising the tre of Sevres.

The Enos-Midia line in Thrace modified so as to give Turkey m territory on the Bulgarian front but the old Turkish capital of Ad anople is excluded.

Constantinople remains Turk and she retains Armenia, with population under League of Nati protection, but she loses the Ga poli Peninsula and Mesopotamia

The Foreign Ministers give Greek and Turkish belligerents th weeks in which to reply to the p posed terms.

The features of the prelimin to peace proposed to Greece and Turks by the Foreign Ministers a

Perpetual freedom of navigat of the Dardanelles and the Bos rus.

Turkish sovereignty over all
Asia Minor and all of the terri bounded by the Caucasus, Per Mesopotamia and the Mediterran and Aegean Seas.

Protection for Armenians.

The Armenians to be under t protection of the League of Natio but the territory inhabited by th to be under the sovereignty of T key, with an eventual national ho to be found for them by the leag

Adrianople to go to the Gree but a large percentage of Thrace be returned to Turkey.

The peninsula of Gallipoli to to Greece.

The foreign ministers in th memorandum inform the bellig ents that the desire of the allies to re-establish peace and to re-est lish the Turkish nation in the ter tories that are considered belong to it, with Constantinople; to ass the Mussulman population of most equitable regime; to g
Greece compensation for the sac fices she made in the war; to p tect the racial minorities, and prevent further wars between T key and the European Powers.
this the Ministers add:

"The people or the Governm that would reject these propositi through prejudice assumes the r sponsibility for the continuation the conflict."

The conclusions of Premier Po care, Marquis Curzon, the Brit
Foreign Secretary, and Sig. Schanz the Italian Foreign Minister, are b lieved to mark a step toward the s tlement of a question which has be one of the roots of unrest in t Old World. The amicable offer mediation between Turkey a Greece removes the dilemma fac the French of either taking a ho tile attitude toward Turkey or brea ing with the allies, and also remo the cloud created over Anglo-Fren relations by the Angora accord.

Negotiations Might Continue.

Should the Turkish Nationa leaders find the proposed modific tions of the Sevres treaty do not far enough, it is pointed out th nothing has been done at Pa which would stand in the way continuing the negotiations.

The authorities of Constantino have already accepted the armist proposal, made several days ago, a the Angora representatives, wh told of the Foreign Minister's de sion last night, did not hide th feeling of satisfaction.

Proposals to Be Discussed.

In connection with their propo that the straits territory be demi tarized, the Ministers suggested th allied forces on the Gallipoli Pe
